United States Will Aid Allies In Flight Against the Submarine

Negotiations Will Take Place Between the United States, Great Britain and France--Navy and Army Departments Are Buzzing With Preparations--Nothing Will Be Permitted to Stand in the Way.

RECRUITING STIMULATED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

(By Carl D. Groat, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, March 20. — The United States, Great Britain and France will join in guarding the trans-Atlantic shipping lines against German U-boats, if present government plans materialize.

The administration expected to begin to-day the work of informally negotiating with these nations. This probably will be undertaken through the State Department and the British and French embassies here.

With its proposed big fleet of patrol and chaser boats, plus larger navy vessels, the United States will be in a position to offer protection to commerce off the American coast, while Great Britain and France will be expected to reciprocate in the barred zone.

Navy men believe that the submarine menace may be brought directly home.

Navy and army departments are buzzing with preparations.

Nothing will be permitted to stand in the way of hastening navy preparations. The eight hour law has been cast aside and if commandeering is needed it will be undertaken.

The tenseness of international affairs has spurred both army and navy recruiting.

Judge Decides Enemy Aliens Are Barred As Voters

TORONTO, March 20.—The Court of General Sessions recently held in Kitchener (formerly Berlin) decided that aliens of enemy birth cannot be naturalized during the continuance of the war. The names of 246 aliens will therefore be struck from the voters' lists. A number of those applying for naturalization have been residents in this country from 10 to 30 years. A representative of the Citizens League appeared for the applicants, and a representative of the British League opposed their naturalization.

The Judge defined "alien enemies" as "subjects of foreign countries with which Canada is at war. They are without the pale of international consideration and have no rights whatever, and only such privileges as may be tendered to them by indulgence so long as they remain quiet and unobtrusive. They have no standing in our courts," he said, "for the enforcements of rights or redress of grievances; but are here on sufferance only, and liable to internment and imprisonment the moment they show any activity in favour of the enemy."

OBEDIENCE OF THE GERMAN AN INFLUENCE AGAINST REVOLT

Will the Russian revolution have any effect upon the people of Germany? Will it excite them to emulate the transformation in Russia that now appears to possess all the qualities of permanency?

This is a subject of universal speculation in the consideration of which superficial thinkers may be assisted by the New York Times' reminder that "in Germany the spirit of the army is different. They are an instrument of the State, not of the people. Unquestionably obedience is their habit, and if ordered to suppress a riot in Berlin German troops would not make friends with the people as Russian soldiers did in Petrograd.

There is a wrold of difference in the spirit of the people themselves. In the German bosom the aspiration for political liberty has been stilled or extinguished by immemorial acceptance of the Prussian idea that the State is all, the individual one whose whole duty is to obey. That has not been the temper of the intelligent class in Russia. We have clear proof of it in this country. Almost without exception, the Russians who have come here have been hostile to the Imperial Government, their joy at its overthrow is unbounded. Russian newspapers in this country have preached revolution. Fundamentally different is the disposition of the men of German birth or of the German race in America. They have come here by hundreds of thousands, either to escape military servitude or to better their condition. Yet their firm, continuing loyalty to the Hohenzollern master and all his purposes and designs has been amazing, it is one of the wonders of the war. Then, too, there are no native plotters against the Government in Germany; there are no influences of reason and betrayal at work in high Government circles.

In Germany one condition alone favours a revolt of the people. Hunger, the actual lack of food enough to sustain life, could not long be endured. It would lead either to a demand of he people that the Government make peace, or to a voluntary offer of peace terms by the Government itself. Probably it would lead to revolution only if the German people could be made to see that the ruling classes are prolonging the war for no possible victory, which is now hopeless, but chiefly, if not altogether, in their own interest, taking the desperate chance that some break in the Allies' line will provide a way of escape from the worst consequences of defeat. Even that faint hope is now extinguished by the stifling of the counsels of treason in Russia.

AN EXPERT ON COLDS

To treat a cold with weakening physics, alcoholic syrups or drugged pills, may smother the cold but they also reduce the body powers still further and invite more serious sickness.

Scott's Emulsion has always been an expert on colds, because it peculiarly enriches the blood, quickly tones up the forces and strengthens both throat and chest. Try Scott's. Refuse Substitutes.

ROME'S GREAT COLOSSEUM.

The most imposing theater ever erected by mortal hands, a grim house of death, consecrated by blood and tears, the Colosseum stands today a stupendous monument to Roman pride and degradation. Almost a third of a mile in circumference, it towers 157 feet up into the air, the original and monumental "play to the gallery" of popular approval. In 80 A. D. Emperor Titus opened its history with a tremendous inaugural of a hundred days of "games," in which men fought with other men and with wild animals, and no one knows the exact tale of the lives snuffed out on its bloodied sands "to make a Roman holiday."

In the construction of the Colosseum its builders adhered to the then new note of superimposing the three orders—Doric, Ionic and Corinthian—an idea that has exerted a greater influence upon the design of monumental works than any other Roman innovation.

But who thinks of that standing before it today with the golden Italian sunshine glorifying every scar and conjuring back from the dead past vivid spectacles of Roman holidays, full of noise and color, laughter and bloody agonies, or when liquid moonlight transfigures the classic ruin into a magic fabric, where stalk the thin ghosts of saint and vestal, slave and emperor?—National Geographic Magazine.

WHEN PETROLEUM WAS FREE.

That Was Very Early In the History of This Country.

The first reference to the discovery of petroleum in America was contained in a letter written in 1629 by Joseph de la Roche d'Allion, a French missionary working among the Indians. He had crossed the Niagara river and made his way southward through western New York into northern Pennsylvania, where he found a spring from which oil flowed. This oil was highly esteemed by the Indians for medicinal uses.

The letter of the priest was published in 1632 in Sagard's "Histoire du Canada." This oil spring was probably identical with the one described by the Massachusetts Magazine in 1789:

"In the northern part of Pennsylvania there is a creek called Oil creek, which empties into the Allegheny river. It issues from a spring on the top of which floats an oil similar to that called Barbados tar and from which one may gather several gallons a day. The troops sent to guard the western posts halted at the same spring, collected some of the oil and bathed their joints with it. This gave them great relief from the rheumatism with which they were afflicted."—New York World.

Good Old Home-Made Family Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind—Mostly and Cheaply Prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you would hardly have in them all the curative power that lies in this simple "home-made" cough syrup which takes only a few minutes to prepare.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents and gives you 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and sugar syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes that line the throat, chest and bronchial tubes, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, be sure to ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

A 15 YEARS' FIRE

Just think! That is the time through which Mr. H. C. Buckley endured all the fiery torture of itching, burning eczema. His life was a perfect misery until Zam-Buk—the great herbal skin cure—brought complete relief.

Mr. Buckley, who lives at 461 East Broadway, Portland, Oregon, writes:—"For fifteen years I suffered with eczema, and although I tried many so-called 'eczema cures,' nothing seemed capable of dealing with a case like mine. It was not until I had Zam-Buk recommended to me that I began to have hope. This wonderful skin healer soon brought about a change for the better. As I persevered with Zam-Buk the burning sensation got less. I found Zam-Buk wonderfully soothing. Gradually the patches of soreness and the inflammation were reduced, and complete and permanent cure finally resulted. I would strongly advise all afflicted with eczema to give Zam-Buk a trial. It will give them satisfaction. They will not be disappointed."

No skin disease can resist the potent healing forces stored up in Zam-Buk, which is unequalled for old wounds, ulcers, abscesses, bad legs, scalp sores, blood-poisoning, piles, scalds, burns, cuts and all skin injuries. All druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. box.

ZAM-BUK

SUFFERING POLAND.

Canadian Woman Escapes From Martyred Country.

Vivid stories of the sufferings of the people of Poland under the German yoke are told by Mrs. Zucker, daughter of Rabbi I. Rosenberg, of Toronto. Mrs. Zucker and her six-year-old daughter succeeded in getting away from Warsaw in December. They recently arrived in New York, and afterwards journeyed to their home in Hamilton.

"Most of the Warsaw factories are closed," said Mrs. Zucker in an interview, "and many of the manufacturers are working for a living as peddlers and small merchants. All the rich merchants left for Russia before the city was invaded by the Germans. The great majority of the population is starving. A card system is used in doling out the necessities of life. Each person is entitled to seven pounds of bread and twelve pounds of potatoes weekly. Food riots with loss of life occur every day. Most of the restaurants are closed. Thousands of starving people hang around the soup kitchens, struggling for bread and soup once a day. Those fortunate enough to secure a recommendation from the city council get free meals. Others must pay five kopecks (2½c) for a meal.

"Clothing is very scarce. The price of a plain overcoat is 50 Rs. ($25). Bare-bodied people are seen everywhere. Instead of shoes their feet are covered with rags. When the Germans invaded Warsaw nobody could walk on the streets after 9 p.m. Offenders were punished by imprisonment and fined large sums of money."

"The population of Warsaw does not believe in the sincerity of the Teutonic proclamation regarding the establishment of the Polish kingdom," said Mrs. Zucker. "They claim this was only a scheme to secure recruits for the Teutonic armies. Everyone earnestly hopes for the Allies' victory and the time when Poland will come again under Russian rule. All nationalities of Warsaw firmly decided not to enlist in the Polish army unless forced to do so."

Mrs. Zucker had great difficulty in securing permission to leave Poland. She applied, but was refused, owing to the fact that she was going to her husband in Canada, an enemy country. Finally she presented documents showing that her husband had moved from Canada to the United States, and she was then allowed to go. Before her departure, her personal letters were carefully examined and sealed by the German officials. When she left her house she was besieged by many neighbors, men, women, and children, all crying bitterly, and prayed her to inform American Jews about their sufferings. "That was a real funeral," said Mrs. Zucker

As Blind as Love.

As the German army approached Brussels in August, 1914, it was reported that the invaders might shell the city. In a high state of alarm the Chinese minister went to see our minister, Brand Whitlock, to see what Whitlock meant to do in the event of bombardment.

"I do not believe there will be any assault," said Whitlock. "My information is that the authorities will surrender Brussels to avoid any possibility of damage. But if there should be an engagement, and the Germans should use their heavy guns, I shall hoist the flag of my country over this building, and I shall call upon my fellow countrymen to come here for safety and protection. I advise you to do the same thing with regard to your people."

"But, Mr. Whitlock," murmured the Chinaman in his polite but labored English, "the cannon—he has no eyes!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Castle Garden.

Castle Garden was built by the United States in 1807 from the plans of Lieutenant Colonel Jonathan Williams, C. E., and was called Fort Clinton. In 1822 it was ceded to New York city; in 1824 it became a place of amusement and about 1826 got its present name; in 1845 there were Ethiopian minstrels there; in 1847-9 theatrical companies played there; in 1850 Jenny Lind sang there; in 1855 it was closed as a place of amusement, and the commissioner of emigration took it as an emigrant depot; in 1870 it suffered from fire, and on July 9, 1876, it was burned to the ground. It was rebuilt at once. In 1892 the depot was moved to Ellis island, and Castle Garden reverted to the city, which in 1896 opened an aquarium there.

Our First Battleship.

The first American battleship was the old Texas of Spanish-American war fame. She was authorized by congress in 1886 and was completed six years later. The original battleship was little over 300 feet long and had a displacement of 6,315 tons. The present day Texas is 554 feet long and has a tonnage of 27,000 tons. The old Texas ended her days as a target for navy practice.—Exchange.

Eminent Sculptor Passes.

John Houghton Maurice Bonnor of Homefield House, Chiswick, Mal., England, a sculptor who came to Canada several months ago to execute the exterior and interior mural decorations of the new House of Parliament in Ottawa, died on Monday at the home of his brother, Frederick C. D. Bonnor, Newark, N. J. Soon after his arrival in Ottawa he became ill, but it was not until his brother came to investigate that his true condition was learned. Mr. Bonnor was taken to his brother's home and his wife was sent for. She arrived from England, and reached her husband's side less than an hour before he died. Since the war Mr. Bonnor had designed four groups of statuary, known as "Kitchener's War Babies," for which a fund is being raised to make them a perpetual memorial to the late Earl. His body will be cremated and the ashes interred in the family cemetery in Bryngwalis, Llangedwyn, Wales, where five generations of his people are buried.

To Aid the French.

A former Woodstock boy, Dr. Charles White, son of James White, has been appointed to go to France to take charge of all the voluntary relief work of the health service of the French War Department. Dr. White's appointment came from the Boston Committee of French Relief, and he will assume charge of the work of systematizing efforts of the French Government in stamping out tuberculosis among the soldiers in the camps and trenches. Dr. White is at present Medical Director of the Tuberculosis League Hospital in Pittsburg.

Silks, Velvets, and Motors.

Sir Edmund Walker's annual address as President of the Canadian Bank of Commerce was a masterly review of war-time conditions in trade and finance. He spoke of "prosperity beyond anything we have ever known in almost every part of Canada," but emphasized the fact that extravagance is out of place in view of the changed situation which may follow the conclusion of peace. His remark that $20,000,000 left the country last year in payment for motor cars, silks, and velvets constitutes a severe reflection upon the apathy of many people in presence of their country's trials. Millions are being wrongly spent on other luxuries. A large proportion of the population is still asleep as far as the seriousness of the conflict is concerned. The people must save and economize to help in financing, in winning, and in shortening the war. "Thrift for the individual is excellent, but just now that is of minor importance. Thrift for the sake of Canada, thrift for the sake of the Empire, thrift to win the war should be our cry. We shall not fail for men, difficult as enlistment may be. We shall not fail because of inability to make or to procure war supplies. If we fail it will be because we have wasted on unnecessary things the money that would have won the war. The man or woman who works hard at making shells may take much comfort in helping to win the war, but the man or woman who, in addition, saves a part of the present high wages due to the war and buys a war security, or helps a bank to do so, has helped twice, and the second kind of help is the most vital. The manufacturers of the United States will make war supplies for money. We are doing better only if we supply them on credit."

CURIOUS FRENCH DUEL.

When Man and Wife Tried to Settle a Dispute With Swords.

Charles Coypeau, Sieur d'Assouci, a French poet and musician of the seventeenth century, relates in one of his "Adventures" that his father and mother were one day engaged in a discussion upon questions of law when a dispute arose between them with regard to the precise signification and bearing of a provision in Justinian's code with respect to the rights of brothers.

Ultimately the quarrel waxed so furious that the disputants lost all control of themselves, defied each other to single combat and proceeded to settle their difference and determine the mind of the ancient legislator by a fight with swords.

This singular duel took place in their son's presence. Coypeau pere was an advocate by profession and a member of one of the French parliaments. Madame was exceedingly diminutive and had to wear exceptionally high pattens to approach the ordinary stature of women, but she was fierce and domineering in temper. The combat appears to have been a drawn battle, and the sense of Justinian remained as obscure and debatable as ever.

Serving His Country.

A certain public office has been the object of much satire because of the passive nature, as a rule, of the incumbent's duties. In this connection the following extract from Moses Cott Tyler's journal, written in Washington years ago, is interesting:

"President Grant never starts a conversation, but when it is started he often says a neat thing. Last year there was an excursion down the Potomac. He was on board, with his cabinet and a quorum of both houses.

"'Mr. President,' said Mrs. Judd, who sat near him, 'it would be a pretty bad thing to have a great accident happen to this party. Nearly the whole government would be destroyed.'

"'Yes, Mrs. Judd,' assented the president, 'but you observe that the vice president has very prudently stayed at home.'"

Willing to Bear It.

"Well, dearest, I have just asked your father for your hand."

"What did he say?"

"He asked me if I felt capable of assuming a heavy burden."

"And what did you tell him?"

"I told him I would take care of all he would give us."

No Material Handy.

"Mrs. Comeup, can't you give us just a little resume of your travels?"

"I'm awful sorry, but all our boxes of souveneers ain't come home yet."—Baltimore American.

Niagara Falls Wearing Away

THE world-renowned "Horseshoe Fall," at Niagara, is no longer a horseshoe. For years it has been wearing down into an acute angle until the waters at its sides forms cataracts that almost face each other and mingle in a great welter of foam and spray. Moreover, this part of the fall appears to be delivering now a much smaller volume of water than it did a score of years or more ago, as is the testimony of many observers. The responsibility has been almost universally laid upon the diversion of the water for power development. Based on this theory, public opinion has been arrayed against the proposition to divert additional water; and in recent years attention has been directed to schemes for obtaining power from other sources such as the Whirlpool rapids. John Lyell, Harper, a well-known engineer, has just published a pamphlet entitled "The Suicide of the Horseshoe Fall," in which he maintains that the diminution in flow is only apparent, and is due to the changes in the contour of the precipice, the effect of which is to concentrate the flow in the centre so that a smaller proportion is discharged at the sides. We quote from a review of Mr. Harper's pamphlet in Engineering News. Says this paper:

"The visitor at Niagara who views the fall from Goat Island now sees a huge mass of solid green water plunging over the precipice at the toe of the horseshoe, while only a thin veil of water flows over at the sides. It is obvious that with the concentration of the flow in the centre of the stream, erosion there tends continually to become more and more rapid, and the concentration of flow at that point becomes still greater. Mr. Harper says:

"'An entire cessation of the diversion of water from the river for power would not retard the self-destruction of the horseshoe form, but would rather tend to accelerate it. No negative action can preserve the horseshoe, but positive action must be taken with courage and intelligence, and as soon as possible, so that the greatest scenic spectacle in America may not be allowed to commit suicide.

"'It should be the policy of those controlling the falls at Niagara to have constructed in the bed of the river, above the Horseshoe Fall, invisible current deflectors which would make impossible the gathering of the whole river into a deep narrow gorge, and would again deflect the water over to the sides and heels of a re-established horseshoe.

"'This would not only improve the present spectacle, but would cause the whole contour of the fall to wear uniformly, so that coming generations in viewing its beauty may also have before their eyes the emblem of good luck.'

"Mr. Harper further points out that the American Fall, on the eastern side of Goat Island, delivers only five per cent. of the total overflow of the river, yet it forms at least a quarter of the total scenic spectacle. If the flow of the river in the Canadian channel were spread around the whole length of the horseshoe, as it is along the crest of the American Fall, Mr. Harper believes that not more than 35 per cent. of the total discharge of the river so distributed would cover the entire precipice at the Horseshoe Fall with a cascade more than twice as deep as that of the present American Fall, and would produce a scenic effect equal in grandeur and greater in extent than the present fall.

"Mr. Harper is chief engineer of the Hydraulic Power Company of Niagara, and is a member of the American Societies of Mechanical Engineers, Civil Engineers, and Electrical Engineers, and the Electrochemical Society. He makes no suggestion in his pamphlet as to the methods by which the invisible current deflectors which he proposes could be constructed in the bed of the river above the Horseshoe Fall. Those who have visited Niagara and witnessed the wild torrent of water which sweeps down the rapids above the falls can form a conception of the heroic task that would be involved in building any structure in these seething waters which could withstand them.

"The importance of the matter brought forward by Mr. Harper, however, certainly challenges attention. No one will seriously question the desirability of utilizing Niagara's power as a great national or international resource, so far as it can be done without serious interference with its beauty as a spectacle. Even an amateur in hydraulic engineering can see that Mr. Harper's diagnosis of the chief cause of the lessening in beauty of the Horseshoe Fall has every element of probability in its favor; and it is evident that the deterioration of the fall is likely to proceed at an accelerated pace unless something is done to restore the conditions of a century ago."

Moving Too Quickly.

A good story is told regarding a certain medical officer back from the Somme front. Out there, as may well be imagined, hospital stores and accessories are liable to get a trifle mixed on occasion, and one day the P. M. O. in question had this fact brought to his notice in an indirect, but none the less forceful manner. Going his morning round, he put the usual formal question, "Any complaints," to the patients under his charge. "Yes, sir," answered a voice feebly but none the less clearly. "Well, my man, what is it?" he inquired, bending down. "Well, sir, it's like this," explained the badly-wounded soldier, "I don't like to be hustled." And, turning down his sheet he exposed to the P. M. O. a corner marked "The Mortuary."

FUR TRADE SHRINKS.

Due to Growth of Population and Fur Farming.

A hundred years ago, the fur trade might be said to extend over the whole length and width of what is now the Dominion of Canada. Fifty years ago, a large portion of Quebec, of Ontario, of the Maritime Provinces, a considerable section of Manitoba, and a portion of British Columbia had been reclaimed from the wilderness; its quota of furs had fallen off with the advance of civilization, and the territory from which furs were being drawn had been circumscribed to that extent. Yet the supply of furs still kept up. Why? Because increased population, better transportation facilities, greater and more general knowledge of the country, and more highly organized effort on the part of the trading companies, had made smaller the mesh of the trading net, and the country still available as a source of supply for fur was being dragged more carefully and more completely.

To-day, that area is still more circumscribed. The southern half of British Columbia, of Alberta, and of Saskatchewan, practically the whole of Manitoba, and all that portion of Ontario and Quebec which lie south of the height of land, have been taken out of the fur trading area proper. They have gained the stage where, if they are not given over to agricultural, mining, or other industries of civilization, they are in the half-way stage of their existence, neither fish, flesh, fowl, nor good red herring; neither a fur-trading wilderness nor a full-fledged civilization. Their villages are half-store, half-trading post; their inhabitants, half-pioneer-farmers, half-trappers and traders; they can no longer make their living from the fur trade, and they have not yet arrived at the point where the demands of their civilization will enable them to live without it.

It is beyond this area where the real fur trade is to be found. It is this still further circumscribed district that furnishes the raw material for the London fur market — that market which still levies an approximately equal tax to that of years past —but levies it on this restricted fur belt in lieu of, as formerly, the whole of Canada.

It stands to reason, then, that unless the fur-bearing animals are more prolific now than they used to be they must be having a harder fight for life and liberty than they did heretofore; and it is equally patent that they are not succeeding in that fight, since from a large section of country they have practically disappeared, and that from the remaining portion they are being caught in numbers, which show practically no diminution from the records of the time when the hunted area was one-third larger.

Another factor, however, has come into the situation of recent years. Fur farming, once thought to be the idle dream of impracticable theorists, has proved itself to be a commercial possibility. During the past few years fur farms innumerable have been started, enormous amounts of capital have been sunk in the business, and some, at least, of these enterprises have proved and are proving immensely profitable. Fur farming is a business which not everyone can hope to succeed in. It requires special knowledge, special climate, situation, soil, and all kinds of conditions must be carefully watched. It is also largely in the experimental stage. Large numbers of animals may be lost through the slightest deviation from the right plan of handling, and the right plan is still to a certain extent a matter of guess work.

Yet there is no doubt that fur farming has come to stay; that it will increasingly become a source of commercial supply for the fur trade of the world; and it is becoming evident that the fur farm will not always be confined merely to the more valuable classes of fur, that silver fox is not the only kind of fur it would be profitable to farm. But whether the supply of pelts from the fur farms, even under the most promising conditions, will ever enable the trade to overtake the high-water mark of times past, or to stem the gradually decreasing number of animals, is a question that no one familiar with the history of the trade and the manner in which it has been carried on would undertake to answer in the affirmative.

SIMPLE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

Wounded in the Heart.

After being twice wounded in the heart—once by a bullet and again by a dar from Cupid's bow — and the proud possessor of an iron cross, Marcil Belliveau, a Moncton and N. H. A. hockey player, has been invalided home. Belliveau was wounded in the heart at Courcellette in the attack on the famous sugar refinery. He was operated on and made a wonderful recovery. He received the iron cross after a hand-to-hand fight with a German colonel who was wearing it.

Belliveau married the nursing sister who looked after him in hospital. He exhibits the iron cross proudly to friends, and also a prayer book through which the bullet that entered his heart had bored.

A TREE AND A DISEASE.

During the latter decades of the nineteenth century it was a common practice to plant blue gum or eucalyptus trees in districts infected by malarial fever. It was held that the essential oil produced by the leaves combated the harmful vapors rising from the swamps laden with the poison of the disease. The discovery that the malarial germ is introduced into the blood by a mosquito has settled once and for all the origin of the disease.

The theory that the eucalyptus tree neutralized the poison vapors is nonsense, yet the fact remains that where blue gums were freely planted there was always a notable decline in the amount of malaria.

What is the explanation of this circumstance? It has been demonstrated that, of nearly all trees, the eucalyptus absorbs the greatest amount of water. Two seedlings—a blue gum and a plum —were placed with their roots in water, and the height of the water was carefully marked. The plants were kept in a warm atmosphere and examined at the end of twenty-four hours. The little eucalyptus had disposed of four times the water that the plum had been able to take up.

Seeing that blue gums increase in height with great rapidity, often growing many inches a day in a hot position, the amount of moisture taken up increases on a greatly progressive scale. And this is just what brings about the downfall of the malarial mosquito. To complete its life cycle it is necessary that this insect should pass its larval stage in pools of water. With the coming of the eucalypti these pools and indeed all marshy places disappear, the breeding spots of the mosquitoes are gone, and in time the insects vanish altogether.

Insect Luminosity.

Luminosity is normal in the well known luminous beetles, including the various fireflies and glowworms, and results naturally from the oxidation of some organic secretion. Other insects are luminous in rare instances. Rev. J. Holroyde, vicar of Fatchum, England, lately noted luminous moth larvae, similar to those observed once or twice previously, and the chironomous—a kind of gnat—and the "lantern beetles" of South America are among the creatures sometimes lighted up. The occasional luminosity has been attributed to disease or decomposition from bacterial infection.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyper-acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydro-chloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heart-burn. Flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

A NATION GOING DRY

RAPID SPREAD OF PROHIBITION IN THE DOMINION.

Has Spread From the Pacific to the Atlantic Like Wild Fire and in Most of the Provinces the People Voted for the Measure by Very Substantial Majorities, Showing Overwhelming Change of Sentiment.

DEMON RUM is fighting for his life in Canada to-day, and the Dominion has gripped him by the throat with such force that his death seems to many of our editors to be inevitable. During the year 1916 a great prohibition wave swept over Canada from west to east and has leaped on to the neighboring colony of Newfoundland. In reviewing this aspect of the year's work, The Winnipeg (Manitoba) Free Press writes:

"The movement has blazed across Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific like a prairie-fire, leaving but one or two oases, which at any moment may be visited by the cleansing element.

"Saskatchewan blazed the trail in 1915. In the summer of that year the Government closed every bar in the province and took over itself the wholesale stores, greatly reducing their number. It was originally provided that a referendum on the dispensary, or wholesale-store system, should be taken in 1919. But the system did not possess vitality enough to survive more than a year and a half. At the municipal elections of last year several of them were voted out of existence, and so strong was the temperance sentiment in the province that the Government decided to bring in the referendum in 1916 instead of three years later. The result was that on December 11 last, the remaining score of dispensaries went out of existence by a vote of seven to one.

"Manitoba came next. The citizens of the province, by a vote of two to one, decided that they could get along better without liquor-licenses of any kind. The vote was taken on March 13, 1916, and on June 1 following Manitoba was a 'dry' province. Just one month later prohibition came into effect in Alberta, though the electors of the foot-hills province had a year previously voted out the liquor-traffic by a large majority."

In British Columbia the movement was attended by one unique feature:

"A referendum on prohibition was taken in the coast province last September and carried by what seemed a safe majority. However, a provision for a soldiers' vote was attached to the referendum, and, extraordinary as this may appear, the voting has been proceeding among the British Columbia soldiers ever since."

Since The Free Press wrote the returns have come in, and the soldiers in their wet trenches have voted "dry" by a substantial majority. In Quebec, where 85 per cent. of the municipalities were under local option, a modified form of prohibition, patterned on the Gothenburg plan, has been introduced, a measure which, says The Montreal Star, "tried to satisfy everybody and has pleased no one." The Free Press continues:

"The Ontario Government has introduced provincial-wide prohibition by means of legislative enactment. On September 16 last all hotel and wholesale licenses went out of existence, but the legislation provides for a referendum on the question of re-introducing the traffic, to be held in June, 1919.

"The last citadel of the traffic in the maritime provinces, namely, the city of Halifax, fell to the temperance forces last fall.

"One must not forget that on the 14th of this month (January) representatives of the temperance organizations of all the provinces conferred with the Dominion Government at Ottawa and asked for Federal legislation to supplement the measures taken by the provincial legislatures against the liquor-traffic. Specifically the delegation asked for Federal prohibition of the manufacture or importation into Canada of intoxicating liquor as a beverage, or, as an alternative, that a referendum be taken next June on national prohibition as a war-measure."

Britain's oldest colony went on the water-wagon on the first of January. At midnight the whole island of Newfoundland went dry. A prohibition act, becoming effective, stops the importation, manufacture, or sale of intoxicating liquors of every kind within the colony. After this it will be impossible to obtain any alcoholic compound within the colony, except for medicinal, manufacturing, or sacramental purposes; and in order to prevent evasion of the law a long list of patent medicines has been placed under the ban.

Was Anaemic
FOR OVER A YEAR

Anaemia, or blood turning to water, is caused by the heart becoming deranged, and if the heart becomes weakened it cannot pump the blood as it should. As a result the blood becomes impoverished, and it loses its nourishing qualities. The face becomes pale and thin, and the lips bloodless. There is a weakness, tiredness and loss of weight.

When those suffering from thin or watery blood start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they can see a change from the outset.

Every dose introduces into the blood those vital elements necessary to make it rich and red. The pale cheeks take on the rosy hue of health, the weight increases, and the whole being thrills with a new life.

Mrs. R. J. Grey, Fredericton, N. B., writes: "When I was a girl working at general house work I overtaxed my strength and became completely run down. For over a year I was very bad with anaemia. A friend told me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I got a box and when it was done I decided to get six more. When I had taken them I gained not only in strength, but in flesh and colour, and best of all was good health."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box; three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Peterboro People Tell Their Experience With Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Hundreds have been cured of nervous disorders right here in Peterboro and thousands are putting this great restorative to the test. Everywhere you hear people talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and you will find in this paper daily reports of cures effected. Enquire into these cases, ask your friends and neighbors about it, and try out this food cure for yourself. It is nature's way of building up a run down system.

CHILD'S NERVES TWITCHED

Mrs. M. E. Robson, 170 Dublin street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "When about the age of 14 or 15, my daughter was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. She had a very poor appetite, lost all her color, and at times had a twitching of the nerves in her limbs. I secured some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and gave her a treatment, using five or six boxes. The results were splendid, entirely curing her of her nervous trouble and restoring her appetite. I find Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a splendid spring tonic.

FREQUENT HEADACHES.

Mrs. Richard Swailes, 257 Princess street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Some three years ago, after first coming to Peterborough, I became troubled with nervousness, could not sleep well nor eat anything. I also had frequent headaches and pains in my back. I read in the papers and your pamphlets, of similar cases being cured by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so decided to give them a trial. I secured some, and found that it was just what I required. I took about five or six boxes in all, and am now feeling fine. I sleep and eat well, and am not nervous like I used to be. I don't think I ever felt better in my life.

I always keep Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the house, and find them very useful as a home remedy for any member of the family. But I think it is necessary for a person using them to give them a good trial, not giving up at one box, but take three or four, before they really can judge. I have recommended this medicine to many of my friends and neighbours."

COULD NOT SLEEP.

Mr. George Lee, 767 Water street, Peterborough, Ont. writes: "I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food some time ago when I was in a run-down condition, and found them to be just what I required to build up my system. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food also worked wonders for my wife. She had been suffering from nervousness and could not get a good night's rest. She would awake up at different times during the night, sometimes jumping right out of the bed. She tried doctors medicine without success and finally commenced Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The first box helped a little, the second box benefitted her more, so she kept on taking them until she grew strong and healthy. She has recommended this treatment to many of her neighbours."

LANGUID FEELINGS

Mrs. J. Mesley, 490 George street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago, I was in a nervous, run-down condition—had no ambition, only a sort of languid feeling. My condition, no doubt, was due to the fact that I go out nursing at different times, and after some severe cases I found my system in a run-down condition. Some of my friends advised me to take some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I procured a box and commenced using them. I continued this treatment until I was greatly benefitted, and am now much better.

My husband also finds great benefit from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and the Linseed and Turpentine. I have advised many of my friends to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and they have received good results also."

PALPITATION OF HEART

Mrs. J. D. Craig, 45 McDonnel street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Several years ago when my family were small. I become run-down and weak and was bothered with palpitation of the heart. I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found such good results that I continued the treatment until I had taken about four or five boxes. It helped me and made me feel better afterward.

Since then, when I feel that I need a tonic, I take two or three boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, finding the same good results each time. I can also speak highly of your Kidney-Liver Pills. I have great confidence in the use of Dr. Chase's medicines as family remedies, and we always keep some of them in the house."

SEVERE HEADACHES

Miss Catharine Scully, 517 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Some time ago I was suffering from a run-down condition of the system. I was nervous, could not sleep, and lost my appetite. I used to have severe headaches that became almost unbearable. I tried several remedies and doctor's medicine as well, but they did not help me. Finally I became so weakened in condition that I was scarcely able to walk. It was then that I first tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I used one box, and detected an improvement, so I continued the treatment until cured. I am in good health now, can eat and sleep well, and do not have those terrible headaches. I give the credit entirely to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say it is a splendid remedy. If anyone suffering as I did would only try this treatment, I know they would not be sorry."

NERVOUS HEADACHES

Mrs. J. Riedeman, 165 Adeline street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with nervous headaches, which, at times were so severe that I could not do my work. I also suffered from indigestion and pains in the back. From reading in the news papers of the benefits other people were deriving from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I was encouraged to try it. I began using them, finding good results from the beginning, so I continued the treatment until I obtained great benefit. Now I do not have the nervous headaches so frequently or so severe. My appetite is much better, and in fact I am better in many respects. I would not wish to be without Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the house now. I have recommended this treatment to many of my friends, who also find good results from their use.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Mrs. May Sandbach, 334 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I have suffered from nervous prostration, and used to have melancholy spells. Last fall I was suffering from nervous debility and anaemia. I tried all kinds of remedies and herbs without getting any relief. I had also tried doctors—not only Canadian, but English—and had taken treatment in English hospitals; but all to no use. I received no benefit. I was finally induced to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and had not been taking it for more than three days before I could see a change for the better. I continued the treatment until I had taken four or five boxes. I feel greatly benefitted, and am so much better that I feel proud of myself. I have been benefitted to such an extent that I am pleased of this opportunity to let others know, and anyone that wishes to write me may do so."

BETTER STEEL HELMETS

Describing the British steel helmet, Dr. C. W. Saleeby says that instead of the straight front of the French helmet it has a sloping front which will deflect even machine gun and rifle bullets. Protection against shock is secured by an inside cap, all round which are hollow rubber studs, and between every two studs the air gets in, thus obviating any need for a ventilation hole at the top, as in the French helmet, which is a weakness. "There is going to be attached to thishelmet," continues Dr. Saleeby, "something of which I cannot tell you anything, but which will avert nine out of ten cases of blindness.

"I have got my way," Dr. Saleeby further says, "about heart armor for our soldiers. The military authorities have consented to try whether something cannot be devised, and we have now been officially informed they are going to do it. Perfectly wonderful things in the way of shields have been done already with very simple means. Every soldier ought to have a body shield. Already our head cases are disappearing from the hospitals. That is the helmet. I hope we may be able to say the same in regard to shrapnel wounds to the chest and upper part of the abdomen."

CASTE CURES OUTCASTS

Sepoys Retrieved Honor at High Price in Battle

Edmund Candler writes from Mesopotamia: There have been occasions when ritual and caste-exclusiveness have been turned to disciplinary uses. There was a company of Rajputs somewhere in the neighborhood of Suez which contained a draft of very raw recruits. Four were holding a picket on the east bank of the canal when they lost their heads. One blazed off at a shadow. A panic set in and all four threw down their rifles, bolted as if the devil were behind them, and were only held up by the barbed wire of their own outpost.

The officer commanding and the adjutant were considering how to deal with them when the Subadar major entered the orderly room. The man was a veteran, with a double row of ribbons on his breast, and he had never let the regiment down in all his service. He begged as a special favor that Rajput officers should be permitted to wipe out the stain. "Leave it to us, Sahib," he said; "we will put such an indignity on them that there will not be a jiwan in the regiment who will shrink from bahadri (brave deeds) again."

The colonel saw the wisdom of this. So the Indian officers of the regiment were deputed to deal with the case themselves. The jiwans were tapped on the head with a slipper, the last ignominy that can befall a Rajput. After such disgrace they could not appear the chauka and mess with their caste companions. That is to say, they were socially excommunicated until their honor was retrieved. For nearly eighteen months they lit their outcast fire and took their meals apart at a measured distance from the chauka, at such a distance that no ray of contamination could proceed from them to it. They were still under the ban when the regiment left Egypt for Mesopotamia. When they went into action with the relieving column before Kut all four rehabilitated themselves. Two died honorably, one was awarded the Indian Order of Merit, and the fourth was promoted.

Actors at Drill

An Englishman writes: I was at a dinner the other day given in honor of the Artists' Rifles, and Sir J. Forbes-Robertson spoke in affectionate terms of his own days in the famous corps. "I was a very humble member of the Artists' Corps," he said. "but I rose to the rank of sergeant. I remember Victor Horsley as a private, and how I, as sergeant, reprimanded him for wearing his watch-chain outside his tunic. We used to drill in Richmond Park, and actors like myself bolted on Saturday afternoons to get back to town for the evening performance."

I am perfectly sure that the best of the men at the front will return with the reforming spirit, with the determination that many injustices thought to be invincible shall be set right.—Mr. A. E. Jowett.

"ENGLAND AND INDIA WATCH"—TOWNSHEND

Thrilling Message From General to His Men at Kut When Hopes Were Not Yet Gone

The following order from General Townshend has come to light and will show what spirit inspired the defenders in the war's greatest siege: "I am confidently expecting to be relieved in the first half of the month of February. Our duty stands out plain and simple. It is our duty to our Empire, to our beloved King and country to stand here and hold up the Turkish advance, as we are doing now, and with the help of all, heart and soul with me together, we will make this defense to be remembered in history as a glorious one. All in England and India are watching us now, and are proud of the splendid courage and devotion you have shown, and I tell you: Let all remember the glorious defence of Plevna, for that is what is in my mind.

"I am absolutely calm and confident as to the result. The Turk, though good behind a trench, is of little value in the attack. They have tried it once, and their losses in one night in their attempt at the fort alone were 2,000. I have done my duty. You know the result, and whether I was right or not your names will go down to history as the heroes of Ctesiphon, for heroes you have proved yourselves in that battle.

"From the Heart"

"I perhaps by right should not have told you of the above, but I feel I owe it to you all to speak straight and openly and to take you into my confidence, for, God knows, I felt our heavy losses and the suffering of my poor, brave wounded, and shall remember it as long as I live, and I may truly say no general I know of has been more loyally obeyed and served than I have been while in command of the 6th Division.

"These words are long, I am afraid, but I speak straight from the heart, and you will see that I have thrown all officialdom overboard. We will succeed, mark my word. But save your ammunition as if it were gold. (Signed) Charles Townshend, Major-General commanding 6th Division, January 26, 1916."

CHAPLAIN'S PRISONERS

Persuaded 450 Germans to Surrender to 18 Irishmen

The exploit of a chaplain who, with eighteen enthusiastic Irishmen, brought in "450 very thankful, if somewhat dejected, Germans," was referred to by Sir Philip Sassoon in a speech at Folkestone. It is stated that a party of the Dublin Fusiliers, accompanied by the padre, when returning from a reconnoitring expedition, were assailed by rifle fire from a wood where it was known the enemy were entrenched. They immediately sought the refuge of shell holes, and from there fired a round of shots at the wood. Evidently the fire proved effective, for three Germans emerged from the wood with their hands held up in token of surrender.

The chaplain advanced to meet the trio, and informed them that one of their number could return to the wood and give the remaining Germans the assurance that their lives would be spared if they surrendered. The German who had been deputed to give the message to his compatriots promptly left, but failed to return. The chaplain decided to enter the wood and see the officer in charge of the enemy. He did so, and the result of his enterprise was that 450 Germans offered to surrender.

They emerged from the thicket, but when confronted with only 18 Fusiliers—and not an entire battalion, as they probably surmised—a number of them sought to return to the wood, with the obvious intention of renewing the combat. The "Dubs," however, sent a bullet or two in the direction of the retreating soldiers and soon dispelled all notions of retaliation. It is stated that one of the German officers approached the priest and asked that he might be spared the horrors of torture. At the same time he significantly pointed to a bundle of banknotes which he held in his extended hand. He received the apt retort "We are British soldiers, sir, not thieves."

PUGILIST APPEALED

Flyweight Jimmy Wilde Did Not Want Army Service

Jimmy Wilde, the flyweight boxing champion, who was ordered to join the army gymnastic staff at Aldershot, was given leave to appeal by the Rhondda Recruiting Tribunal, as he had not come so within the prescribed period. In making the application Wilde said that he had worked underground for ten years, and thought he could do more useful work there. He had been twice medically rejected and had his father, two sisters, and two brothers partially dependent upon him.

The Chairman: "Could you not do your boxing in the army?"

Wilde: "No, I think not."

The Chairman: "Don't get nervous. You fighting men should be fighting the battles of your country."

Wilde: "Not with a 70-pound penalty on your back." (Wilde's weight is little more than 98 pounds).

Town Girls on Farms

With reference to the statement that the Wiltshire War Agricultural Committee had decided to close their school for girl farmworkers, Mrs. H. P. Rogers, of Potterne, Devizes, the superintendent, writes that the school concerned, the Shaw Farm Scheme, was a private experiment, and it has been closed not on account of the results attained, which have been by no means disheartening, but by reason of the isolated position of the farm. Out of 23 girls 19 have done well, 4 were found unsuitable, and 7 left, finding farm work too hard or uncongenial.

Wright, who gained one of the earliest V.C.s in the war for gallantry at Mons. Mrs. Vallentin, for her son, Captain J. F. Vallentin, for bravery at Zillebeke in November, 1914.

Mr. John Liddell, for his son, Captain J. A. Liddell, who, though severely wounded, brought his damaged aeroplane back after it had dropped nearly 3,000 feet. Major Charles Turner, for his son, 2nd Lieutenant A. B. Turner, aged twenty-two, who led a bombing attack near Vermelles. Mr. William Williams, for his son, Seaman W. C. GREECE AND ITALY

Serbia and Italy to Gain at Expense of Athens

An Italian publicist writes: The Greek problem has been one of the many deplorable results of the blind policy of years past, when Germany and Austria-Hungary, France and England distrusted Italy and helped Pan Hellenism as a spoke in the wheels of the Italian chariot. The behavior of the King and the people of Greece in the present war has caused the last thick and sticky scales to fall from the eyes of England and France, and at the Conference of Rome finally prompted them to realize that what Italy had always told them was too true. Greece has forfeited her right to territorial expansion. While part of what she would have received, had she been pro-ally, will be lost to Greece (the vilayet of Smyrna), Salonika, which is no more Greek than Bulgar, Serbian, Turkish, or Hebrew, must go to Serbia, and thus afford her (besides the commercial ports of lower Dalmatia that she will get at the end of the war) the full-fledged commercial and military port which she needs for the important role that she is entitled to play in the Balkans. This is another lie given to those who have proclaimed to the world that Italian expansion means the slavery of the Serbian people.

PAIN IN CHEST

SPASMODIC COUGHING

Many people when they contract a cold do not pay any attention to it, thinking perhaps it will pass away in a day or two. This is a mistake for before they know it, it has settled on the lungs.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that on the first sign of a cough or cold it must be gotten rid of immediately, otherwise it may cause years of suffering from some serious lung trouble.

Mr. A. George, 30 Blevin's Place, Toronto, Ont., writes: "Having greatly benefitted from your remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I take the liberty to write you a few words about the effect of that wonderful syrup. Two years ago I caught a severe cold followed by a spasmodic cough and pain in my chest. I was treated by many doctors but without any benefit, and also took many proprietory medicines which all failed to cure. One of my friends recommended Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after using three bottles I was completely cured. I recommend it to anyone as a God-sent remedy."

A Lucky Prisoner.

Pte. F. Mesley, who comes from Sarissourt, a suburb of Toronto, has had an odd career since he was taken prisoner by the Germans some months ago. Pte. Mesley is an ambitious youth, and while living in the Hun prison camp he learned to speak French and German. He made such rapid progress while recovering from his wounds in a hospital that the captors used him as an interpreter. Pte. Mesley was later interned in Switzerland, and there he learned that he could go to a Swiss college if he was able to pass the required examinations. He did so, and is now taking a course in French, German, Spanish, as well as several commercial subjects under Swiss teachers. Although a prisoner of war, he is by no means wasting his time.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Where the Pluck Lay

A Story of Old Virginia

By F. A. MITCHEL

The romance period in America is centered in old Virginia. Among the various elements of that colony were certain persons of rank who had been granted privileges by the British sovereign. There were younger sons of English families of ancient lineage who, having no fortune in the old world, had come to the new to find one.

In those days every man wore a sword at his side, and when a father sent his son out into the world his principal instruction was that he should protect his honor with it to the last drop of his blood.

During the first half of the nineteenth century the aristocratic classes of Virginia were in their prime, though the war between the states which was to impoverish them was impending. Men had ceased to wear swords, the impulse to use them having somewhat abated. But the code duello was still considered the proper tribunal for gentlemen to settle their disputes.

One of the principal tobacco planters in Virginia at the opening of the nineteenth century was Major Rufus Hardesty, whose military title—a brevet—had been conferred upon him at the siege of Yorktown, where as a young subaltern he had distinguished himself. In those days the state was considered superior to the nation, and when Major Hardesty went abroad he registered his name at a London hotel as from Virginia.

The major's only child was a daughter, whom his loyalty to his state induced him to name Virginia. Miss Hardesty was a typical girl of her period. There was a disposition among southern girls in those days to consider themselves as objects to be sought and contended for by their suitors, and Virginia especially objected to giving herself to any man who had not proved his prowess in his efforts to obtain her favor.

One reason for the pride in state instead of nation in those days was that there was little passing from one state to another. Especially was this true of transitions between the north and the south. In that region in which Major Hardesty's plantation was situated there was but one resident from the north, Henry Brainard, who, having served several years in the United States army at a Virginia post, had resigned to follow the occupation of most Virginia gentlemen—the raising of tobacco.

Brainard was thirty-five years of age when Virginia Hardesty was nineteen. He was a reserved man, somewhat angular in his appearance, stiff in manner and movement. He was as old fashioned as a flint lock musket would be at the present day of rapid fire arms. What induced such a man to fall in love with a flirt like Virginia Hardesty can only be accounted for on the theory that like loves unlike.

Virginia had known Brainard some time before she was able to interpret his treatment of her as being caused by love. Brainard considered himself altogether too old for such a child, and this greatly intensified his embarrassment toward her. When she made up her mind that his strange treatment of her meant love she was much amused and foresaw much pleasure in torturing him. But Brainard was no fool and, seeing that the coquette was playing with him as a cat would play with a mouse, ceased his visits to her father's plantation.

Virginia would have attempted to bring him back to tantalize him further had she not at the time been absorbed in a new flame. Arthur Ringold, the son of a neighboring planter, returned from a sojourn in England, where he had been enrolled as a student at Oxford. He had acquired the tastes and manners of an English swell and by no means relished his return to the primitive state of Virginia. He was somewhat consoled by favorable notice from Miss Hardesty.

It was not long before she had so far blinded him to her faults as to secure a proposal from him. That a man for whom there was nothing in Virginia good enough should have offered himself to her flattered her, and she was inclined to accept him; but, as has been said, she would accept no man who was not willing to take great risks for her.

Just how Virginia made it apparent to Ringold that he would have to fight for her does not appear. It is probable that she talked a great deal about fighting and her admiration for bravery. At any rate, it was not long after his proposal to her that he was in for a settlement of a difficulty under the code. At the coffee house in Williamsburg where gentlemen were wont to meet to drink and smoke, not to mention gambling, his disparagement of America in favor of England excited the resentment of one Thibadeaux, a man of French extraction. An altercation ensued, and Ringold challenged Thibadeaux. It may be that the latter drew the former into the affair purposely, for Thibadeaux was one of half a dozen men who were ambitions for Virginia Hardesty's favor. He had often met Ringold at the Hardesty manor house and had been made cognizant by Virginia of the fact that she preferred Ringold to himself.

Thibadeaux was a newcomer to Virginia, and little was known of him. But the challenge had no sooner passed than one who was present reported that he was a skilled shot and fencer, had been "out" a number of times and had usually killed his opponent. This caused a flutter among Ringold's friends and was especially unpalatable to Ringold himself.

The report was not long in reaching Virginia. She had heard of the altercation and was quite taken aback at what she considered solely the consequence of her own action. When she heard that Thibadeaux was an expert at arms she was terror stricken. The prospect of being the cause of the elimination of the man she was thinking of accepting for a husband was dreadful. She sent for Ringold, took back all she had said about admiring bravery and asked him to withdraw from the quarrel.

Ringold told her that she had nothing to do with it and he could not withdraw without being considered a poltroon and a coward. Nevertheless he showed by his manner that he would gladly withdraw, having no stomach for being sacrificed by an expert. Virginia offered to ask Thibadeaux to accept an apology, but Ringold convinced her that his doing so would put him in a worse position than before.

Ringold endeavored to gain time, hoping that some arrangement might be made to let him out of the affair. He succeeded in having the meeting put off for twenty-four hours after it had been appointed. The evening after the fracas occurred Major Brainard strolled into the tavern, sat down at a table and called for a julep. Thibadeaux and a couple of friends were at another table.

"Pardon me, monsieur," said Brainard to Thibadeaux. "You do not seem to remember me."

"I confess I do not," replied Thibadeaux.

"Let me refresh your memory. Twelve years ago I was on duty with the army at New Orleans. At a ball you purposely insulted me. I challenged you. We met in a wood near the city where such affairs are settled. You fired before the signal and left me bleeding on the ground, hastening away, excusing yourself by saying that you were anxious to avoid the police."

"When you say I fired before the signal you lie!"

"To give a gentleman the lie calls for satisfaction. This time I shall be better prepared."

"Tomorrow morning I have another affair on hand, after which I will accommodate you."

"In that case you are the challenger. I dare say your adversary can be induced to give me first place."

Thibadeaux could not very well object to this, and a messenger was dispatched to Ringold to ask him if he would step aside for another. Ringold, thinking that he might appear brave without risking anything, demurred, whereupon Brainard called upon him and represented to him that, having been challenged by Thibadeaux, Thibadeaux had a right to withdraw the challenge until after another encounter. Ringold, who was really much relieved at the prospect of not having to fight, hoping that Thibadeaux would be prevented from killing him by being killed himself, gave what he endeavored to make appear a reluctant consent.

Brainard having thus paved the way for himself, a meeting was arranged between him and Thibadeaux. The latter had not willingly acquiesced in the new arrangement, for he had hoped to put Ringold in an unpleasant position without running any great risk. He knew a coward, or thought he did, and fancied that Ringold would show the white feather at the last moment. If not, Thibadeaux counted on effecting a compromise without detracting from his own reputation.

Ringold could not but suspect that Brainard had some reason for his action, and that reason was to step in between him and death. Ringold sent a note to Virginia Hardesty informing her that in his affair with Thibadeaux one had given place to another. If Thibadeaux was not too badly hit in his first encounter Ringold would meet him after it was finished.

When the clock struck the appointed hour the next morning Brainard was on the ground. Ringold was there, but Thibadeaux did not appear. After waiting some time for him the others went away.

That was the last that was seen of Thibadeaux in Virginia. Nor was he ever heard of afterward, though several holders of his I. O. U.'s tried hard to find him.

No engagement between Virginia Hardesty and Arthur Ringold took place. Soon after Thibadeaux's disappearance Major Brainard received an anonymous bouquet of flowers. Then one day he and Virginia Hardesty met at a hunt. This was the beginning of a different treatment by her of her uncouth suitor. At the hunt ball at the end of the season their engagement was announced.

When the whole story came out it appeared that Major Brainard had recognized his former enemy as soon as he appeared in Williamsburg. Then Brainard's neighbors began to hear shots fired in the garret of his house and wondered what they meant. No one knew that the ex-soldier was making an expert of himself with the pistol in order to meet his former antagonist. The matter was precipitated by his hearing that Thibadeaux was about to make a victim of the man he had reason to believe was to win Virginia Hardesty.

Brainard became a prominent citizen of Virginia, and though when the war with Mexico came on he was somewhat advanced in age he commanded a regiment.

KILLS PAIN

History of the Word "Telegram."

In the reminiscences of Frederick Seward, son of William H. Seward, he tells of the day in the office of the Albany Evening Journal, edited by Thurlow Weed, the political Warwick of his time, when the word "telegram" was first used in that paper. Indeed it is intimated that the word was there coined by one E. P. Smith and soon taken up and used generally in England as well as in the United States. To pronounce on the validity of this claim, who is competent? But it is always interesting to get a side light on the paternity of a word.—Christian Science Monitor.

The Surprise.

"Learn to cook, darling, and I'll give you a surprise," said a tightwad to his wife.

She took a six months' cooking course and then brought home her diploma proudly. She could now cook like an angel.

"Bring on my surprise," she said.

"This is it," said her husband, sniffing, and he rang for the cook and discharged her then and there.

PESTS THAT LIVE ON PESTS.

Tiny Scorpion-like Crabs a Deadly Foe to Houseflies.

To the naturalist or to any one accustomed to observe nature closely the fact is apparent that the problems of existence are proportionately the same in every form or stratum of life. Even the common housefly, which seemingly has nothing else to do but to crawl lazily over whatever is left uncovered and then go happily on its way, doing its best to bring about an affiliation between the clean and the unclean, occasionally meets its Nemesis in the form of a tiny crablike creature which attaches itself to the fly's legs.

These little creatures are known to the scientists as pseudo scorpions, or chelifers, says the Popular Science Monthly. They may sometimes be found between the leaves of old books that have stood unused for a long time and also beneath the bark of trees and in mosses.

Although they are called false scorpions, they resemble the true scorpion closely in general structure except for their minute size. But they have no poison gland as the true scorpions have. They attach themselves to other insects also, but they seem to be the special pest of the houseflies. Scientists suppose that they seize the fly's leg and hold on until the fly dies, either worried or frightened to death by the undesirable presence. When the fly is dead the little creature feeds on the body.

TRACING A CRIMINAL.

The Most Expert Will Leave Some Mark That Betrays Him.

Successful criminals nearly always specialize in their work, and it is owing to this fact that detectives in many cases are able to track them down, says the Philadelphia Ledger. Not only do criminals make a practice of committing one particular style of crime, but the methods professional crooks employ are practically always on the same plan.

One burglar, for instance, will always enter through the fanlight over the front door of a shop, another by breaking in at the back. Most burglars, too, will continually repeat a burglary in the same neighborhood.

It is by carefully observing and noting the special systems notorious crooks adopt that detectives can often effect their arrests. Many a time a burglary has occurred and the criminal vanished, leaving apparently no marks by which he could be traced, and police officials have been able to produce him in court within a few days, to the utter astonishment of all concerned.

It does not matter how subtle or careful a criminal may be, he always leaves some betraying sign behind for the well informed detective to act upon.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. TOLD OF FAKE ZEPP. RAIDS.

LONDON, March 20. — At the Thames police court John Robertshaw, an American citizen and a fireman, was charged with having in his possession a letter for transmission otherwise than through the post.

He arrived last Sunday on a Norwegian ship laden with grain for Spain. The officer of the customs questioned the prisoner, who produced the letter and said he was going to post it when he reached Spain. The letter contained false reports and exaggerations and referred to Zeppelin raids that had never taken place. The prisoner was sentenced to three months imprisonment.

Picturesque Character Dead.

James Duckworth, known as "the old miser of Snelgrove," is dead, and his remains were taken to their last resting place at Glen Williams a few days ago. The old fellow was born on the farm where he died, eighty years ago, and was found dead in his bed one bitterly cold January morning. The old man's sister died some years ago, and her bed remains still in the same condition as when she left it. His brother James' couch had also been left untouched for many years in the lonely brick house, while his own old-fashioned canopied bed was the only piece of furniture adorning the miser's private apartment with its thickly cobwebbed ceiling. When Chief Constable Herkes, of Brampton, investigated, the mattress of the bed crumbled under his hands as he tried to turn it over, while he came upon an account book, containing nearly $800 in notes, many of them dating as far back as 1870, and quite fresh. A bank book showing $39,600 to the old man's credit in the Dominion Bank was found under the mattress. Scotch newspapers were scattered by the side of the bed, and in an old box, among screws and nails and pieces of string were found several mortgages, indicating that the deceased must have been worth $100,000 at least. His 250-acre farm, five miles west of Brampton, has not been touched by the plough for 20 years or more.

Fighting Boy Scouts.

At a conservative estimate, between 3,500 and 5,000 Canadian ex-Boy Scouts are on active service, H. G. Hammond, Provincial Secretary of the Boy Scouts, recently stated. Mr. Hammond has just returned from a trip to England and France as representative of the Canadian General Council and saw scouts—and ex-scouts working in England and fighting in France, under all conditions. They are doing a wonderful work in England in the Government office and department, and as guards on the east coast of England. "Don't forget it was a sea scout," said Mr. Hammond, "who gave the first warning of the presence of German warships off Scarboro." Mr. Hammond considers the Canadian women in England are doing splendid work, but he does not think anyone should go to England unless resolved to work, for there is lots to be done. "I can't think though that any Canadian woman goes over there without that resolve," he said.

Raising Geese.

The raising of geese was a profitable occupation of farming in England years ago, and some farmers had flocks of 8,000 or 10,000. Each goose produced a shilling's worth of feathers every year and quills to the value of threepence. The quills were used for pens.

An Investment in Junk.

The Pacific Mail purchased seven vessels eighteen months ago at a cost of about $1,250,000. One of this lot had been in service for twenty years, and it was planned to discard it as soon as possible and to replace it with a larger, up-to-date boat. This vessel was carried on the books of the purchaser at $80,000, and because of the shortage of ocean tonnage was put back into service to earn its keep. It has since turned in to the owners profits amounting to more than $400,000, and it has recently been sold to another line for $778,000. It is not worth anything like that sum except under the extraordinary conditions which now prevail, but it will be put into the Atlantic, trade carrying munitions, and if lucky enough to survive a few round trips will repay the new owners even at the exorbitant price paid. On this basis the earning possibilities of the tonnage tied up in New York harbour almost stagger the imagination.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S GATHERED SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

Even though we cannot all go to sunny Florida, as do those of wealth and leisure, we can rejoice in the knowledge that those who do go really give us the advance styles for spring, and even as the snow lies on the ground we can go to the shops for suitable materials and get busy making our new spring clothes.

Perhaps a skirt is all that you need for a while, and of course you want a choice model. In that case look at the model picture and do not miss the opportunity to have one just like it. The garment is cut in four gores and gathered on a raised waistline. A plait at each side of the front and back gives the "lines" registered as the season's smartest. Twice blessed by fashion is the belt with the ends buttoning to the front sides. The trimming pockets are personal matters for you to decide upon.

This model may be reproduced in any material on the fashionable list; among them satin, silk, serge, woollen novelty goods, crêpe, charmeuse, voile and such will be found. The pattern is the all-round best way of handling the dress problem in this day of high prices.

The skirt pattern No. 8,168 cuts in sizes 24 to 32 waist. To make in size 24 requires 5 yards of 36 inch material, or with pockets 5⅝ yards.

To obtain the pattern, send to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

GERMANY'S UNHOLY MISSION IN INDIA

Exposure of Abominable Methods by a Native Writer—Lies and Bribery —Why India is Loyal

"The faith of India is the consummation of a belief, a trust, a hope engendered by long years of contact with the British nation. It is the result of a deep study of the history of other nations, the acceptance of a destiny to which of their own free will and reasoned argument the people of India deliberately resign themselves." These words—simple, conclusive, and straight-spoken—strike the keynote of "The Verdict of India," a pamphlet by Sir Mancherjee Bhownagree, K.C.I.E. In these fifty pages we have a brief yet consistent account of the zeal and the unscrupulous cunning with which Germany has endeavored to undermine India's loyalty and blacken British character ever since the outbreak of war, not to mention the more insidious pre-war activities that formed part of her vast scheme for peacefully penetrating the whole civilized world.

Hun "Literature"

Sir Mancherjee asserts that the Germans have left no stone unturned to inflame the minds of down-trodden Indians and rouse the indignation of neutral countries against England's gross misgovernment and maltreatment of millions of long-suffering Asiatics. With this end in view they have poured out a regular flood of official "literature" (save the mark!), handbills, and pamphlets. The titles of these precious productions speak for themselves: "India under the British Fist," "English Over-Lordship in India," and so forth.

They have made repeated efforts to suborn the frontier tribes, flattering them with hints of England's weakness and their own skill. They have waxed assiduous in their attentions to the Amir of Afghanistan, "whom perhaps (adds Sir Mancherjee) the Kaiser, in his contemptuous estimate of Oriental character and intelligence, thought to be green and gullible. He has had the Amir's reply long since, and let us hope he now knows better."

Why the Failure

They have sedulously stirred up the dregs of sedition and discontent to be found in every community, not excepting their own; nor was it for lack of secret encouragement, funds, and skilful organization that they failed signally in their attempt to enkindle a serious rising against the British in India. Sir Michael O'Dwyer's full account of that hidden drama revealed that the conspirators were hampered chiefly by the vigilance of the Indian police and the large, passive loyalty of India's own people; those very people whom Germany—in the flaming language of exaggeration—depicts as down-trodden, starved and exploited by the great "robber State" which it is her sacred mission to destroy.

Keep Cold to Yourself

If some one else in your house has a cold make it your business to see that it is not passed on to you. If on the other hand, you are the first person in the house to develop a cold, see that you do not transmit the infection to some one else. Keep your fingers away from the nose and mouth. Do not use a drinking glass in common with anyone else. Do not kiss anyone. Change your handkerchief frequently. Cough and sneeze as little as possible, and always into your handkerchief. In short, keep your mouth and nose secretions to yourself and insist on other people doing the same.

WONDERFUL STUFF! GEE! YOU'LL LIKE IT

Apply a few drops then lift corns or callouses off with fingers—no pain.

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.

Ask at any drug store for a quarter ounce of freezone which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This drug freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. Try a little and see for yourself.

The Death Vampire

By EDWARD T. STEWART

There is a certain region in the southwest where the people have a strange belief. Where they got it no one there or elsewhere can tell. They are ignorant, and ignorance is the father of superstition. And this especial belief of theirs could exist only among a superstitious community. It is that when any one is dying there are vampires who suck the breath from the body.

One winter evening when the snow was falling fast and the wind was blowing it into drifts John Hathaway, a country lawyer, was riding to the county seat to attend court. What befell him he has narrated as follows:

I was on horseback, my saddlebag being full of legal documents, luncheon and a flask of brandy. The snow was whirled about in eddies that confused me, and I began to be frightened. I had no idea whether I was on the road or off it. All of a sudden my horse sank down into a drift, falling on his side and pinning my leg under him. The leg was not hurt, for it rested on snow. At least it did not pain me. The horse struggled awhile, then lay still.

I was now in terror lest I should be obliged to lie there till I froze. The flask and the luncheon were in the pocket of the saddlebag that was under the horse, and I could not get at them. If ever a case looked hopeless it was this, for the thermometer stood not far above zero, and, not being able to move, I was pretty sure to go to sleep, and that meant death. I felt sure that I was beside the road—probably my horse had stepped off it into a ditch—and persons usually were passing, but what was to be expected in such a storm? And night was already falling.

I managed to raise my head far enough to look about me within narrow limits. A few hundred yards ahead was a house, but as yet there were no lamps lit in it. I shouted, but there was no answer.

Whether I slept or not, whether I was simply benumbed by the cold, how long I remained unconscious, I do not know, but suddenly I was aroused by a spasmodic struggle of my horse. It seemed to me that my leg was free. I tried and found that I could move it. I struggled to free myself from the drift and clambered up on to higher ground, where the snow was not so deep. It struck me that I had regained the road.

Glancing toward the house I had seen, I saw a light in one of the windows. I wondered if I had strength to go there. Getting on my feet, I started and to my surprise walked with tolerable ease. Having reached the house, I pushed the front door open and stood in the hallway. The only light was from the lamp I had seen in the window, and I now saw that it was in a bedroom in the rear. The door of this room was ajar, and I entered. There was plenty of furniture, but it was dilapidated. Thus far I encountered no person.

I fell exhausted on the bed and lost consciousness. Presently I felt suffocation. I awoke, conscious that I was losing my breath. I felt a pair of clammy lips on mine. Putting out both hands, I grasped a pair of arms, cold as marble, and with a strength born of horror hurled whoever was on me away. The light in the room must have gone out, for I was in darkness.

Yet in another moment I was looking at a light. I saw dimly a different scene from that in my bedroom. It was a lantern a few yards from me and higher than I. By it I made out a team, and a dark figure was behind the light. Then I felt arms under mine, and I was lifted and dragged up on to the level, where a man was holding the lantern. Then both men lifted me on to the wagon. One got in with me, the other on to the seat, and we moved on, the horses struggling through the snow, the man beside me shaking and rubbing me.

After awhile the wagon stopped, and I was helped into a house, where a hot drink was given me and I was put to bed.

The next day I was all right. I asked for the men who had rescued me and was told that they had gone on. I asked what had become of my horse and was informed that he had succumbed. My next question was about the house where I had slept, and after describing it I was told that it was haunted and on that account had long ago been deserted. I told of my sleeping there and of my dream or nightmare or whatever it was.

I was talking to an old woman, a young woman and a young man, the younger woman's husband. When I had told of flinging off the monster the three looked at one another.

"Now, Sam," said the old woman to the man, "after this will you still refuse to believe?"

The man looked much disturbed.

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Why, stranger," she said, "you was a-dyin'. A vampire was a-suckin' of yer breath. If it hadn't been for the two men as come along and pulled you out of the snow the monster 'd 'a' got ye. Ye wasn't in the haunted house at all!"

"Yes, he was, maw," said the young woman. "The vampire put the light in the winder to entice him there fer to suck the breath outen him."

Convinced that my nightmare had been occasioned by my cramped position, I left this intellectual group. I had been kept from freezing by the warmth of my horse's body.

ABOUT VEILS.

An Expert Tells How to Manage This Accessory.

Most of us when we pick out a veil choose one that we have admired on some one else or the mesh most becoming in the saleswoman as she holds it up, regardless of whether it suits us, and let it go at that.

"Some women wear the prevailing mesh of the moment without a thought as to its becomingness," says a veil expert. "Take the square or filet mesh recently worn. Despite its popularity, there was never a mesh that accentuates wrinkles as it does. It gives most faces a hard line that makes many women look older than they really are.

"On the other hand, the commonplace hexagon in a large, fine mesh is perhaps the most youthful of all. Despite its cheapness, many well dressed women find it so becoming and satisfactory that they rarely wear anything else.

"Most women can wear a wide range of veilings, however, provided they keep a few general hints in mind. For instance, the woman with a long, slender face or sharply defined features should avoid heavy meshes or large designs or lines, for they accentuate the features. Simple thin meshes with small figures or designs have a softening effect that she will find far more becoming.

"It is usually the woman with high cheek bones that looks best in the more pronounced veiling, especially if her face is round and full. But then the woman with a full round face can generally wear anything.

"In putting on a veil with large, sprawly figures in the design care should be taken in placing them on the face. In spite of the chic which such a veil can give to a commonplace hat nothing is more disfiguring than designs so placed across the features that they look like facial blemishes. Keep the figures as far away as possible from the eyes and if possible away from the corners of the mouth.

"In picking up a veil to put on the hat take it by the corners and after shaking it to straighten it out place it against the face on the hat. Most people then draw the veil back snugly and tie it on the hat before pinning the lower edges in place behind the ears.

"The way I recommend is to hold the veil over the hat as described before the mirror and then as the first step after getting the veil the correct length at the chin, lightly pinning at the top in the center of the brim. Then pin the lower edge snugly behind the ears with a small invisible hairpin before even gathering the ends together to tie the knot. In this way you have the face section perfectly adjusted before the pull or strain of tying it in the back. Being already held in place, lightly tying the veil does not affect it, and then, too, it eliminates that unsightly pulled effect over the nose and eyes.

"Veils should never be rolled, despite the embroidered holders that come for that purpose. Keep them flat, with as few creases as possible. Never rumple into tight little pinned wads, as I have seen otherwise fastidious women do.

"To wash a veil use lukewarm water and a small amount of castile soap. Lightly swish it about the soapy water and rinse several times in lukewarm water. Squeeze with great care and lay out flat to dry, pinned in shape like a curtain on a curtain drying frame."

Knights of Old.

The knights of the days of chivalry were so well protected by their armor that they were practically invincible to all ordinary weapons. Even when dismounted they could not be injured save by the misericordia, a thin dagger, which penetrated the joints of the armor. In more than one battle knights fallen from their horses could not be killed until their armor had been broken up with axes and hammers.

ALLIES MAKE MORE PROGRESS IN WEST

DIFFICULTIES OF ADVANCE ARE GROWING

THE GERMANS ARE FORMING A NEW LINE OF DEFENCE IN THE WEST

Based on Historic Towns of Lille, Cambrai, St. Quentin, Laon and Lafere---Meanwhile Allies' Cavalry and Light Artillery Are Pushing Enemy As They Go---German Reports Claim That Heavy Losses Have Been Inflicted on Allies and That the Abandoned District Has Been Left Absolutely Untenable.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Eng., March 20.—Air observers report that the Germans appear to be forming a new "Hindenburg line," where they will probably make a determined stand against the advancing British and French. This line is apparently based on the historic towns of Lille, Cambrai, St. Quentin, Loan and Lefere.

Meantime the Allies' cavalry and light artillery are punishing the retreating Germans heavily as they go. The occupation of Cambrai by the British and St. Quentin by the French may be accomplished in a few hours, according to some experts.

The German statement to-day says heavy losses have been inflicted on our adversaries in the district we abandoned near the Somme and Oise rivers. The Germans declare they made the abandoned district absolutely untenable before they left it.

Berlin reports via Amsterdam indicate the German people are getting restless under the reports of the repeated retirements of the Germans in the West. They are confident, however, in the ability of Hindenburg to stem the advance.

PARIS, March 20.—(French Official Communique).—Slight progress, despite bad weather and the destruction of all means of communication, was reported by the French official statement to-day in the Avre-Aisne disrict.

French troops were in contact with the enemy throughout this district. The difficulties of the advance are growing, the statement said.

Around Verdun, the War Office reported, the repulse, with heavy losses to the enemy, of German attacks launched several times between Avincourt Wood and Hill 304.

(By William Philip Simms, U. P. Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES AFIELD, March 20.—Historic Peronne is now a heap of rubbish. A deliberate, systematic, unreasoning policy of destructiveness was thoroughly carried out before the Germans abandoned.

The sixteenth century church, once the pride of the town, is in ruins. National monuments were destroyed wantonly. Moreover, such destruction was not the work of British and French shells, for their target was only the German barracks. It was purely the work of Germans, and mostly by dynamite.

Looking over the smouldering ruins to-day, I failed to find a single shell hole in the streets of what was once the Grande Place, and yet the front of all the buildings had collapsed in explosions, from within. Others are still blazing.

Nothing was left anywhere except evil muck and such obvious "booby traps" as rum jars, cabinets and helmets filled with explosives, cleverly contrived so as to explode when picked up or opened. Peronne is in complete ruin, as was Ypres.

The invading British troops found a dummy effigy of Britannia propped up in the Grande Place.

PETROGRAD, March 20.—"The Provisional Government which to-day holds Russia's destiny in its hands, will use every energy in the war with the unanimous consent of the nation, and will effect a speedy victory," declared Foreign Minister Miliukoff to-day.

"The problems now confronting Russia are immense. She will have to rebuild the whole political edifice, and in so doing she will enormously strengthen her moral forces to organize and obtain a victory."

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 20.—Three of the seven German sailors who jumped into the Delaware River last night from a vessel on which they were interned made a clean escape, it was learned to-day. Four who were recaptured had lots of money and lists of German sympathizers in this city.

STOCKHOLM, March 20.—Helsingford City, Finland, is in the hands of Russian troops, following week-end riots. Admiral Njolton was shot and 14 officers aboard the warships in the harbour were killed, according to information reaching here to-day.

LONDON, March 20.—Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law announced to the House of Commons this afternoon that the Government was considering the best means of settling the Irish question.

OTTAWA, Ont, March 20.—After paying off all current indebtedness, including interest on all war expenditures and all pensions, there will be fifty millions of dollars left in the Dominion Treasury on March 31, at the end of the fiscal year, to assist in paying off a portion of the capital expenditure incurred during the war. The year's revenues will amount to 230 millions, fifty millions more than last year and one hundred millions more than for the first of the war.

LONDON, March 20.—Warm defence of the memory of the late Lord Kitchener was made in an eloquent speech in the House of Commons today by Former Premier Asquith.

The speech came after the revelation of certain excised portions of the Dardanelles campaign report.

LONDON, March 20.—A drunken U boat commander and a drunken crew sunk the Norwegian sailing ship Collingwood on March 12, according to a report of her master to-day.

They also took more than 1,200 prisoners, including 11 officers. Military activity on the part of the British forces to the east of Lake Doiran resulted in the bringing in of prisoners.

NEST EGG WAS DISCOVERED BY CITY COUNCIL

Mayor Duffus is of the opinion that the city will be able to recover taxes on the local properties owned by the Ontario Power Commission of Ontario. If this is the case the city will benefit to the extent of between seven and eight thousand dollars. This will offset any attempt to add a fraction of a mill to the tax rate and will provide a fund for unforseen expenditures. The Mayor made this announcement at last night's meeting of the City Council, following a suggestion made by Ald. Stratton that a fraction of a mill be added to the tax rate.

Ald. Stratton, who is chairman of the Finance Committee, was afraid that the present tax rate of 26.30 mills would be insufficient for the needs. He was of the opinion that it would be better for the city to close up the year with a surplus rather than a deficit.

Mayor Duffus asked the Council to defer action until something definite was received from Toronto in regard to the taxes on the Hydro Power properties.

PETERBORO' SOLDIERS IN THE LIMELIGHT

PTE. FRED GUERIN

A youthful member of the 93rd Battalion, who returned to Peterborough on Sunday after spending over seven months in England. He has been discharged as too young for service in France.

SERGT. MAJOR F. DUNKERLY

Who has been mentioned for valuable services in connection with the war.

FOUR PETERBOROUGH SOLDIERS MENTIONED FOR VALUABLE SERVICES

Sergt.-Major Dunkerly, Acting Sergt-Major W. G. Affleck, Staff Sergt. Arthur Graham and Acting Sergt. C. H. Hastings in the List Brought to the Attention of the Secretary of State For War—Battalions to Mobolize For Home Defence—To-day's Orders and General Military News.

In the list of Canadian soldiers, whose names have been brought to the notice of the Secretary of State for War for valuable service in connection with the war appears the names of four Peterborough non-commissioned officers. Their friends, and citizens generally, will be glad to learn that their services have been recognized and that they have been honoured in this way. The four are as follows:

Sergt. Major T. Dunkerly, Canadian Infantry.

Acting Sergt. Major W. G. Affleck, Canadian Infantry.

Staff Sergt. Arthur W. Graham, Canadian Artillery.

Acting Sergt. C. H. Hastings, Canadian Forces.

Sergt.-Major Dunkerly was before the war Sergeant instructor to the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers and was a member of the Royal Canadian Regiment. When war broke out he reported to that unit which was mobilized at Valcartier, but all Sergeant instructors were ordered to report back to the regiments they had been attached to and Sergt.-Major Dunkerly returned to Peterborough and was in charge of the training of the 57th's quota to the 21st Battalion. When the 39th Battalion was raised he succeeded after great difficulty in securing permission from headquarters to go overseas and was appointed regimental sergeant-major in which capacity he has done splendid work.

Acting Sergeant Major W. G. Affleck was a member of the Bank of Toronto staff and went overseas as a private in the 57th regiment's draft to the 2nd Division. In reaching England he was transferred to the Canadian Pay and Records Office, where his good work earned him rapid promotion and now an official recognition of his services.

Staff Sergt. Arthur W. Graham, is the son of Mr. Geo. N. Graham of the Empress Hotel and enlisted here in the summer of 1915 with the 33rd Battery, with which unit he went overseas. His business training and ability as a clerk were recognized by the appointment to a position as staff sergeant and his faithful work in that capacity is reflected by the appearance at his name in the Secretary of State for war's list.

Acting Sergt. Charles Hastings was a member of the editorial staff of the Examiner before the war. He had been in peace times a member of the Cobourg Heavy Battery and when at the beginning of hostilities in August 1914 that unit was immediately sent to the Pacific coast. Sergt Hastings accompanied his old corps. The Battery returned east in time to let Sergt. Hastings get away with the first Canadian Contingent. On reaching England he became a member of the staff of Sir Max Aitkens and went to France in that capacity doing good work.

Pte. T. G. Weese of the 247th Battalion has been transferred to the 2nd Battalion Reinforcing Draft which leaves for overseas shortly.

Next for Duty, Wednesday, March 21st, 1917—Lieut S. J. Dunsford.

A. E. BRITTAIN, Lieut. Adj. 247th O. S. Battalion, C. E. F.

A member of the Examiner staff has received the following letter from a former member of the 93rd Battalion:

Just a few lines to let you know I am still in the land of the living—more by luck than anything else, I suppose. I have just received a letter from one of the Peterboro boys, enclosing a letter from a certain young lady in Peterboro, who is severely criticising the 93rd band, which I understand is at home at present. I wish I only had the chance to inform her that our band had no need in the world to go to an hospital to have the "yellow streak" taken out, for unless I am badly informed the majority (if not all) of them were unfit for active service. Well, I guess we will let it go at that for she cannot be responsible for her actions but still there is no need for her to voice ideas on a subject of which she knowns nothing, and to a perfect stranger at that.

Well "Fritz" has had it rubbed into him pretty hard this winter as raids have been pulled off on him all along the line, so you can imagine how he has to look out for the next piece of "devilment" if our boys seem to think it a huge joke to go over and "strafe" him.

After a fight full of snow in the early part of the New Year a battalion went over dressed in white from head to foot, so while crossing the space between the trenches (I cannot

WHY SOME SOLDIERS RETURN HOME WITH NO OFFICIAL WELCOME

Authorities Are Experiencing Great Difficulty in Securing Information as to Just When the War Heroes Are Due to Reach Peterboro'

CONFUSION CAUSED

Occasionally enquiry is made as to why men returning from service abroad and from the lines, and who have been brought home to Canada, are not met at the station by one or more of those connected with the civic bodies or patriotic organizations. That some are met and others neglected. This enquiry is quite in line and the explanation is here made. It is all a matter of information. Certainly not of reluctance or indifference on the part of citizens.

All men relegated home are carried from Halifax to the Dominion discharge depot at Quebec. There examined, certified as to arrears of pay, given a part of it, and transportation to destination.

But this often intervenes. After examination at Quebec it is found that the men are required to report at the divisional point, which for this district, is at Kingston. Men generally are forwarded by the afternoon train from Quebec, leaving at about one o'clock and reaching Montreal at about five of the afternoon. Time is available to take, if the man or men so wish, the night train leaving Montreal at eleven o'clock, and make Peterborough at 5.54 a.m. Should departure be delayed, from Montreal, until the day following arrival in Montreal, then the man will reach Peterborough with the 3.43 afternoon train.

Now as being diverted to Kingston. Many, nearly all, are so required and to undergo medical inspection. The military authorities are reluctant to have a man discharged or pass out of service before taking all steps to see that he is in all ways, fully fit for civil life and civil work. If on inspection any ailment is found, or even uncertainty then the man is required to stay, or to return to Kingston, where he is placed in the Military Home for treatment for a more or less period.

On leaving Quebec a telegram is forwarded to Peterborough, often to the Secretary of the Soldier's Aid Commission, at the Patriotic Fund Office, stating that the man, or men, have left for the West. Giving names and addresses in this city of those who here belong, but it never states whether or not the men are to be diverted to Kingston. That is left as a matter of conjecture. They may come on straight home or go to the hospital for inspection.

It takes some hours, even at the best, to carry out the inspection, and the man is generally held until the following day, leaving Kingston Junction, (G.T.R.) at one o'clock or thereabouts. He may make Port Hope in time to catch the train leaving Port Hope, at 4.15 p.m. for Peterborough, reaching here at 5.35 p.m. Or he may do, what is often the case, reach Belleville, get off and take what we term the Grand Junction train for home, reaching Peterborough at 9.00 p.m.

If Kingston would wire exactly the man's movement on his leaving that point then there would be no uncertainty in the duty of meeting the men coming in. If the man would advise, himself, then the train could be met. But between the two stools, as a manner of putting it, the scheme of meeting the man is more often a failure than a success. Members of the reception committee of the Council, and others, have gone to the morning C.P.R. train to meet men and found that they had not arrived. Also to the afternoon G.T.R. train and to the evening G.T.R. train from Belleville, without result. In cases where the man wires to his friends, who advise the Patriotic Fund Office then the matter is at once arranged and the man met, as he should be met.

Kingston depot has been appealed to and asked to wire on the man's leaving there, the route he will take and possible time of arrival in Peterborough. If this is done the men can nearly always be met by one or other of the civic reception committees or members.

Couple of the Aldermen Deny That the Council is "A Disgrace"—Money Needed For Recruiting Purposes.

THE DISCUSSION

One thousand dollars will be added to the funds of the 247th Battalion. A resolution to this effect was adopted by the City Council at a meeting held last evening. Lieut. Col. Ackerman, officer commanding the 247th Battalion, appeared before the Council and requested financial aid in the interests of the Battalion which he represented. Col. Ackerman lost no time in reaching the first line trenches of the City Council, when Ald. Dobbin called Col. Ackerman's attention to a statement said to have been made by Capt. Dancy while in the city recently to the effect that the City Council was a "disgrace." This Col. Ackerman did not deny. In fact he was inclined to agree with Capt. Dancy, especially as the remark in question was recorded a few nights after the Council had ignored the request of the Speaker's Patriotic League for financial assistance. Ald. Dobbin invited Col. Ackerman to relieve the Council of the stigma which Capt. Dancy's remark had placed upon it. Soldier like, Col. Ackerman refused to retire from his original position, whereupon Ald. Smith launched a gas attack on the veteran of Langemarck. The East Ward representative said he objected to Col. Ackerman's allegation charging the City Council with being a "disgrace." Ald. Smith said he would not support a grant for the 247th Battalion unless Col. Ackerman retracted his statements. "They are uncalled for," said Ald. Smith. "Any person has got a nerve to come to this Council and ask for a grant in view of such statements."

Ald. Stratton asked Col. Ackerman if money was essential to recruiting. He took exception to Col. Ackerman's designation of the City Council.

Co-operation Wanted.

Mr. Joseph Wearing, representing the Speakers' Patriotic League, appearing in the interests of the 247th Battalion, said that a soldier was always noted for his bluntness of speech. "Col. Ackerman feels that he has not had the co-operation of the citizens at large," said Mr. Wearing. He has been at the front and knows exactly how bad men are needed on the firing line. Mr. Wearing urged the Council to support the grant irrespective of any remarks that had been made, if it was felt that conditions were such that the money was needed.

Freedom of Speech.

Mr. Joseph Worth did not agree with Ald Dobbin, who said that Col. Ackerman should have reprimanded Capt. Dancy for his remarks concerning the City Council. He reminded the Council that this was a free country and any man has a right to express himself as he feels.

Ald. McIntyre—"There is no doubt that if we were placed in the same position as Col. Ackerman we would feel as he did. I will certainly support a grant to the Battalion."

Ald. Dobbin—"I appreciate the position Col. Ackerman is in. He has assumed a responsibility he should never have incurred. He can say what he likes and we won't object, but I do take exception to an outsider berating the Council while standing on his doorstep and under his auspices.

UPLIFT THE RED CROSS.

In this issue is announced a meeting of the advisory board of the local Red Cross Society to concert measures to promote the success of the proposed automobile show. Considering the large general interest in automobiling, such an exhibition should present such elements of attraction as to insure automatic success. But when the object of the show, to promote the efficiency and strengthen the resources of Red Cross work, is considered, universal popular interest should be conjoined to the natural interest of automobilists.

The Red Cross work in Peterborough is worthy of the strongest encouragement and greatest possible material help; not only on account of the object of its work, in the relief of the sufferings and the softening of the sacrifices our soldier-lads are making for us but also as a tribute of appreciation of, and sympathy with, the unostentatious, silently-plied and self-sacrificing work of hundreds of noble women day afer day. An enduring surprise is the sustained devotion and unremitting constancy of the women, self-employed in Red Cross work; as striking an example of heroism in its way, as any shown on the field of battle.

THE SAFER FORM.

A cotemporary journal states as a fact that during the past half century monarchical systems have disappeared from France, Mexico, Brasil, Portugal, Turkey, China and Russia. This is no indication that "popular" self-government is to be regarded as superior to a monarchy, if the monarchy is of the right type—a democratic monarchy, like Britain's — "broad based upon the people's will." This war is being fought in the interests of democracy, of the plain common people; and a monarchy that provides a balance wheel, that, paradoxically won't encourage or promote revolution, steadies things, is better than a heady democracy. Germany has got the wrong kind of monarchy or dynasty, and autocracy that received its death blow in Russia won't flourish long in Germany. Whether or not Germany will become ruled by a constitutional monarchy or become a republic, the day of the Hohenzollern Hun is drawing to a close.

A GIRL'S FORECAST.

Our "overseas" correspondent, Miss Jean E. Harstone, is not only an evidence of petticoated capacity for doing things—such as driving a motor ambulance in the shell zone, but of capacity for understanding and seeing things. In a private letter dated March 4th, eight days before the eruption of the Russian revolution, she forecast what was likely to happen much more definitely and clearly than anything that came out in the despatches, or from any other source, and what really happened. The letter stated that the Russian court was a hotbed of German intrigue, and the allies expected at that time that something was going to happen; it was feared that the Russian autocracy would favour easy peace terms, such as the allied interests could not, after all the sacrifices to permanently tame German militarism, afford to accept. But the letter adds that the Russian court faction "is a small minority, growing smaller every day, and I think that sooner or later both Russia and Germany will become democracies." This opinion is borne out by what happened only eight days after it was expressed and the news of the present success of the allied drive may be a forecast of a beaten and humbled German autocracy, and awakening of the deluded people to a realization of their present slavery and a broad determination to follow the example of Russia in the deposition of a military autocracy and the establishment of a democracy.

And yet we have men, and women, too, that think so lightly of the capacity of women to see and understand things, that they are declared incompetent to mark a ballot, or see the difference between political right and wrong; beween right andt,ymina thi wrong; between political reality and political sham.

"THE DAY" IS COMING

It is a little hard sometimes to be British and forbearing and magnanimous, in the face of German outrage. In another column is related the story of how Hon. Dr. Beland, a Canadian Member of Parliament, and a former Minister of the Crown, is treated, or rather maltreated, in a German prison, herded with criminals and subject to perpetual indignity. A civilized person can't conceive how the German authorities could refuse to permit Dr. Beland to see his dying wife before she passed away. As against this act the consideration with which German officers are treated in England, is nauseating. At Donnington Hall a palatial residence, German officers are put in quarters luxurious and comfortable enough for a gentleman or a Christian, a desecration of hospitality quite in keeping with a good deal of our maudlin magnanimity towards the people of a nation that has broken loose from every restraint of civilization, or even of half decent barbarism. Of course it would be degrading ourselves to the Hun level to take reprisals, to repay outrage in kind; but we might reasonably stop short of the other extreme — super-chivalrous treatment of men who can't appreciate our generosity, but laugh in their sleeves at the "soft" English ways. Germany, however, will get her drubbing. She now has the contempt of the whole civilized world. She has not, outside her dupes of allies, a single nation that will stoop to accept her friendship. Even heathen nations like China and Japan, can't stand German civilization and kultur. Germany is an outlaw among the nations—an Ishmaelite whose hand is against every man and every man's hand against her. Even the true Ishmaelite, the descendants of Ishmael of old, in Arabia, have repudiated a nation that bears the brand of Cain in every lineament. But the day of judgment, the day of reckoning, is coming—slowly, it is true, but with the relentless tread of the grim reaper that knocks impartially at the door of kaiser and churl. Nicholas of Russia, a humane autocrat, was gently pushed aside, compared with the "jolt" that an inhuman tyrant will get one of these days.

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

A little pamphlet issued by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, gives in latest cablegram and reports, a terrible picture of the suffering in what can be properly called Bible lands. Here more than a million are starving or on the verge of starvation. As a fact under the shadows of the cedars of Labanon 200,000 have died from starvation. In scores of cases, corpses, though light with starvation, are carried away for burial by unfed wretches, with hardly strength enough to carry their own emaciated bodies. All over a wide district in the East similar and, if possible, worse suffering takes place. One writer tells his story, typical of general conditions—which in turn tells it own gruesome tale of misery, thus:

Der-el-Zor, Syria Desert.

"What I have seen and heard passes all imagination. I thought I was passing through a part of hell. They arrive by the thousands. The majority leave their bones here. As far as the eye can reach are to be seen mounds where 200 to 300 corpses are buried in the ground pell mell. Thousands have perished here."

"Near the place where my carriage stopped, women who had not seen me arriving, were searching in the dung of the horses for barley seeds not yet digested, to feed on. I gave them some bread. They threw themselves on it like dogs dying of hunger. Instantly, informed by one of them, 240 persons, or rather hungry wolves, who had had nothing to eat for seven days, rushed to me from the hill extending their emaciated arms, imploring with tears and cries a piece of bread. They were mostly women and children, but there were about a dozen old people."

This is only one of scores of similar tales of suffering. And this is only one region of many. In Serbia conditions are almost as bad, and in Belgium, the whole civilian population are almost starving, hundreds of thousands subsisting scantily on what the Relief Commission supplies. Misery depraves and denatures the people. The commission finds it necessary to protect children against their mothers. It has to collectf the children in the schools to be fed so that mothers should not give favourite children more than the common allowance. We don't know anything about food shortage in Canada, and we should share our plenty with the starving.

While the suffering appeals to our hearts, it should also appeal to our arms. It should arouse in the tamest, the weakest, the most craven Canadian, the lust to take arms to fight the monstrous system of organized iniquity, the mad ambition of German militarism, that is the prime and sole cause of the widespread desolation and suffering that darkens Europe, and part of Asia to-day; that makes Europe a shambles, and fair and fruitful fields deserts.

There is only one way to end this, and that is to end the German agencies of hell that have brought all this suffering and devastation upon the earth. Think of it to-night, as you lie down to sleep. Picture to yourself twenty millions of men at each other's throats; picture thousands of belching volcanoes of destruction, killing, murdering, maiming millions every day; picture the suffering of the untended wounded, lying helpless in cold and sleet; picture in addition millions starving, freezing and dying a dozen deaths in the dreadful journey to one. If you can't fight against the cause of all this, we can help a little to feed and shelter the starving and suffering.

CONTRAST OF THE GERMAN WITH BRITISH TREATMENT OF PRISONERS

The story of Hon. Dr. Beland's sufferings in prison were told to Mr. Douglas S. Robertson of the Toronto Telegram by Mr. C. Mellor of London, who was imprisoned with Dr. Beland in Germany.

In a letter to the Toronto Telegram, dated Feb. 29, Mr. Robertson states: "Lodged in the cell next to that of Hon. Dr. Beland, late of the Dominion Cabinet, Mr. C. Mellor of London has just arrived at his English home, after thirty months' captivity in Germany. Amazement and indignation at the gentle and considerate manner in which the British are looking after German prisoners in this country brings bitter remarks to the lips of this repatriated man. He only wishes the authorities here could see the way Britishers in Germany are treated.

HUNS WALKING LOOSE.

"Germans actually walking loose in the streets of London!" exclaimed Mr. Mellor; "yes, thousands of them. I was simply astounded to hear and to see it. Why, I will venture to say that you wouldn't find one Englishman walking about Berlin—unless a couple of soldiers were guarding him. The humaneness of the Government makes me tired. What we need here are reprisals for the damnable way the Huns have treated our people. We all know Donnington Hall, where we keep German officers in luxury, and when I think of how British officers were refused the right of buying butter in Germany just because they were English, it makes my blood boil.

MIXED WITH CRIMINALS.

"Poor Beland!" remarked the erstwhile captive, "I feel very sorry for him. For two months I occupied the cell next to his in a prison—yes, just a common prison for criminals where he had been interned ever since war started. And the man has done absolutely nothing to deserve it. It is an outrage on all the laws of warfare that an unoffending civilian—especially a former Minister of the Crown and a member of Parliament—should be so closely confined and herded with criminals. It is entirely the doings of the Berlin authorities, who seem to have a special spite against Beland, and either think or, or what is more likely, pretend to think that Beland is a particularly valuable captive who must be restrained with more than usual harshness.

At 7 o'clock every night a turnkey comes along the passage and locks Dr. Beland in his cell, whence he is not released until 9 next morning. Although measuring only eight feet by ten, with pictureless wall and devoid of furniture, save for the wire mattress bed and bedding and a wooden stool, the tiny chamber is well lighted, comfortably heated and clean. But think of two years spent in such a place! For exercise Beland is permitted to walk up and down a passage some seventy feet long, and at stated times to go out into the yard, a brick-walled enclosure some fifty by sixty feet in area. Here he is forced to herd with thieves and other common criminals, who are serving terms of from eighteen months to two years.

DOCTOR IS WELL.

"The doctor is well enough, and gets his parcels of food regularly," continued my informant, "but he is naturally very depressed with his long confinement, and particularly at the shameful way the Germap authuroities that he might be taken under escort to see her. He offered to pay all expenses. But his prayers were met with a flat refusal. His poor wife, longing to see him once again, passed away without the last farewell, and the tortured man sat agonized in his cell awaiting the news.

"It is nonsense our Government putting up with such cases. Let us tell Germany that for every instance of the kind a German officer of high rank will be clapped into a common jail and kept there until the German Government stops seeing red and is reasonable.

BELGIUM LIKE A DROWNING NATION

Whose Heads Are Only Kept Above Water By Help Sent Them From Overseas

MONTREAL, March 19. — "I don't know a better way in which to picture the state of the Belgian nation to-day than to compare them to a drowning man who is almost on the point of exhaustion and is only saved from drowning by a friend holding his head above water."

Such was the statement made today by a member of the Central Belgian Relief Committee of Montreal.

"The Belgian nation," he said, "are absolutely at that point where they can see the golden sun of deliverance rising on the horizon but who will inevitably perish before the deliverance comes unless stronger and more fortunate people hold their hands above the ocean of want which is threatening to engulf them.

"From day to day a very large proportion of the population exist only on the scanty allowances which the Belgian Relief Commission is able to hand out to them through the organization they have covering that unhappy land.

"So great is the need that the Commission has to collect the children in the schools every day and feed themselves so that parents shall not give favorite children more than the common allowance, and so cause others to run short. Fancy the appalling conditions which bring about such a state of things as this!

"We in this country do not know what a real food shortage means. We live in peace and plenty. Surely that very fact imposes a duty on us to help our less fortunate brethren—the women and children of a nation that has been stricken to the earth but is still unconquered in the noble task it so unhesitatingly assumed to holding back the tide of barbarism which threatened to engulf the world.

"The members of the Central Belgian Relief Committee earnestly solicit subscriptions to purchase and despatch further food supplies to the Relief Commission. Such subscriptions may be sent to the head office, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal, or to any branch committee throughout Canada."

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Your Hunter Street contemporary seems to be in the power of an evil genius, who one day prompts him to repudiate religious or other troubles and subjects of that nature in his paper, and the very next day, and for many after it, to admit in his columns much nasty, spiteful talk of the very kind he pretended to repudiate. Such a paper is a danger to a community since it would be far better for it to come out "like a man" than to sneak round in the way it is doing, especially after all the boasting.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

"INTOLERANCE" A WONDERFUL SPECTACLE

When Peterborough people first saw "The Birth of a Nation" they believed they were looking at the climax in moving picture sensations. They were confident that the wonderful film story of the American Civil War could not be surpassed. After the presentation at the Grand Opera House last night of the colossal specacle "Intolerance," however, they were forced to admit that "The Birth of a Nation" had been surpassed by the master mind who directed both productions. D. W. Griffith, the foremost "movie" producer of the day, "Intolerance" has been called by one critic the super-movie, which is mild praise. For breadth of conception, richness of setting, and the beauty and realism of its effects nothing in the realm of film spectacles has approached "Intolerance"—no less than four stories run concurrently through the action—a stirring drama of the present day, a story of the France of Huguenot days, scenes from the life of Christ, and the tragedy of Belshazzar, and the fall of Babylon. The stories all illustrated different phases of the same spirit of intolerance which led the Pharisees to persecute Christ, which drew Cyrus to the conquest of Babylon and which to-day causes self-opinionated moral reformers to exercise tyrannical control over the lives of others.

The production is too big to be described—it must be seen to be appreciated. There are scenes, especially those presenting the siege of Babylon, which have never been approached in magnificence of setting, and impressiveness of movement, and which constitute the most remarkable achievements of the camera up to this time. The settings for the Babylonian scenes are the most gigantic ever erected, and thousands of performers take part, the perfect co-ordination shown being a marvel of the producer's art.

The acting throughout is on a par with the wonderful scenic effect. Mae Marsh, as the "dear one" of the modern drama, and Constance Talmage as "The Mountain Girl" in the Babylonian story, are the stars of a huge caste.

The wonderful scenes are illuminated by a symphonic score, magnificently played by a splendid orchestra. The music was arranged by Joseph Carl Breil, who was also responsible for "The Birth of a Nation" score, and enhances the effect of the great spectacle. Added charm is given by a number of vocal solos and choruses by a choir of female voices.

Altogether the production is on a scale miles beyond anything that has been attempted. The picture will be shown at matinee and evening performance to-day and to-morrow and no one can afford to miss the opportunity of seeing the most astonishing spectacle of the age.

The work of the orchestra in last night's production was all the more remarkable through the fact that yesterday marked the first appearance of Mr. George H. Wiseman as conductor. He took hold in splendid style, in spite of the fact that he had never seen the picture before.

Mr. Basil D. Courtney who brought "The Birth of a Nation" to Canada is responsible also for the appearance of "Intolerance."

The Zemstvos

The Great Unions in Russia That Have Become the Framework of the New Regime.

The word Zemstvo has appeared frequently in the despatches that announced the revolution in Russia and the change of Government. Prince Lvoff, the Premier of the new Cabinet is also president of the Central Committee of all Russian Zemstvo unions the history, development and scope of which are sketched by Stephen Bonsal in the New York Times.

The Zemstvo dates from the sixties of the last century when 10,000,000 peasants were liberated and were enabled to purchase allotments of land from their former masters; and the amiable autocrat of the day the Czar Alexander, instituted the Zemstvos or provincial and district councils for the purpose of looking after the interests of these millions who had been suddenly freed and who were so ill-prepared to exercise their freedom. In a word, they were nothing more nor less than local committees composed of elected representatives of the three social orders, the land-owning gentry, the peasantry, and the townspeople.

At first these committees were only established in thirty-three Governments or provinces of European Russia, with power to levy local taxes, to maintain roads and schools and hospitals in a general way along parochial lines, to watch over the economic welfare of the district over which they presided. Out of this crude beginning public opinion came into existence. But it was not long before the proposed reforms fell far short of what had been expected, and early in the 70's a reaction set in.

When the great revolution came in 1904, some people talked of the Zemstvos councils as a powerful instrument by means of which the Russian people might achieve a responsible form of Government and even representative institutions. But Prince Lvoff was perhaps the only man of prominence who really believed that this was so. Many of the other preachments came from disguised reactionaries, men who had no belief that the Russian peasant was capable of participating in an intelligent advance toword self-government, and who were perhaps glad to see him concentrate his attention on a system which had already been barren of results and certainly failed to inspire enthusiasm.

Then came Bloody Sunday and the other massacres of 1904 and 1905.

Until a few days before Bloody Sunday, when the present Czar gave an audience to Prince Lvoff and the other committeemen of the Central Zemstvos Union the activities of these bodies had been confined to road and bridge building, to the upkeep of schools and small country hospitals. No one thought then, probably least of all the leader of the movement, Prince Lvoff himself, that this modest movement would in the short space of thirteen years eventuate in the first Russian Government that is responsible and responsive to the will of the people.

Mr. Bonsal last saw Prince Lvoff in November 1915 from whom he obtained the story of the progress of the Zemstvos. Incidentally he sketches the events of the dark, chaotic months that ended with the sacrifice of Grand Duke Nicholas. Of that change in the high command he writes:

"With munitions to burn in Archangel and in other places, the Russian peasants were dying like flies at the front for want of food and medicine, and fighting not infrequently against a wonderfully equipped enemy with nothing more effective than iron-bound staves. Everybody knew that the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch, Commander in Chief, was to be sacrificed; a victim to shoulder the responsibility for the defeats was necessary. Everybody in Petrograd knew that he was to be removed, and the Grand Duke Nicholas knew it himself.

The general orders had not been made out, but when his corps commanders came to consult him they would always find the Grand Duke red-eyed and sometimes weeping and sometimes feeding the more or less sacred pigeons. But the circumstances foreshadowing his removal were patent to every soldier. Very little small-arm ammunition and no bombs were being sent forward and the corps commanders knew what this meant. "They are being saved up," said one to me, "so that when the Czar takes command and the Czarevitch comes with him for his baptism of fire one will be received with a blaze of glory that will radiate victory." And subsequent events seemed to prove that this malicious interpretation or existing conditions was not wholly unfounded.

REGAIN POWERS.

Returning to the history of the Zemstvo movement, Mr. Bonsal continues the 1915 interview with Prince Lvoff.

"We came out of the revolution with our chains loosened, if not broken. We were no longer merely a board to look after the pauper and the primary school. The rights which we had asserted and which we were generally able to exercise were very similar to the County Councils in England or the Boards of Supervisors in County Governments of some of the American States. It soon became apparent that the Nachalnik, or the representative of the Federal autocratic power, could not make much headway unless he got along with us; unless he got along with us there was friction, possibly removal or transfer, often to his personal detriment. So, one by one, the usurped powers came back to us and more. There were times when I really thought of putting on the brakes. Our committees had all the power that they could use intelligently.

DESIRE DEFEAT OF PRUSSIANISM.

"We were forging ahead very fast when the great war came, a war upon the result of which we all recognize the future of Europe depends as well as that of Russia. We for a moment subordinated our separate national cause to the greater, the world-wide, struggle in which humanity and civilization was involved, with progress trembling in the balance. We knew that the freedom of Russia was within our grasp, but we knew it would have been a hollow sham indeed, unless accompanied by the triumph of the liberal powers with whom we were making common cause. If Germany succeeds they will be able to install a reactionary Government in Petrograd subject to orders from Berlin. Therefore, in the first instance, Germany, above all Prussia and Prussianism, had to be defeated.

"Events are ocurring with such swiftness that we do not appreciate them. To-day, just think of it, in this very week, one and probably two Ministers of State have been or are to be chosen from among the members of the Duma. Just think of that! It is more revolutionary than anything that occurred or anything that was proposed during the revolution—almost. Poor Wittie and Stolypine are surely turning in their graves.

PROGRESS OF THE ZEMSTVO

"But let us keep off these topics. They are too inchoate to admit of intelligent appreciation in these days of ferment. Let me talk to you about the Zemstvo, that instrument of our emancipation in which I have never lost faith. You who say our early, halting efforts must be amazed both at the improvement in the personnel of our members and at the scope and vision that characterize our work to-day. We have become, I dare say it, more representative even than the Duma—though, do not misunderstand me, that is not the fault of the Duma—and we are at all times close to the people, and we are in fact, if not in name, constantly in session. We cannot be prorogued, and our places of meeting are so numerous, so widespread, so scattered, that, while I do not think the idea has occurred to any one, our sessions could not be disturbed, and we were, when the war came, apart from the bureaucracy, the only available instrument of government in Russia.

"In a very few weeks, during which the bureaucracy had been weighed in the balance and found wanting, our organization, because it was strong, because its power emanated from the people, were in practice, if not by charter, conceded functions that a few months before we had hoped to attain, say in a generation. Speaking as I understand them, in terms of American political life, our provincial organization of unions embracing many districts has become something like your State Legislatures, with, however, of course, vast Federal or Central Government activities.

"As one by one the activities of the bureaucrats broke down under the war pressure greater and heavier duties devolved upon us. At first, to save the face of certain people, these duties were assigned to us in an advisory capacity. We were called upon to supervise the provisioning of the army. In a few weeks, there being no one else to do it half so well, we were provisioning the army, and there was no opposition to this innovation, except from the few scamps who were trying to swindle the people in this their hour of necessity, as they did so successfully during the war with Japan.

"Then came the great migration of the refugees from the invaded provinces of Russia, the millions who were fleeing before the depredation of the German hordes. Well, we took charge of that. We concentrated them in places where they could be fed and we distributed them in districts where they had a chance of earning a livelihood and of not becoming a charge on the State. I tell you, no one envied us that job, and no one had any criticisms to make of it being handed over to us.

"Then the quartermaster's department of the army broke down, and recruiting, even the draft, failed to fill our depleted ranks. Can you wonder? Our people were all willing to give their sons to fight for Holy Russia, but they were not willing to condemn them without a struggle to life, such as it is, in the German prison camps, or to death by starvation. Then we were called upon to take charge of the food reserve, and to see that the provisions were equitably distributed and that swindling in the matter of distribution was reduced to a minimum.

POWER HAD TO BE GIVEN

"I have no hesitation in saying this responsibility was placed on our organization because there was no other substitute; there was no other body that enjoyed the confidence of all the people as we did, and I further have no hesitation in saying that they only too kthis step because they recognized that unless it was taken the Government could not go on.

"I will not tire you further with enumerating the functions of government that we have taken over, many of which, it is only fair to say, were unloaded upon us. You who saw our first rudimentary plans in the almost hopeless days would be indeed surprised if you had a chance to get below the surface of the Imperial Government and could see how many how very many, functions of the Government we are performing.

"Do not misunderstand me. We are not grasping and we are not self-assertive as an organization. We want other people to participate in the duties and responsibilities of government, and we want what is healthy and what is vital in the present regime to survive. You will remember what was said in our first manifesto to the Russian people. 'We have come to build up and not to destroy.' But tell our friends in America that the time is coming when, perhaps, we will be the only, as organized, instrument of administration and government available, and then the incredible will have happened and Russia will be free."

The Cause of Backaches

Every muscle in the body needs a supply of rich, red blood in proportion to the work it does. The muscles of the back are under a heavy strain and have but little rest. When the blood is thin they lack nourishment and rebel. The result is a sensation of pain in these muscles.

Many people are frightened into believing that backaches are due to kidney trouble, but the best medical authorities agree that backache is very seldom due to kidney trouble. In fact not more than one backache in a hundred has anything to do with the kidneys. The whole trouble is due to thin or impure blood, and those who are troubled with pains in the back or loins, either frequent or occasional, should look to the condition of the blood. It will be found in most cases that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills by building up the blood and feeding the starved nerves and muscles will banish the pains and make you feel better in every other way. How much better it is to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for your blood than to give away to unreasonable alarm about your kidneys. If you really suspect your kidneys any doctor can make tests in 10 minutes that will set your fears at rest, or tell you the worst.

All dealers in medicine sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

1917 Indian Motorcyle Has Arrived

Big Powerplus Model Has Several Refinements

The 1917 model of the INDIAN Powerplus Motorcycle has arrived and is now on display at the store of C. R. Banks, 212 Charlotte street. The attention of local devotees of the popular two-wheel pastime has been attracted to the several new features which appear, a good crowd having been present at the store continuously since the big INDIAN was removed from its crate.

The 1917 Powerplus model of the INDIAN comes out this year with five big refluements which have already won the approval of those who have admired in classy lines or witnessed its remarkable demonstrations of power and speed.

Chief of these improvements is the new Triple Stem Fork which more than doubles the strength and affords a secure double anchorage for the adjustable handle bar. The frame is also greatly strengthened by the new drop forged webbed head construction and tubing reinforcement.

The enlarged gasoline tank with a capacity of nearly four gallons is another distinctive improvement, and one which adds materially to the appearance of the new INDIAN.

A great improvement in the gear shifting lever operates directly, pivoting from the seat post cluster. This eliminates considerable lost motion common to other gearshifting devices, and makes the action easy, quick and positive.

The change in the 1917 INDIAN which will doubtless attract the most attention is the departure in finish. The conventional INDIAN red is offered this year with the addition of a neat black panel striped with gold which adorns all flat exposed surfaces. It is a notable improvement in the appearance of the INDIAN, lending a dignity and grace to the lines of the whole machine which the plain red could not impart.

The Powerplus Motor which was such an astounding success in the 1916 season comes out in the 1917 model with only minor changes. It is once again the same powerful, silent, smooth-running, master-motor which proved itself so thoroughly last year. It develops from 16 to 18 horse power, and is capable of speeds varying from 3 to 70 miles per hour. Economy of operation is the added charm that Powerplus can truthfully claim.

With its new features, its Powerplus motor, and new dress-up, the 1917 INDIAN will prove one of the most popular models of the new season

Young People's Rally Is Held

A very interesting and profitable service was held last evening at St. James' church. The occasion was a rally of the Methodist Young People's Societies of the city. There was a good attendance and a spirit of enthusiasm pervaded the gathering. Reports were given on the work of the Young People's Societies of the churches represented and addresses were made by Mr. C. S. Thompson, B.A., Principal of George street Epworth League, and Mr. F. F. Vosden, Principal of Queen Mary school and President of the Trinity Christian Literary and Athletic Society. Miss Etta Kemp contributed in excellent voice a solo that was much enjoyed. Other similar meetings are planned for the future.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

A SANITARY INSPECTOR WAS APPOINTED BY CITY COUNCIL

Stapleton Was the Successful Candidate—Council Turned Down a Returned Soldier Whom Mayor Duffus Contended Was Qualified For the Position—Duties Will Be More Clearly Defined.

The City Council at a special meeting held last evening, succeeded in appointing a Sanitary Inspector. The choice of the Council was Charles Stapleton, shall inspector, at a salary of $900 a year, with $100 for expenses.

The attempt of Mayor Duffus and Ald. McIntyre to award the position to a returned soldier was a dismal failure. They advocated the appointment of Dr. J. S. Deyell, who is a veterinary surgeon by profession. Dr. Deyell served for one year in France with the Imperial forces. Two votes were recorded in his favour at last night's meeting. Charles Stapleton drew five and G. W. Powell four votes.

The Property committee's report recommending the appointment of G. W. Powell was thrown out. Mayor Duffus insisted that the appointment be made without further reference to the Property committee, as that committee had failed on two occasions to get their nominee through the Council.

Ald. Duncan wanted the Council to appoint either G. Metcalfe or G. W. Powell for "the sake of getting the matter settled."

Returned Soldier.

Mayor Duffus in advocating the appointment of a returned soldier, said that it was only fair to the men who have enlisted as well as to the citizens that a returned soldier be selected if possible. Supporting Dr. Devell, the Mayor said: "First he is a returned soldier; second, he has the qualifications, and third, by appointing Dr. Devell you are adding another resident to the city, as he has agreed to move into the city in event of getting the position. At present he resides on the south side of Lansdowne street.

Ald. McIntyre heartily concurred in the position taken by Mayor Duffus.

The division resulted in the appointment of C. Stapleton by one vote.

Lots of "Bosses."

The Sanitary Inspector is responsible to the following authorities:

The City Council.
The Property Committee.
The Board of Health.
The Medical Officer of Health.

Mayor Duffus claimed that there were too many "bosses." He moved that the administration of the department be turned over to the Board of Health. This was defeated. It was finally decided to handle the department through the medium of the Property committee, which practically leaves the situation unchanged.

Milk Inspection.

To make certain that the newly appointed inspector will not rust in idleness, it was decided to have him make monthly inspections of all sources of the city's milk supply and report to the committee. At the present time there are between fifty and sixty dairies supplying milk to the city, and they cover a large area outside the city. The by-law relating to the position of Sanitary Inspector was amended so as to more clearly define the duties and make the contract airtight.

Mr. Stapleton has many qualifications for the effective discharge of the duties of his new office. He has business capacity and industry and an intelligent idea of the value of cleanliness as a condition of good sanitation. If he carries, as he doubtless will do, into the performance of his new duties the practice of cleanliness and neatness he applies to his own domestic premises, dirty back yards and home surroundings will have a mighty hard time of it in Peterborough.

SEEK LABOURERS ACROSS BORDER

R. B. Bennett, M.P., Tells of Plans for Whirlwind Campaign in United States.

FORTY-FOUR AGENTS TO BE DESPATCHED

Twelve Thousand Five Hundred Men Are Needed by Prairie Provinces.

OTTAWA, March 14.—Mr. R. B. Bennett, Director-General of National Service, who has returned from an extended trip through the Prairie Provinces, explained to-day what had been done to meet the call for additional farm labour.

In dealing with the situation generally, Mr. Bennett pointed out that it must be fully recognized at the outset that farming was a highly-skilled occupation. In the West, men were required during seeding time who could handle six and eight horse teams. Any attempt to supply the present shortage by unskilled city men would lead to disappointment. The man-power inventory recently taken by the National Service Board also makes it abundantly clear that there is no surplus agricultural labour available in Canada, with the possible exception of Prince Edward Island. This situation renders it imperative to look elsewhere for additional help in the present emergency. The only available field would appear to be the middle Western States.

About 12,500 Needed.

A meeting was held in Winnipeg which was attended by the leading men of the Province, including representatives of the farmers' organizations as well as of the various Western Provincial Departments of Agriculture. A survey of the situation indicated that 5,000 were required in Manitoba and a similar number in Saskatchewan. The minimum number needed in Alberta was 2,500. The immediate problem, therefore, resolved itself into inducing some 12,500 agricultural labourers in the United States to come to Canada to help with the spring work on the farms.

An arrangement was completed by Mr. Bennett with the Provincial Governments of the prairie section whereby from $150,000 to $200,000 will be appropriated jointly by the Dominion and the Provincial Governments to carry on a whirlwind campaign in the Western States. The Provinces will send forthwith twenty-two men south and the Dominion Government an equal number. They will work in conjunction with the regular officers of the Immigration branch of the Department of the Interior.

Attractions to Labour.

It was strongly felt that special attractions had to be offered farm labourers in the present crisis. It was, therefore, decided to absorb a portion of the railway fare of experienced farm hands from certain common points in the United States to the boundary line, wher the cent-a-mile rate of the Canadian lines is effective. This phase of the work will be handled by the Dominion Immigration officers. The cost will be borne equally by the Prairie Provinces and the Dominion Government.

Each farm labourer entering Canada under this arrangement will be furnished with a certificate to the effect, that so long as he remains a citizen of an alien country, he cannot be called upon for any military service during the present war, nor will any obstacles be placed in the way of his departure from Canada at any time on account of the war situation. This was done to overcome the fear of conscription in the minds of many.

The distribution of these men will be left in the hands of the Provincial authorities. Labour bureaus will be organized by them and probably will be kept in efficient working order for the remainder of the year, to be available for the much greater rush of harvest help. It is estimated that it takes approximately, four men to harvest the crop that one man can put in. An army of men, consequently, will be needed in the West this year, provided the season is reasonably favourable to garner the crop and see it safely started on its way to Great Britain and the men at the front.

Mr. Bennett also said that the representative men in the West seemed to be fully impressed with the importance of speeding up production this year. The outstanding fact that owing to the scarcity of ocean bottoms one bushel of wheat in Canada will be worth, to the allied cause, three or four bushels in the more remotely situated wheat-producing countries seemed to have appealed strongely to the Pacific grain grower.

The Provincial Governments are dealing with the matter of increased production in an energetic and systematic manner. Manitoba has appropriated half a million dollars to assist those who require additional seed and similar action has also been taken by Saskatchewan.

NO JOYFUL WELCOME.

LONDON, March 20. — The German press has greeted Count Von Bernstorff with conspicuous coolness, according to an Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company. The papers point out that he granted interviews which he should not have done without consulting the German Government.

Count Von Bernstorff, the despatch adds, spent the day in conference at the Foreign Office, and was also received by the Imperial Chancellor.

City Council Again Asked To Make a Grant For Public Bathing Places

A Request For Two Thousand Dollars Was Referred to a Committee of the Whole Council—Ald. Dobbin Did Not Think That Two Thousand Dollars Would Be Sufficient to Make Such Places Absolutely Safe—To Collect a Fee Would Be "Class Legislation."

Last night was a field night for deputations. The first one that appeared before the City Council was sent away with a promise that their claim would be considered. They wanted a grant of two thousand dollars with which to establish two public bathing houses in the city. The speakers were Dr. F. C. Neal, Mr. Joseph Worth, Mrs. W. R. Morris and Mr. Joseph Wearing. The latter also appeared in the interests of the 247th Battalion, when consideration was given the matter of voting one thousand dollars towards the Battalion funds. Asked by Ald. Dobbin which of the two enterprises should be given preference, Mr. Wearing said the Battalion, by all means, as it was essential to recruiting.

EFFORTS APPRECIATED.

The speakers said they appreciated the efforts of the City Council to keep down the tax rate, yet they felt that the best interests of the city would be served by the establishment of public bathing places. Mr. J. Worth pictured the plight of the munition worker, who, forced to forego holidays, finds himself unable to indulge in the luxury of a bath at Cobourg or some other Lakeshore town accessable by automobile. The speaker thought the city should make the town more attractive for the knights of labour. He believed that the establishment of public bathing houses would be a step in the right direction.

Mrs. W. R. Morris made a strong appeal for public bathing places. Mrs. Morris, who represents the Playgrounds' Association, asked the Council for the sum of two thousand dollars and also requested Mayor Duffus to name a small committee to confer with the Association in regard to the matter.

Dr. F. C. Neal said he knew that a large number of people were disappointed at the previous action of the Council in turning down the proposal.

Ald. Dobbin moved that the matter be referred to a Committee of the Whole Council. This was seconded by Ald. Saunders.

Ald. Stratton moved in amendment that the sum of two thousand dollars be granted, as requested.

NOT ENOUGH MONEY.

Ald. Dobbin contended that the sum of two thousand dollars was insufficient for the needs. He was in favour of public bathing places, but in this case the money to be expended would not be sufficient to make such places safe and minimize responsibility. Ald. Dobbin thought that public bathing places should be free, whereas he understood that it was the intention to charge a fee. "That is a class legislation at once," said Ald. Dobbin. "What we want and what we need are two different things. Just now I want a fast horse and a piano-box buggy, but I need a half a ton of coal worse. The money asked for is not sufficient to guarantee safety. We want public bathing houses but in this year of the war we can do without them. It will be a fight to keep these places from being abused and defiled. If anything should happen, two thousand dollars is not enough to cover the cost. We cannot afford to undertake the responsibility for two thousand dollars."

SURFACE DRAINAGE.

Ald. Dobbin referred to the need of surface drainage in various parts of the city where such a sum of money could be expended to better advantage. "We have been avoiding them to save expenses," said Ald. Dobbin. Our friends don't know that we are working on a thirty-mill tax rate by grace of having a surplus of seventeen thousand dollars from last year."

Ald. Dobbin's motion to refer the matter to a Comittee of the Whole Council was carried.

grant for the 247th Battalion and vote $2,000 for public bathing places. I feel that way yet. I am not offended at what Col. Ackerman has said. I am willing to do all I can to help the situation

Col. Ackerman produced a statement showing the approximate cost of obtaining recruits.

Ald. Smith suggested that the Council offer one hundred dollars to each man enlisting in the Battalion. One item in the statement produced by Col. Ackerman referred to the band which was sent to Port Hope for a few days at a cost of over one hundred and fifty dolalrs. The net result of this recruiting trip was three recruits for the Cobourg Heavy Battery.

On motion of Ald. Stratton and Ald. Dobbin the sum of one thousand dollars was granted to the 247th Battalion fund for recruiting purposes. The motion carried.

The grant was opposed by Ald. Smith.

Just Apply This Paste And the Hairs Will Vanish

(Boudoir Secrets.)

The judicious use of a a delatone paste insures any woman a clear, hairless skin. To prepare the paste, mix a little of the powdered delatone with some water, then apply to the objectionable hairs for 2 or 3 minutes. When the paste is removed, and the skin washed, every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain attends the use of the delatone and it will not mar the most sensitive skin, but to insure results, see that you get real delatone.

MILITARY NEWS

call it "No Man's Land" as we can rightly claim the most of it) they could not be seen, and I guess by the way Frita cried "Mercy Kamerad" they must have thought they were the spirits of the babies they had killed.

We certainly have the fear of the Lord in Frita for he never retaliates when a raid is pulled on him for he well knows what the consequences will be. The weather is dandy at present and it sure was a relief to see the mud disappear with the coming of the frost. This winter has been the most severe known in France for a number of years, and proved a blessing, as it enabled operations to be carried on successfully, as in previous years transports were mired in the mud and required the united efforts of man and beast to extricate them.

We are having a rest at present, billeted in a town with French people, and I must say that they are very good to us, no doubt because they have boys in the trenches doing their bit.

Well, I guess that I had better close for now, hoping that you are well, as most of our boys are as far as I can find out. Good bye.

Yours truly,
P. D. Ryan.

Three more Peterborough soldiers, invalided from overseas, have reached Quebec and will be home in the course of a few days. The three are Sergt. G. Coleman, Pte. George Moore and Pte. F. Dixon. The first two went overseas with the 93rd Battalion.

Mrs. A. Crouter, 971 Stewart street, has received a letter from her husband, Pte. Albert W. Crouter, with the Canadian forces overseas. Pte. Crouter was a member of the 57th Regiment for a long period and fought in the Northwest Rebellion in 1885. He says in part: "Well, how is the new 247th Battalion getting along. I don't see why the men don't sign up. Do they think we are going to do all the fighting for them. I am going to France and I'll be there by the time you get this. I'm glad to think I can do my bit.

TORONTO, March 20.—An interim report, to be available for the House of Commons, at the resumed session in April, will be prepared by the parliamentary committee on returned soldiers, which opened a four-day session here this morning, under the chairmanship of Sir Herbert Ames.

Among the witnesses to be examined here are General Logie, Col. Marlowe, Hon. W. D. McPherson, and a number of wounded returned soldiers of which this Province already has some thousands.

De Koven Opera Co.

Here Next Week in "Robin Hood"

"Robin Hood," celebrated comic opera by Messrs de Koven and Smith, will be the offering at "The Grand" next Tuesday, March 27th.

This opera will be presented by the Walker-Stevens Opera Company an organization composed of noted singers. In this splendid cast of vocal artists mention should be given to Ivy Scott, the charming young Australian prima donna, who made such a success as Madame Butterfly and as the girl in "The Girl of the Golden West." Miss Scott possesses a remarkable lyric soprano voice of dramatic quality, and sings the role of Maid Marian with an artistic beauty worthy of the highest praise. The title roll will be sung by Ralph Brainard, whose fine tenor voice is admirably suited to the part. Ed. Andrews will play the part of Friar Tuck. Mr. Andrews' performance of the lovable old monk is said to be a classic.

Cora Tracy will be the Alan-a-Dale and her rich contralto adds a new beauty to Mr. de Koven's best known song, "O, Promise Me". Another recruit from Grand Opera is James Stevens of the Chicago Opera Company whose singing of "Brown October Ale" gives a pleasure only possible from such a splendid baritone voice. Herbert Waterous, a fine basso, will sing the famous "Armourers' Song." Marie McConnell, Tillie Salinger, Phil Branson and David Andrade, complete the cast the excellence of which has never been surpassed if equalled in comic opera. An exceptional singing chorus exerted by the company is of the highest order. Special mention is made of the vocal merit of this company in justice to the charm of Reginald de Koven's music.

This elaborate production which is under the direction of Walker and Stevens is the same as that given at the New Amsterdam Theatre New York during the long run of "Robin Hood" in that city.

The performance here will undoubtedly be the social and musical event of the season.

Ald. Worth Wires From Atlantic City

With the splendid beach along the Jersey shore, vividly reminding him of Peterborough's deficiencies, Alderman Worth who, with his wife, is spending a few weeks at Atlantic City, wired the Council last night that he endorsed the local bathing place agitation and asked to be informed of the results. Ald. Worth has never had any other opinion of what Peterborough should do, but the wide beach must have doubly impressed him.

Ald. Dobbin and some of the other obstructionists might be moved to extravagance by an Easter trip to Atlantic City. Let's go.

EXCHEQUER COURT REFUSED MR. HOPWOOD'S APPLICATION FOR DAMAGES FOR HIGH WATER

Judgment in the case of Hopwood vs. the King, in the Exchequer Court for $150 damages, for damages caused by high water to his property at Chemong has been given by Mr. Justice Audette, who dismissed the appeal. Mr. G. W. Hatton appeared as Crown Council during the hearing:

Judgment in this case was reserved at Peterborough and delivered at Ottawa on March 10th, 1917. In his reasons for judgment the Judge says "To bring this case within the provisions of sub-section "C" of section 19 (of the Exchequer Court Act) the injury to property must be (1) on a public work. (2) There must be some negligence by an officer or servant of the Crown acting within the scope of his duties or employment (3) The injury must be the result of such negligence. The suppliant's property is situate 20 or 25 miles south of Buckhorn dam, a dam which is part of the Trent Canal system, which undoubtedly under section 108 of the B. N. A. Act and of the third schedule thereof is the property of Canada. The Canal route, however, runs through the north-western part of Buckhorn Lake and does not go through Chemong Lake at all. Buckhorn Lake, on the East connects with Chemong Lake through a passage and the suppliant's property is at the south-east shore of the latter lake as the whole appears upon a general plan exhibited at trial. Under the circumstances and under the decisions in Macdonald vs. the King (1) Hamburg American Packing Co. vs. the King (2) Paul vs the King, (3) Homested vs. the King, (4), it is impossible to find that the suppliant's land in question in this case so situate 20 to 25 miles from Buckhorn dam and entirely out of the Canal route was on a public work.

In the result it must be found following the decisions (of the above cases) that the injury complained of did not happen on a public work and moreover, that it did not result from the negligence of any officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope or duties of his employment. Therefore, both under the facts as controlled by deed of August 1910, and under the law the suppliant fails."

On being asked if anything further would be done about this case Mr. Burnham, M.P., said that it will be remembered by those who were present at the trial that the Judge said that his hands were tied by the case of Homested vs the King, in which the Supreme Court had reversed his decision and found that the injury must be inflicted on a public work. Mr. Burnham said, however, that it was understood that the Government was making arrangements to have the law altered since it is well known that it was never intended that a Government should be liable only actually on a public work where they might inflict injury by that public work at a long distance from it. Mr. Burnham had hopes that the Government would do the fair thing in this matter and not feel it necessary to defend the Public Treasury by means of an absurd law. Of course the Government was wise in refusing to hand out money simply at haphazard and in demanding that these cases should be settled by the Courts, but nevertheless Mr. Burnham said the absurdity of the law underlying this case was such that he had great hopes that real justice would be done notwithstanding that the case was greatly complicated by the fact that the floods that spring were higher, and more sudden than at any time since 1870.

GOLD WRIST WATCH FOR GUNNER McGEE

Gunner W. K. McGee, who is going overseas with the 5th draft of the Cobourg Heavy Battery, was presented on Saturday with a gold wrist watch as a memorial token from the employees of the Hydro-Electric Commission and the following address:

To Gunner W. K. McGee,

We, the employees of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, feel that we cannot allow you to sever your connections with our employ without showing in some slight way our appreciation of your faithful services both to the Commission and employees.

It is needless to say you will be greatly missed by us all. Your genial disposition has won for you many friends both in business and out, and while we regret very much your departure from amongst us, yet we cannot help but feel proud of you for the stand you have taken in the cause of right.

May He who watches over all protect you and bring you safely back to Peterborough again at a not far distant date.

County Roads In Good Condition

Mr. Richard Howden, who resides on the 12th concession of Cavan, drove into the city this morning. The roads were never better, he said, although he expects they will soon break up. Mr. Howden looks for a good run of maple sap. The woods are deep in snow and the frost has penetrated the ground to a considerable depth. Both these conditions promise well for the maple syrup season.

G. H. LOGIE WON FINAL IN THE VICE-SKIPS' BONSPIEL

G. L. Logie won the Vice Skips' bonspiel last night from C. C. Parsons, by the score of 15 to 3.

The rinks and play were as follows:

F. Linton	C. Westbrook
A. H. Webb	J. M. Lowes
D. Davidson	W. J. Thompson
G. H. Logie	C. C. Parsons
Skip—15	Skip— 3

Logie . . ..1212ix3xx5—15
Parsons . . ..xxxxxix1ix— 3

On the soft ice Friday night Parsons won easily in his semi-final game, but on the keen surface last night it was not until the half-way turn that he touched the chalk and his three counters representing three ends were on clean shots that beat out two and three Logie stones.

Logie and his rink played consistently throughout. The skip was in fine form and always dangerous and Dick Davidson put up a strong game. Andy Webb had an exact measure of the rings and wasted very few shots. Frank Linton, as lead, completed a smooth, working rink.

THE CONSOLATION ROUND.

Only two games remain in the Consolation round. Jack Wiley defeated Skinner by 11 to 9, in the semi-finals and is out waiting for the winner of the other semi-final game between Benor and Seymour.

Most of last night's games ran to close scores, indicating the strength of the rinks and also the fact that most of them were playing up to form. Some of the scores were as follows

Widdiss, 11; Boucher, 8.
Tooley, 6; P. Fitzgerald, 11.
Patterson, 4; Wiley, 9.
Pennefather defaulted to Metheral.
Benor, 9; Fitzgerald, 8.
Widdiss, 6; Benor, 8.
Dobbin, 3; Seymour, 14.
Metheral, 6; Skinner, 7.
Wiley, 11; Skinner, 9.

Toronto Dents Lost By 6 to 4 But Won Allan Cup By 13-12

WINNIPEG, March 19. — Little "Rube" Milan lifted the Allan Cup with his stick when he hoisted the winning goal in overtime to-night, making the score on the series 13 to 12 for Toronto Dentals over Winnipeg Vics. The game was the grandest finish to a hockey season that Winnipeg ever saw, and the enthusiasm of the over-capacity house, fully 5,000 crowding in, leaving half as many disappointed fans outside, was such as to recall the best of old-time hockey crowds.

That the cup was lost to the home team is a sore regret, but the losers deserved full credit for their win of the game by 8 to 4. To Willard Box and Mac Sheldon the winners gave most credit for the Dental finish, though they all take their hats off to Charlie Stewart, whose goalkeeping and clearing proved the stumbling block in the way of an otherwise conquering team of defenders. Jerry Laflamme was always "in the way," too, but his rushes, except in one instance, when he fooled the Vic. defence and got a goal, were lacking in their usual dazzling finish. Jimmy Stewart, at left wing, was up against a big proposition in O'Meara, and did not get any the better of the argument, nor did Smillie have anything on Patterson his opponent. The duel between Box and Hughes was a most interesting one, and the Easterner drew the balance of play his way.

The secret of the Vics win to-night was the change of the line-up, a youngster, Ab Newell, taking the place filled poorly in the first game by Patterson, who went to his own position at left wing, and Chambers moved into centre, Herbert being dropped. The work of Newell was the sensation of the night's hockey, for he not only blocked effectively, but rushed like a star, and was the individual means of tying up the series at 12 all. The game was one of the most spectacular and most heartbreaking finishes ever staged in the West, and for that matter ever played in a final contest. The Victorias came out for the last period four goals down on the series, as the Dentals were leading three to two but the Bisons showed what Western pluck is made of when they completely played them off their feet and amidst the greatest excitement piled up four goals, while they held their opponents scoreless.

Only the most remarkable kind of goalkeeping by young Stewart in the final period prevented the Easterners from being completely routed, as there was no stopping the Victorias once they got started. Ab. Newell, the junior, was the hero of the game, not only in his wonderful defence work, but in his lone rush through the whole Toronto team, which tied the score in the series.

After the game the two teams were taken to the Fort Garry Hotel, where a little supper awaited them, and the officials. The teams:

Referee—G. Caldwell. Judge of play—F. Bawlf.

WITH THE CURLERS

Two Winners.

As a winning combination Dr. Wightman and Jack Wiley have established an enviable record during the season's curling. They won the first prizes in the scheduled games, were runners-up in the open bonspiel and are now in the finals of the vice-skips' bonspiel for which they will be strong contenders. That means three different sets of prizes this pair have swept up during the winter, besides having a full share of the fun and exercise. When the Doctor skipped they won, then when he and Wiley changed places the habit persisted. It's a poor winter that doesn't provide "Doc" Wightman with a club bag, cut glass, umbrella or some little useful article with a series of games associated with it. But this winter has been K? etaoi On the ice he is as steady and keen as a midsummer cold spell, plays a fine, gentlemanly game at all times, and never quits until the last stone is played

Andy Wins Again.

Behold Andy Webb in the prize money as second stone with G. H. Logie. If coming home with the leaders means a place in the curling sun, Andy usually basks in its rays. The sun may be late in shining, but the long night is forgotten with the coming of day. In other words Andy has maintained his reputation.

Annual Meeting Postponed.

The annual meeting was postponed until Monday, March 26th. Curlers, please remember the date.

Forget a Stone.

In the Widdess-Oke game last night, in which Widdess won by 15-3, George Giroux, vicing for Oke, forgot one of his stones in an exciting moment. Honest he did, and right there the game turned. But anything can happen in these lingering days.

Two Peterboro' Boys Thank Kitchener League For Socks

TWO Peterborough—Sask. copy.

Mrs. Joseph Knox of the Kitchener League has received, among other letters acknowledging the receipt of socks, one from Lieut. Meredith Huycke and another from Lance Corporal Norman Saxby, both Peterborough boys. They expressed their appreciation as follows:

Feb. 2nd, 1917

Dear Mrs. Knox,—It was very kind and thoughtful of you to think of sending that huge parcel of socks to me and my men. But we surely appreciated your kindness and wish to thank you and the other ladies of your good society for the socks and the kindness and interest you have shown in us.

The parcel arrived a couple of days ago in good shape and was most welcome. This is the time of the year when cold and wet feet are most disagreeable and your socks were most opportune indeed. We certainly appreciate the good work done by the ladies back home and there is not one doubt but that they are doing their bit in sending their sons and husbands and then making life more agreeable for us all by keeping us well supplied with all manner of comforts.

We have been having typical Canadian wintry weather of late and everything is frozen up tightly. At times it is anything but comfortable but far better than mud and slush. We are also helped by being in a quiet part of the line.

I am afraid I am the only Peterborough representative in this unit. But being practically total strangers we must thank you all the more for your kindness.

Wishing you and the other ladies of your good society 'every happiness and good fortune. I am,

Yours sincerely,
G. M. HUYCKE, Lieut.
2nd How. Bat
2nd Howitzer Battery, C.F.A.

Feb. 25th, 1917

The Kitchener League,
c/o Mrs. Joseph Knox, Pres.,
Gilmour St. Peterborough

In acknowledging receipt of parcel I wish to thank you most heartily for your kindness in remembering me in such a matter.

The socks and eats, etc., were a Godsend. One box in which I found forty-two pairs of socks. I distributed them among the Peterborough boys in the Company, so nothing was wasted.

No doubt, the fair young ladies, who put their addresses in the toes of the socks they knit will be surprised with a card of thanks from the boys I gave them to.

Wishing you all the success which the carrying on of your work deserves, and trusting that the citizens of Peterborough give you the assistance your work merits.

Sincerely yours,
LANCE CORP. N. SAXBY,

Free Market For Peterborough

Council Will Defer Action Until the Matter is Further Discussed

Mr. T. C. Elliot headed deputation number three that waited on the City Council last evening. Mr. Elliot spoke on the desirability of having a free market in Peterborough and requested the Council to defer action until the Trades and Labour Council had an opportunity of discussing it with the merchants. In the opinion of Mr. Elliot, four-fifths of the citizens favoured a free market. A free market was a successful institution in Hamilton and other places, and why would it not be equally as satisfactory in Peterborough, argued the spokesman for the deputation. Council agreed to defer action until the matter has been further discussed by interested parties.

Increased Grant.

A by-law authorizing a grant of $600 to the Children's Aid Society was passed last night. This is an increase of $300 over previous grants made to this worthy cause.

A by-law authorizing a grant of $1,000 to the Peterborough Board of Health, $300 to the Speakers' Patriotic League, and $3,000 to the British Sailors' Relief Fund was given a third reading and passed.

A resolution of regret was extended to the family of the late F. S. Spence, Toronto. Also to Ald. A. A. McIntyre, brother-in-law of the deceased. The resolution referred to the many sterling qualities of the deceased.

Building By-law.

Mr. G. H. Howson, 137 London street, addressed a communication to the Council requesting permission to erect a house with a nine inch wall. Mr. Howson pointed out that the surrounding houses included a nine inch wall in their construction. The matter was referred to the Fire, Water and Light committee. A nine inch wall is contrary to the building by-law, which covers the fire limits of the city.

Railway Extensions.

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario acknowledged receipt of the city's communication respecting extensions to the street railway. The Commission promised to give the suggestions every consideration.

Snow Removal.

The Council extended the time one half hour in order to discuss matters pertaining to the removal of snow from the sidewalks.

Mayor Duffus said that the work of the snow plough contractors was only fifty per cent. efficient. He moved that the Council consider a proposal to compel the ratepayers to remove the snow from the sidewalks. This was defeated. Mayor Duffus said that many of the sidewalks were in a dangerous condition.

Gifts From the Progressive Club Are Appreciated

The Peterborough Progressive Club has received letters from the Canadian Field Comforts' Commission, Shorncliffe, thanking the club for a gift of $36, a bale of socks, and a box of sleeveless sweaters. They write: "Socks we always want. I think the sleeveless sweaters have been a great success and are much liked."

The Commission has also forwarded two boxes for the Progressive Club, to Capt. Pearson, Y.M.C.A., one box to Moore Barracks Hospital, and two parcels addressed to individual men. Two parcels to Capt. Layfield, 39th Battalion, and a box to Ward 22 (tuberculous), Moore Barracks Hospital, Shorncliffe.

WEDDING BELLS

SHIELDS—MEYERS.

A wedding of great local interest was solemnized yesterday in the presence of only the immediate relations of the contracting parties, when Lillian Olive, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Meyers, Brock street, became the bride of Mr. Edmund Roy Shields, Coboconk. The wedding took place in the bride's home, Rev. R. G. Peever officiating. The bride was very charming in her travelling suit of navy blue with hat to match. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left by the C.P.R. for Toronto and points west. They will reside in Coboconk.

SMITH—NESBITT.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Paul's Manse this afternoon, when Walter James Smith, of Gull Lake, Sask., was married to Miss May Elizabeth Nesbitt of Indian River. ST. PATRICK'S CONCERT AT ST. PAUL'S AN ENJOYABLE EVENT

A most successful St. Patrick's concert was given last night in St. Paul's Sunday school by the pupils of Miss Hall and Mr. G. H. Hooper. The entertainment given in order to raise funds to buy curtains for the alcove to curtain off the two classes was entirely the idea of the pupils and the results both financially and otherwise speak well for the ingenuity of the scholars. Mr. R. R. Hall was in the chair. The programme was as follows: A solo by Miss Lynn which was vastly enjoyed followed by a most interesting and instructive illustrated address by Col. Miller Mr. Vernon Fisk being in charge of the lantern. A trio composed of Messrs. James Pogue at the piano, Billy Mowatt, the flute, and Mollison the violin, showed careful training and great talent. Mr. Wilton's solo was encored again and again, whilst Miss Allen's beautiful voice, always an acquisition to a concert, was much enjoyed in an Irish song, 'No Place Like Home.' Over $25 was realized.

Tigris Expedition Part Of Mesopotamia Campaign

Kut-el-Amara Scene of Two Battles Between British and Turks—Present Offensive Co-ordinated With Ally—General Maude's Victory is the Result of Co-operation With Russians

TURKS STRONGLY REINFORCED

The expedition of Anglo-Indians under General Maude which has captured Bagdad bears little relation to that which started up the Tigris for the same objective soon after the war began, (writes the militar, expert of the New York Times) and, after coming within eighteen miles of the city of the Caliphs, was forced to retreat to Kut-el-Amara, was besieged there from December 7, 1915, until April 28, 1916, and finally surrendered its rear guard of 9,000 men.

Nor did the unfortunate expedition have any relation to the British defence of Egypt, or to the advance of the Russians across Armenia although there was a certain co-ordination between it and the Russians on the Persian frontier east of Bagdad. The expedition on the Tigris, which began with the idea of protecting the oil wells at the head of the Persian Gulf developed as a means to keep Turkish troops from being used at Gallipoli, and, later on, in the Balkans. And the Russians, in occupying Armenia aided this object. All probably prevented a second expedition being launched against Egypt and the Suez Canal.

Now, however, the successful Tigris expedition is part of a comprehensive plan against Asiatic Turkey. From Egypt troops under Sir Archibald Murray are approaching Jerusalem. The Russians in the Bitlis region are renewing activities, and those on the Persian frontier, who retired beyond Hamadan after the surrender of General Townshend at Kut-el-Amara last April, are again setting out for Mesopotamia. Their junction with General Maude, daily expected, will form a line of over 1,000 miles, broken only by mountains, from Basra, at the head of the Persian Gulf to Trebizond, on the Black Sea.

The new offensive on the Tigris began on December 13 and was at first an extension of the defences erected across the Tigris by the survivors of Townshend's expedition and the forces sent in vain to relieve it. The Turks evacuated Kut-el-Amara on February 24, and after that their retreat upstream in the direction of Bagdad became a route. On March 7 British cavalry even went beyond Ctesiphon, the scene of Townshend's turning point in November, 1915, when he began his retreat back to Kut-el-Amara.

HOW FIRST CAMPAIGN STARTED

For years the British Government had worked with the Turkish in Lower Mesopotamia and the Persian Gulf in peace and amity, and it was expected that British capital would restore Mesopotamia, just as it had operated the oil fields of Persia. Then in early November, 1914, Turkey joined the Central Empires and the Sultan launched a "Jehad" or Holy War against the British communities settled at the head of the Persian Gulf which were protected only by a small force of Indian troops that had been hurried thither. Next came a combined force of British and Indian troops under General Delamain, numbering, it is reported, 6,000, which landed at Fao with the cooperation of a strong naval force.

The Turkish troops at Fao were forced to fall back up the Shatt-el-Arab, and took up a position opposite Mohammerah, on the right bank of the river. On Nov. 14 General Delamain was reinforced by the troops under Sir Arthur Barrett, who came from India and took command of the expedition. He brought a number of river gunboats. By the middle of December the invaders had forced their way up the river and strongly intrenched themselves at Basra, the terminal of the Bagdad Railway survey, forty miles southeast of the confluence of the Euphrates and Tigris, at Kurna. Here roads had to be built and camping grounds raised above the water level, for Basra, before the arrival of the expedition, boasted no means of locomotion except primitive country boats on its numerous creeks.

In January, 1916, more reinforcements came — some from Egypt and more from India. The expedition then broke into widely scattered detachments for the purpose of protecting the area of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company's premises, at the same time annoying the Turks who were assembling in mass to obstruct the passage to the junction of the great rivers.

Between Adadan, on the Shatt-el-Arab, and the oil fields 100 miles and more to the north lies the highly vulnerable pipe line through which the oil is carried to the company's depot at Adadan. The pipe line passes through Persian territory, but the Chaab tribe of Arabs, who inhabit the region, own allegiance only to the Sheik of Mohammerah, a Persian subject, and a loyal friend of the British Government.

The Turks had persuaded the Chaab tribe to revolt against the Sheik, and with other Arab tribes to the west to threaten the lives and property of the employees of the oil company at Ahwaz the centre of the oil fields. Expeditions were depatched to Ahwaz and to several points on the pipe line. All this delayed the advance beyond Basra.

TURKS STRONGLY REINFORCED

This situation prevailed until April, 1915. Meanwhile, the Turkish regulars and Arab levies had gathered in strong force at Nasariyeh and Suk-esh-Shuynk on the Euphrates, with the intention of investing the fortified camps a Basra and Shaiba. More reinforcements had arrived from India and with them came Sir Arthur Barrett as Commander in Chief, Sir Arhur being invalided back to India.

Toward the middle of April, 1915, the situation developed rapidly. The Turkish-Arab force attempted to envelop the garrison at Shaiba and isolate Basra. A series of attacks and counterattacks with sorties from both places followed.

Then, on April 14, came the battle of Burjisieh. The British took the offensive and advanced across the desert and attacked the enemy's intrenched position at Burjisieh, five miles south of Shaiba dispersing the defenders, who fled toward Nasariyeh leaving 2,000 dead, wounded and prisoners. The Anglo-Indian loss is said to have been heavy.

When May came, the Arab tribes at Ahwaz having promised loyalty, Sir John Nixon prepared to advance with troops, barges, and gunboats up the Tigris. At the same time a column was formed to ascend the Euphrates under Major Gen. George Goringe. The latter fought his way upstream as far as Nasariyeh, which he reached and occupied on July 1. Nasariyeh is only seventy-five miles southeast of Bagdad. He could have gone further had he not feared to outstrip Sir John, who had been detained on the Tigris, owing to a flanking movement on the part of the Turks in the direction of Persia for the purpose of striking the column in the rear and cutting off their communications.

On Sept. 29, 1915, Austen Chamberlain, Secretary of State for India, announced in the House of Commons that Sir John had won an important victory and that the defeated Turks were fleeing toward Bagdad.

First Capture of Kut.

This was the first battle of Kut, or Kut-el-Amara. Kut is ninety miles southeast of Bagdad and 230 miles northwest of the head of the Persian Gulf. Here the Tigris, for a few miles, turns from its ascent northwest to due west. Sir John was thus able to strike at the enemy across the desert while protecting his flanks by the river. The battle was fought on Sept. 27, with Anglo-Indian casualties amounting to 500 and Turkish to 3,000, including 1,650 prisoners.

From that time on the Euphrates and the Tigris columns gradually converged on Bagdad, and on Nov. 22-23, 1915, the invaders attacked the strongly intrenched position of the Turks at Ctesiphon, eighteen miles from Bag-

MAKING IT PLAIN

A common mistake which some people continue to make is to accept from a druggist an "extract" of cod livers thinking they will get the benefits of an emulsion of cod liver oil.

The difference is very great. An "emulsion" contains real cod liver oil, which has had the hearty endorsement of the medical profession for many years, while an "extract" is a product which contains no oil and is highly alcoholic.

Scott's Emulsion is the standard emulsion of the world. It guarantees the highest grade of real cod liver oil, skilfully blended with glycerine and hypophosphites, and is endorsed by good physicians everywhere.

Saves Eggs

Royal Baking Powder makes it possible to produce appetizing and wholesome cakes, muffins, corn bread, etc., with fewer eggs than are usually required.

In many recipes the number of eggs may be reduced and excellent results obtained by adding an additional quantity of Royal Baking Powder, about a teaspoon, for each egg omitted. The following tested recipe is a practical illustration:

SPONGE CAKE

1 cup sugar
½ cup water
2 eggs
2 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup cold water
1 teaspoon flavoring

DIRECTIONS: Boil sugar and water until syrup spins a thread and add to the stiffly beaten whites of eggs, beating until the mixture is cold. Sift together three times, the flour, salt and baking powder; beat yolks of eggs until thick; add a little at a time flour mixture and egg yolks alternately to white of egg mixture, stirring after each addition. Add ½ cup cold water and flavoring. Mix lightly and bake in moderate oven one hour.

The old method called for six eggs and no baking powder

Grain Market Prices Lower

Manitoba Cash Wheat is One Cent Lower—The Cattle Market

There was only a steady and active trade at the stock yards yesterday with no change in prices. The quality of the offerings which are coming on the market at the present time is decidedly good and much better than those of a week or two ago. There was a fast demand for all real choice stock from the opening to-day and the market only lasted a couple of hours. Choice steers were in demand around yesterday's high prices. Butcher bulls and fat cows also found a ready market at firm prices. Stockers and feeders were a little improved on the market. Milkers and springers were rather inactive. Canners and cutters were in good demand at steady prices.

Light sheep and choice lambs were in fast demand and prices held steady. Calves were unchanged.

A large number of people at the Union Stock Yards are talking much higher prices and say that before long present levels will be looked upon as cheap. While it does not seem probable that prices will go so high as to make our top levels now seem insignificant alter on the situation in the country could be a whole lot better. There are districts where the farmers claim that they have no more animals for market while in other sections the quality is so poor and the cattle not finished that it would not pay to dress them. Another factor against the stand for lower prices is the small run which is coming on the market almost daily.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust dirt and dandruff.

DOCTORS ADVISE IRON FOR THE BLOOD

Anaemia, pale faces, nervousness, stomach troubles, watery blood, etc., are sure signs of thin blood. Dr. Mainerise says he can take any of these cases and cure any one of them in ten days by giving Iron for the blood, and Phosphorus for the nerves, "called Bonised Phosphorus with Iron." I have found that 99 per cent. of all stomach, liver, kidney, bowel, nerve, etc., troubles are traced right back to the blood. Just as soon as Bonised Phosphorus with Iron is given it is almost immediately absorbed by the system the blood taking the iron while the nerves are soothed by the phosphorus, making you eat better, feel better, look better, digest better, and finally you will be made 100 per cent. stronger. Do not be taking all sorts of patent medicines and laxatives which only ruin your system; go to the root of the trouble and start taking Iron and strengthen your blood, restore your nerves, and your digestion and will recharge your whole system with new life. Bonised Phosphorus with Iron is dispensed by one druggist in each city. F. C. Weber dispenses it for Peterboro

NATIONAL ANTHEMS COMPOSED TO ORDER

Will Australia get a national anthem out of this empire crisis? Who can say? Are national anthems ever written to order? We doubt it. If, like Topsy, they don't "just grow," there's something artificial and unsatisfactory about them, something like paper roses. Portugal, on the establishment of the republic, asked for a new national anthem, but we have not heard she has got one to suit. Like poets, national anthems are born, not made.

The fact is, that it is not always the official national anthem which is the real one. For instance, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," sung to our own "God Save" tune, is the official anthem of the United States, but it takes secondary place to "The Star Spangled Banner," "Yanke Doodle," "John Brown's Body," and, in the south, "Dixie Land." These were all anthems hot from the heart in times of crisis.

Even the "Marseillaise," which is the official anthem of the French republic, used to be anathema to the Government. It is an anthem of revolt, not of loyalty. It was a song of revolution. But now that a republic has ousted royalty it is shown in at the front door.

Really our own "God Save the King" was the merest accident. Who commissioned it? It simply happened. But, even so, it is not the best of our national songs. That place is worthily held by "Rule, Britannia!" Morover, that old Jacobite song, written to an exiled monarch, is really much better in every way than our official anthem—"Here's a Health Unto His Majesty."

It is surprising how seldom Scots sing the National Anthem. What do they sing when they foregather either at home or at the far ends of the earth? Why, "Auld Lang Syne," of course! That's the Scottish national anthem!

OLDEST VOLUNTEER

Death of Major Gant on His 100th Birthday

By the death of Major John Castle Gant, at the age of 100, England has lost its oldest volunteer. He caught a chill on his birthday and died at his picturesque residence, Willowhyrst, Cuddingly, Sussex. He joined the volunteers at the age of forty-three, when fears of a French invasion resulted in the formation of the force, and he claimed to have provided the humorists of the day with much material for pictorial satire. He was a great friend of Mr. T. Delane, the famous editor of The Times.

Born at Herne (Kent), he was the son of Lieut.-Colonel John Castle Gant, formerly Deputy-Governor of the Tower of London. He was educated for the army, but left it for the law, and became one of the best known solicitors in the City.

He served as a special constable during the Chartist riots. To temperate habits and plenty of outdoor exercise he attributed his long life. He followed the war news closely, and hoisted a flag in front of his house every morning when the papers contained good news.

GIRL PLOWED BETTER

Man Bowed to Superior "Finish" of Lincolnshire Maid

Here is an interesting result of war time exigencies in England: Miss Elsie Jackson, aged 19, of Tattersett Thorpe, defeated Mr. Tom Wilkinson, aged 51, of Dovecote Farm, Wainfleet, in a ploughing match for $50 a side on Mr. F. Sanl's farm at Wainfleet, Lincolnshire. The test was on barley stubble in heavy ground. Each competitor had to plough half an acre, setting two ridges and one furrow. The work of Miss Jackson, who has been ploughing since she was ten years old, was declared by the judge, Mr. Tayler, of Welton, to be more finished than that of her competitor.

Nervous Headaches And Neuralgic Pains

Are the Surest Symptoms of Exhausted Nerves—Lasting Cure Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Peterborough, Ont., March 5.—Among the hundreds of cures being reported from this city as the result of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the most prominent symptoms are headaches and neuralgic pains. About one-fifth of all the blood in the human body is consumed in the brain in the manufacture of nerve force. When the blood gets thin and watery the nerves are starved and you have headaches, neuralgic and sciatic pains. Dr. Chases Nerve Food, by forming new, rich blood, affords lasting cure of such ailments.

Miss Edythe Cowles, 563 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "For some years I have suffered from nervousness, sleeplessness and a run-down system. Many times chloroform had to be resorted to to relieve the severe headaches I used to have. I had doctored for years, and had been advised that it would be necessary to have an operation, but I kept putting it off. Finally, I procured a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had taken many of the pills found that they were doing me good, so I continued the treatment. My headaches have ceased, I can now eat and sleep fine. I have not felt so well for many years. This is the only medicine I have taken, and I can give the full credit to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I have already recommended it to many of my friends."

Mrs. W. T. Abbott, 536 Patterson street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "My system was in a run-down condition and I was troubled with nervousness and sleeplessness. For some time, also, I had been bothered with neuralgia, and, although I tried many remedies, it was without success! Upon the advice of a friend, I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found in five or six days that my neuralgia was cured, and I have not been troubled in this way since. I also find that now I can eat and sleep well, and I give full credit of this great benefit to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I might also mention that I had lost considerable in weight, but after using the Nerve Food I gained back the flesh I had lost. My husband has also found Dr. Chase's Nerve Food of great benefit to him, and uses it when he feels run down from overwork."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Death Claims

One of the largest American Life Insurance Companies (The New York Life) lost by death during a period of only twelve months, the year of 1916, no less than Nine Thousand Eight Hundred and Fifty-seven policy holders, a number nearly equal to one half the whole population of the City of Peterborough, through disease and accident as follows: Heart Disease carried off 1,270, Bright's Disease 913, Consumption 882, Pneumonia 818, Cancers and Tumors 802, War 328, Accidents 589, Apoplexy 559, Disease of Arteries 457, Disease of Digestive Organs 315, Paralysis 221, Diabetes 214.

As to ages 689 were 30 years or under; 1,519 were between 30 and 40; 2,471 between 40 and 50; 2,726 between 50 and 60; and 2,416 were over 60.

During the same period, the year 1916, the same Company declined 9,995 applicants for life insurance totalling $23,852,294. It is safe to assume the majority of those 9,995 applicants were at one time insurable risks, but THEY WAITED TOO LONG.

How about yourself Mr. Reader? WHERE DO YOU STAND? Are you still insurable? Perhaps next week or next month YOU may have waited too long. If you are still insurable we can sell you the best policy that money can buy.

WOMAN HAD NERVOUS TROUBLE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.

West Danby, N. Y.—"I have had nervous trouble all my life and have tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it from time to time and it straightened me out in good shape. I work nearly all the time, as we live on a farm and I have four girls. I do all my sewing and other work with their help. It shows that I stand it real well. I took the Compound when my ten year old daughter came and it helped me a lot. I have also had my oldest girl take it and it did her lots of good. I keep it in the house all the time and recommend it."—Mrs. DEWITT SINCERBAUGH, West Danby, N. Y.

Sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, backache, headaches, dragging sensations, all point to female derangements which may be overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

COLONEL'S DELUSION

It was shown at the inquest that Colonel Nicolay Bellakoff, of the Russian army, on a military mission to England, shot himself because he thought he was dying from tuberculosis. This, Dr. Spilsbury said, was a delusion. He was found dead in his sleeping berth in a train from Scotland, where he had successfully carried out work connected with his mission. Lieutenant Boris Anrep, of the Russian Government Committee in London, said that when he went to Scotland the colonel left a curious document, stating what was to be done to complete his work and telling his assistant where his papers were. It showed that he desired to leave his work in perfect order.

WOMEN COOKS IN ARMY

Englishwomen Need More Than a Domestic Science Diploma

There are women who have been in the British army for many months; they wear khaki; they are rationed; and they live in hutments with their unit. They look upon it as "a good life." They are officered by women, and promotion is from the ranks. "Sergeant Fat" was a private until she showed particular aptitude in clarifying the enormous quantities of fat which have to be melted down in the cookhouse.

The women's captain herself—Miss Thompson in private life—was head cook for many months. An old sergeant taught her her job, although she has a domestic science certificate. Cooking for the army is a slightly different thing to a demonstration lesson to a dozen ladies. One of the head cooks laughs now and says: "When I go home and start making a pudding I am afraid I shall be putting 75 pounds of rice on to boil!"

Sixty-six women of the Women's Legion cook for 4,000 soldiers in one particular camp. Altogether there are some 2,000 women army cooks. In one of three kitchens the following were the quantities for a day's dinner: 600 pounds stew; 1,000 pounds roast beef; 300 pounds beans; 7½ cwt. potatoes; 300 pounds suet pudding; 50 pounds of sago and 15 gallons of milk.

WAR BY MOTOR

An Important and Striking Feature in Present Strife

One of the most striking features of the present war is the great part which motor traction is playing. The motor bus carries troops to the trenches; commanders move from point to point in the fighting line in their motor-cars; practically all transport is done by motor from the railheads to the fighting line; guns are moved by motor; there are motor ambulances and motor kitchens, while the despatch rider of to-day is no longer the dashing cavalryman, but the goggled motor cyclist, who whizzes along the roads at thirty to forty miles an hour.

One of the motor novelties of the war is the motor distillery, in which vast quantities of water are sterilized instantaneously, and provide the troops with an abundance of perfectly pure drinking water. These may be said to run alongside the motor kitchens, while the motor repairing workshop, that runs on wheels, is ready to go anywhere and everywhere when a breakdown in guns or engineering equipment necessitates its aid.

Perhaps the most wonderful of these up-to-date war motor contrivances is the motor plough, which is largely used by Germans. This plough cuts a trench a yard in length, in width, and in depth in the space of one minute. In the Battle of the Marne fifteen of these ploughs were found abandoned by their owners in the hurry and confusion of the memorable retreat. And they have since been utilized by the allies to great purpose. Under favorable conditions the motor plough can cut 100 yards of trenches in a single hour, throwing up the soil on one side to form a parapet above the gap. This machine does the work, therefore, of 200 men, and can, of course, be kept going night and day.

FAILURE OF POLICY OF LAND GRANTING

Less Than One-third of Cropped Prairie Land is Farmed, Says Sir James Aikins

The following is from an address by Sir James Aikins, Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba and President of the Canadian Bar Association, before a joint meeting of credit men, sales managers and commercial travellers at Winnipeg: If the persons who took up homesteads and pre-emptions had been really interested in farming and qualified to farm, the policy of the Federal Government crystallized forty years ago in the Dominion Lands Act would have shown much better results. Its purpose was to give to actual settlers and their families 160 or 320 acres for residence and cultivation.

Proved by Statistics

Let me give you some figures! As at September 30th, 1916—Total lands granted in homesteads is 56,612,556 acres. Military homesteads, pre-emptions and purchased homesteads increase this to 62,775,516. The following statement shows estimates of areas under crop in the three prairie provinces in 1916, according to the Census and Statistics Branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce, July, 1916: Wheat, 16,493,200; oats, 8,253,400; barley, 956,000 and other grains, 3,000; or total acreage, 14,690,600.

In proper farming a portion of the cultivated land should be rested, allowing one-third more for fallow, making a total of 24,345,800. And one-third more of last-mentioned acreage for pasturage, making a total of 32,344,000 acres. Can you estimate the loss to the prairie provinces by reason of the non-use of over thirty millions of acres of the very best land originally granted to persons for residence and cultivation?

Other Huge Alienations

That is not all of this fabulous policy, for the Crown has alienated other lands: Railways, Hudson's Bay Co., school lands sale, 56,647,000 acres; sales, special and half-breed grants, 5,180,646; mining lands sold, 151,705; mounted police, etc., 21,875; or a total of 62,511,841 acres; less H. B. Co. and mining lands, 4,631,691, making a net total of 27,680,150 acres.

The total, without Hudson's Bay Company and mining lands, is 39,963,750 acres; of the estimated arable lands in the three Provinces granted in freehold, only about 25,354,000 acres are used for farming—less than a quarter of the granted land.

GLASS OF WATER BEFORE YOU EAT ANY BREAKFAST

Wash Poison From System Each Morning and Feel Fresh as a Daisy.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realise the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, woman and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S TWO GORE SKIRT.
By Anabel Worthington.

This model is one of the latest arrivals this season, as you have probably heard.

On simple lines, but with a distinguished air, this model is cut in two gores, gathered at the top and joined to shaped yokes, mounted on a raised waistline. The gathered heading has the effect of pushing up the waistline further—it gives grace to the outline of the figure underneath and increases the youthful effect, but its use is optional. The skirt drapes beautifully from the yoke front and back and in size 24 measures at the lower edge 2¾ yards.

With a waist in the same color as the material employed in making the garment, this skirt will make a pretty afternoon costume, especially with the heading—or it may relate with a practical blouse, for general utility wear. Silk, satin, serge, wool checks, stripes and mixtures are some of the desirable weaves for developing. The combination of style, fit and value all to your liking may be had, if you will copy the model from the pattern.

Even though one may not have a knowledge of the fashion movement in skirts, it will be easy for her to believe that the illustration shows one of the late arrivals because of its youthful effect, and fashion has been so considerate of age and figure

The pattern No. 8,064 cuts in sizes 24-32 waist. To make in size 24 requires 2¾ yards 54 inch material.

To obtain the pattern, send to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Mad Devils

What Became of a Cargo of Cocoanuts

By CHARLES EDWARD BANGS

As the Ylang rounded the headland I noticed off to the starboard two hulks, red with rust, awash under the branches of the big trees that grew in a dense forest far out into the shallow water of the lagoon. One steamer was wedged in between great boles, the tops of its masts showing oddly above the overhanging greenery. The other lay well over upon its side, like some portly marine monster that had taken shelter there from the tropic sun. How any person not a positive idiot could have blundered into such a place passed my comprehension.

The repeated blasts from our whistle had roused the owner of the cocoanut grove that was to furnish us our cargo, and presently the white drill suit and pith helmet which we always associate with the white man in the tropics appeared in the stern of a boat which glided out from under the trees. Before our gangplank was fairly lowered a tall, rawboned young Englishman, distinctly of the "gentleman" type, came over the ship's side and introduced himself as Shackleford, the man with whom I had contracted to carry a load of nuts to Liverpool.

"No, I haven't a black on the place," he explained in response to an inquiry of mine as we took our places in his flat bottomed boat, manned wholly by Chinamen, and started for his bungalow, whose corrugated roof blazed in the intense sunlight through a rift in the cocoanut grove. "It costs three times as much for Chinese labor, but for some reason I can't get a nigger to come near the plantation."

"That's strange."

"Wait till tonight and you'll hear as horrible a row as you ever heard. Then you'll know. The mountains back there are alive with apes. That is why I put up a twenty-five foot high barbed wire fence."

That evening we were sitting in the bungalow, sipping whisky and soda and swapping yarns about Penang, when a volley of barks, sharp as the rattle of musketry, made me spring up in alarm.

Shackleford put down his glass and haw-hawed. "It's only those blasted apes," he explained when he had managed to control his mirth. "Take down that rifle and come along."

Armed with the rifles, we made our way to the edge of the grove nearest the spur of the mountain. As we approached a chorus of snarls greeted us, and in the clear starlight I saw a host of infuriated apes hurling themselves against the barbed wire fence.

For a time the brutes paid little heed to our fusillade. Then, under the leadership of a huge gray ape, they broke and made for cover.

The great grizzled brute was the last to retire, and at the edge of the jungle it turned and gibbered at us in a way that made my flesh creep. It seemed to voice the fathomless hatred of the whole jungle world for the usurper man.

The next morning on our way back to the steamer I asked Shackleford about the two wrecks.

"Oh, I fancy the fool captains could not steer straight," he replied lightly. "Longstreth—that's the chap I bought the grove from—said that both ships were loaded with cocoanuts. He would not talk much about it, though—too sour to talk about anything."

Later, to satisfy my curiosity, I rowed over and had a look at the hulks, and as I examined them I noted two facts that kept me speculating for days. Before either steamer went into its present position the boats had been casually slashed away, and there wasn't a single cocoanut to be seen in either hold.

That night I spent ashore again with Shackleford, and when I returned to my ship the following morning I found it in an ominous state of excitement. Usually the Chinese portion of it occupied the forward part of the main deck, eating and sleeping in the corners among the steam winches. The lascars had always claimed the forecastle head, where their tall, gaunt bodies and swathed heads seemed an inseparable part of the ship. Now, however, race and caste were forgotten, and turbans and pigtails mingled promiscuously in groups that whispered eagerly in a dozen corners.

At sight of me they quickly dispersed, but with those two rusty hulks looming up yonder as object lessons I took prompt measures to forestall a possible mutiny. Summoning the first mate, a half caste from Calcutta that I had picked up in Penang when MacPherson died of cholera, I locked the door behind him, left my revolver on the table, where he could meditate upon its use as we talked, and then asked him a few pointed questions. He turned white under his inky skin, but soon pulled himself together and began to lie to me. I knew it by the way his eyelids flickered. The bay was too hot for even a Chinaman to live on; the lagoon was full of sharks; the typhoon season was coming on—these and a dozen other reasons for leaving at once slipped from his oily tongue and left me more puzzled than ever.

After that experience I spent no more nights ashore, but watched continually for the slightest hint of rebellion. Early the next morning when the cocoanuts began to arrive on the big bamboo rafts I noted with a grin of satisfaction that all hands set to work packing them into the hold with an alacrity which they had never before manifested in my service.

The following evening we put out to sea, the men working like demons to get away before night shut down. Shackleford laughing all the while at their eagerness to be rid of what he declared to be "the finest spot east of Suez." His Chinamen—I shall never forget that last glimpse of them—squatted upon the empty bamboo rafts, their cues wound about their unshaved heads, the sweat still streaming down their naked bodies to the flimsy cotton pantaloons corded about their waists, and viewed our departure out of their narrow eyes with features as impassive as those of a stone Buddha. What did they know about the two rusty hulks, the gray "thing" that haunted them, and what had they told my crew? I wondered. Worn out with a trying week, I turned in.

A shock hurled me from my berth, and as I groped about in the darkness for the key of the door the sound of crashing timber and of branches trailing across the cabin window made me guess my surroundings. Springing on deck, I turned instinctively to the wheel, and there, bowed over it like an old man and clutching the spokes with hairy hands, was a huge gray ape—the very monster Shackleford and I had failed to bring down the night of the raid upon the cocoanut grove!

At sight of me it relinquished its hold upon the wheel and sprang at me, baring its teeth in sudden rage. Whipping out my pistol, I began to fire and back away and brought it down with a shot in its gaping mouth just as it was reaching out its horrible corded arms to seize me. As it collapsed with a gasping shudder at my very feet I sprang backward from sheer repulsion and in doing so fell into the lagoon through a hole in the railing that the thick branch of a tree had carried away.

Not till then did the full significance of what had transpired dawn upon me. Crew there was none, but apes from the surrounding trees and the two rusty hulks that had so puzzled me and that now lay on either side came swarming upon the steamer till they covered everything—winches, forecastle head, the empty davits, the spare anchors, the very rigging—with a gray, writhing mass that struggled and fought and screamed in a wild rush for the cocoanuts, which could easily be reached through the main hatch, left open to prevent overheating. Swimming round to the rudder, now completely out of water above the madly racing screw, I climbed up beyond the reach of sharks and listened to the appalling pandemonium till the last cocoanut must have been removed from the hold, when the brutes gradually dispersed through the forest.

Afraid to venture back on deck, at daylight I mounted a piece of the round house that had been swept overboard and made my way on the incoming tide up the channel which led to the plantation. On the edge of the grove I paused in incredulous wonder, and then the truth came home to me. Under a fierce attack of the apes the wire fence had at last given way, and the cocoanut grove was in ruins. Shackleford's bungalow I found in a state of pillage so complete that only the four upright posts remained, and the flimsy huts occupied by the Chinese laborers were scattered about as if struck by a typhoon.

Not far from the ruins I found Shackleford's beautifully stained meerschaum pipe trampled into the earth by a host of passing feet, and protruding from under a tattered cocoanut leaf was a Chinaman's cue, streaked with gray, but no Celestial at the severed end. Prepared for the worst, I was hastening down the newly beaten path toward the jungle when a groan to my left attracted my attention, and, rushing over, I found Shackleford and his Chinamen neatly trapped under the barbed wire fence.

"You see," Shackleford explained when I had pried up the edge of the deadly netting, which they were unable to raise with their bare hands because of the inch long barbs, "we were poking the bally brutes off the fence with sharpened bamboos and having no end of fun when their weight doubled the whole thing over and shut us into as fine a little fort as a fellow could wish for. Ha, ha!"

Shackleford, followed by a score of bedraggled Chinamen, crawled out stiffly from his involuntary but lucky imprisonment and looked ruefully at his blood spattered clothes. "They ripped and tore at the netting like a lot of mad devils," he continued, "and the blood from their lacerated feet came through on us like a shower of warm rain, but none of us was hurt except Ah Cong over there. He was a bit careless and let his pigtail stick out through the netting. Lucky thing I had a knife, you sour old heathen!" turning to a grizzled Chinaman whose cue had been severed close to his head, "or that big ape that got hold of the end of it would have pulled it out by the roots." And Shackleford laughed uproariously as he reached for his pipe, examined the coloring with the eye of a connoisseur and then began to dig the dirt out of the bowl. "But I don't understand what made the brutes all quit and go tearing away toward the bay," he added thoughtfully as he opened his tobacco pouch.

For answer I led him down to the third derelict and showed him the empty hold.

HAD BOILS

FOR SIX MONTHS
B. B. B. DROVE THEM AWAY

When the blood becomes impure the very first symptoms which manifest themselves are a breaking out of various forms of skin trouble such as boils, pimples, sores, etc., and to get rid of these troubles you must cleanse the blood thoroughly with a good blood remedy.

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters.

Thousands of people from one end of Canada to the other have used it during the past forty years, and have nothing but words of praise for its cleansing properties.

Mr. Rufus Beers, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I want to say a few words about your medicine, Burdock Blood Bitters. I had boils for over six months and sometimes was so bad I could not work. I tried lots of cures but nothing would drive them away for good until I took B.B.B. In a short time I was all better. It is a dandy medicine. I keep it in the house all the time."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont., but so well and favourably is it known that there are many imitations on the market. See that our name appears on the wrapper.

If Stomach Hurts Drink Hot Water

"If dyspeptics, sufferers from gas, wind of flatulence, stomach acidity or sourness, gastric catarrh, heartburn, etc., would take a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia in half a glass of hot water immediately after eating, they would soon forget they were ever afflicted with stomach trouble, and doctors would have to look elsewhere for patients." In explanation of these words a well known New York Physician stated that most forms of stomach trouble are due to stomach acidity and fermentation of the food contents of the stomach combined with an insufficient blood supply to the stomach. Hot water increases the blood supply and bisurated magnesia instantly neutralizes the excessive stomach acid and stops food fermentation, the combination of the two, therefore, being marvelously successful and decidedly preferable to the use of artificial digestants, stimulants, or medicines for indigestion.

Rameses Is No More But His Germs Live

ALBANY, N.Y. — It will interest many and probably frighten a few to know that disease germs live thousands of years, and survive about everything but fire, and maybe that also.

Dr. W. J. O'Sullivan, sanitary experts of New York, declared at a legislative committee hearing on the Mohansic bills that scientists are now taking cultures from mummies buried four thousand years ago and that they show the pathogenic germ in a state of hibernation. Under proper moisture and heat the deadly germs quickly come to life. He made his statement in an argument in favor of the Wagner-Bloch bills, which are aimed at the protection of New York's water supply from sewage from the Mohansic State Hospital and the Yorktown Training School for Boys.

Senator Slater of Westchester, appeared against the bills and with other Westchester representatives, asked that a commission be named to find a solution for the pollution problem. Edward S. Malone, Assistant Corporation Counsel of New York, said that New York City is willing to pay its share of the cost of abandoning the two institution sites.

The Merchants' Association led in the fight for the passage of the Wagner-Bloch bills.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

HEEL SHAVED OFF BY RUNAWAY OUTFIT.

WABASH, March 21.—So close a call from serious injury did Miss Quenie Mason have from a runaway team on Wellington street, Chatham, that the heel of her shoe was shaved off by the outfit. With her sister, Miss Laura Mason she took refuge in Christ churchyard from a team owned by Harry Urquhart of Chatham township, frightened by the band of the 186th, which had thrown the driver from the wagon, when its wild dash its smashed the tongue of the wagon against the market. The team followed the young woman into the churchyard and Miss Mason fell so close to the wagon that it took the heel clean off one shoe.

The foot was injured to some extent, and Miss Mason was assisted to the police station by Captains Blakely and Wright, who summoned Dr. Bray. The team was unscratched.

The sense of refreshing cleanliness that follows the use of a real scalp prophylactic, is comforting in the extreme

PRINCESS MARY STILL IN THE SCHOOLROOM

Is Shy and no Book Lover But Likes Outdoor Sports

Princess Mary will attain her 17th birthday on April 26th, but Queen Mary has no intention of introducing her daughter in the world as a grown-up young lady till after she is 18. As a matter of fact the Princess looks younger than her real age, and in mind and education she is younger, for though, naturally, she has had every educational advantage she has been brought up so simply that in mind she remains somewhat undeveloped.

To a certain extent she inherits her mother's shyness and lack of geniality. Queen Mary even now will shed tears of sheer nervousness at the prospect of receiving an Ambassador and his suite, though she will converse with perfect aplomb, intelligence, and interest with a doctor at a large hospital or will present prizes in public to poor children with a charming little greeting for each recipient in the view of cheering thousands.

The Princess inherits some of the traits of her great-grandmother, Queen Victoria. She has, like her ancestors, no sense of humor, and in spite of the sensible upbringing of her parents has a considerable idea of her own importance. She is something of an autocrat among her brothers, and at Sandringham, the charming country house of the King and Queen in Norfolk, there is sometimes a good deal of sparring and an exchange of much plainness of speech.

Princess Mary does not care much for books, though she is a good linguist, having had French and German governesses from her earliest childhood. She is devoted to outdoor life, especially to riding. It is no secret that she would much like to ride astride, as so many of her friends are doing in the park, but this the Queen sternly forbids. No doubt her Majesty wisely turns her head when in the privacy of the Sandringham paddocks her daughter, springing on the back of her pony with or without a saddle—it is all one to her—tears madly up and down with her hair flying and more often than not both feet out of the stirrups.

Like her mother, the Princess takes but very little interest in dress. Even her beautiful golden hair is tossed back as a tiresome mane, while at 16 she leaves her clothes entirely to her mother, who sets herself conscientiously to the performance of a duty for which she is entirely unfitted. Many people think it is impossible to make a child plain and ungraceful, but certainly that result has been achieved many times by her Majesty of England during the childhood of Princess Mary. At a flower show, in brilliant June sunshine, the poor child appeared swathed in hot black serge with no relieving piece of lace or tulle, because her grandfather, the late King Edward, had recently died. "Surely," said a sympathetic mother in the crowd, "a black sash on a white dress would have met the case."

The daughter strikingly resembles her mother in character and looks. Though not in the least pretty, she has a pleasing appearance rather marred by a hardness of expression. The blue eyes do not often melt to tenderness, and the mouth can set in a very haughty curve. Only those who know the young Princess—and the Queen—in the intimacy of home life have any idea of the genuine kindness of heart and thought for the comfort and happiness of others which exist under those rather hard and repellent exteriors.

Neither Ladies Nor Helpers

Mrs. Cloudesley Brereton is leading an educational campaign to spread what she calls the old-fashioned ideas of the well-bred English gentlewoman concerning servants.

That the women leaders of England, from feudal times on, never have believed they lost caste by understanding kitchen science is her contention. She believes most servant troubles are due to the mistresses' ignorance. She advocates domestic service as a career for educated women.

If the educated woman was to be the domestic handmaiden of the future, Mrs. Brereton said, it must be as a friend and colleague and not as serf and dependent. The new type of servant, she said, certainly would not be that known generally as the "lady help," who was seldom a lady and very often not a help.

Tigris Expedition Part of the Plan

dad. This attack was made by an advance column under General Townsend, which then retired three miles because of lack of water, but took possession of the battlefield two days later, with the Turks making a stand only ten miles from Bagdad. Townsend took nearly 1,500 prisoners, while his wounded numbered 2,500.

This British victory was followed by Townsend's enforced retreat and his final surrender at Kut, which has been noted earlier in this resume of the Tigris operations.

FIRES FROM AEROPLANE

Can Detect Forest Dangers When Many Miles Away

A fire ranger who works from an aeroplane says: At an elevation of 1,500 feet on a clear day, a fire 60 miles away in any direction is visible to the naked eye. It is not a case of finding the fire, but to locate it correctly is the job. Smoke will show up very plainly from the air. Mr. Vilas reports that during a flight across Lake Michigan from St. Joseph to Chicago, he was completely out of sight of land or anything for that matter for over three-quarters of an hour at an altitude of 4,500 feet. The first thing that he saw was the smoke from the Chicago rolling mills. This was in sight over ten minutes before any shore line was visible at all.

People often ask what a country looks like from the air. It is difficult to describe it except that it looks like a large painted map on a small scale without section lines. The efficiency of an aeroplane in spotting a forest fire is without doubt as practicable as any use to which it could be put. I was very much surprised with what ease a fire could be spotted and located, and there is no question in my mind but what the aeroplane will practically do away with some of the observation towers.

Lightning Hits Chestnuts

Lightning shows a marked preference for chestnut trees, according to data based on reports submitted by foresters. Of a total of about 2,000 trees struck by lightning in four years, 686 were chestnut. Pitch pine comes next with 327 trees struck, and then follow in order rock oak, white pine, hemlock, red oak, white oak, black oak, locust, and sugar maple. Black birch is at the foot of the list with only one tree struck in four years. Poplar and walnut come next, only two of each being struck.

RURAL CREDIT FOR PRAIRIE PROVINCES

Long Agitation Led to Fruitful and Historic Conferences of Three Governments at Winnipeg

After agreeing with the representatives of the Manitoba Cabinet on the principal features of the inter-provincial rural credits system the members of the Alberta and Saskatchewan Cabinets delegated to the conference returned home. The conference was concluded late at night after a thorough discussion which lasted two days. The conference was a momentous one, being the first of its kind where three provinces enter simultaneously into the establishment of a system which is designed to mean a great deal to the farmers, who are the principal factor in the populations of all three provinces.

Uniformity Desired

The rural credits movement is the result of an agitation of long standing on the part of the organized farmers for some system by which the agriculturists could get cheaper money when they wished to borrow. The demand came from all the prairie provinces. The united action of the governments in seeking to establish a system which would be uniform in its main features is considered to be one of the most striking and momentous developments in Canadian history and bound to mean much to the West.

Very "Brown" Indeed.

The system approved at the conference was largely rounded into shape by Hon. Edward Brown and has been explained by him to various representative bodies. The Brown scheme will form the basis for the rural credits acts in the other two provinces, but there will be minor differences in regard to the part to be played in the working out of the system by the municipalities. A rather curious coincidence was that the conference discussed the Brown proposals in the brown room of the Fort Garry hotel.

Hon. Edward Brown and Premier Norris met other members of the Legislative Committee and reported the progress which had been made at th conference. The Legislative Committee sanctioned what had been done. The other members present were Geo. W. Prout, member for Kildonan and St. Andrews; Arthur Lobb, member for Rockwood, and Jacques Parent, member for Morris.

FIRES COST ONLY $500

Modern Forest Protection Saved Oregon Huge Valuable Areas

Oregon, which enjoys modern forest protection, suffered practically no loss from forest fires in one year, according to State Forester Elliott, despite the fact that the timbered and brush area owned by the government and private individuals and companies comprised approximately 32,000,000 acres. The entire damage from fires, Mr. Elliott said was less than $500. The year previously the loss on privately-owned timber lands totalled $39,000.

Oregon then had 12,125,000 acres within the National Forests, of which about 10,000,000 acres was commercial timber land. There were 10,000,000 acres of privately-owned timber land patroled by the state and timber owners. In addition to this area there were approximately 3,000,000 acres of brush land in the southern part of the state. A total of 114 fires were reported to our office in July and the first part of August, 52 of them being in Jackson and Josephine counties. These fires were extinguished without damage of consequence."

HAD AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

For 5 or 6 Years

Diseases and disorders of the heart and nervous system have become frightfully prevalent of late years.

One can scarcely pick up a paper but he will find recorded instances of sudden deaths through heart failure, or of prominent men and women unable to prosecute their ordinary business or profession on account of a breaking down of the nervous system.

We do not desire to unnecessarily alarm anyone, but to sound a word of warning.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, has shooting pains through it, it is time to stop and think.

To all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N. B., writes: "I had awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At the present time my sister is using them for nervousness and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

LONDON, March 20—The remains of the Duchess of Connaught were cremated. It is understood that this was the first instance of cremation in the Royal family. Prominent among the floral emblems at the memorial service in St. James, were large shamrock laurel leaves from the colonel and officers of the Duchess' Canadian regiment, a huge wreath of white flowers from the government and the people of Canada and a cross of pale pink carnations from the Province of Quebec.

SAFETY AT ANY SPEED

In both Series "18" FOUR and Series "18" SIX, Studebaker has concentrated in refining, perfecting, and strengthening one of the best full-floating axle systems ever put under a car, regardless of price.

In qualities of steels; in development of design; in accuracy of manufacture, Studebaker could not improve on its construction, even if it manufactured a car to sell for $5000.00.

The weight of the car; the strain of stopping, starting and driving the car; the strain of side-thrust in turning corners at high speed, are all absorbed by the giant strong axle housing, and all of these strains and the weight of the car, are carried on this housing on big Timken bearings.

ALLIED ADVANCE STILL CONTINUES

Extra Session Of U. S. Congress Is Called

MORE POSITIONS OCCUPIED BY THE ADVANCING ALLIES

Official Reports Indicate That More French Towns and Villages Have Come Into Possession of the French and British---"Retreating to Victory" is German Explanation of the Withdrawal on the Western Front---President Wilson Advances the Date of the Extra Session of Congress Which Will Meet on April 2nd.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, March 21.—The advance of the British forces against the Germans retreating to the "Hindenburg line" still continued to-day, despite the cold weather and snowstorms, according to the despatches received late this afternoon from the British headquarters.

PARIS (French Official Communique), March 21.—Ten additional villages were occupied by the French forces in further progress north and northeast of Soissons and to the left of Laon Road, according to to-day's statement.

"At Ham and on the St. Quentin Road, there were cavalry and infantry engagements," the War Office declared. "East of Ham the French yesterday carried Savriennois Castle and Jussy village, despite the energetic defence of a garrison.

"Around Verdun the French cleaned up a German trench which they had previously bombarded, north of Chambrettes Farm, where they found hundreds of dead.

"A German surprise attack on small posts south of Tahure, Ailly and Limey failed, the French taking many prisoners."

PARIS, March 21.—"We are now in a position where we can fight with equal strength of arms as long as necessary, having what our enemies do not have the sentiment that we are defending the cause of right and civilization."

So read a stirring document issued by the new Premier, Alexander Ribot, to-day, to the people of France.

It was his formal "cabinet declaration."

BERLIN, via Wireless, March 21.—Germany is "retreating to a victory." Another master stroke has been achieved by Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, and the Entente's plans for a great spring offensive has been destroyed, say the German officials.

Hhis, in brief, is the official explanation given for the first time to-day to the United Press, of Germany's retirement on the western front.

Germany is retreating to a victory because her armies are taking their places in new positions, long prepared. Those positions embody the newest lessons of the war. They will force the enemy to learn their trade all over again. They would astound tacticians if their full details were revealed, according to the German officials.

EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS ON APRIL 2

President Wilson Advances the Date in View of Recent Developments —Will Demand Drastic Measures to Protect American Commerce on the High Seas.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, March 21.—President Wilson has called an extra session of Congress for Monday, April 2nd. The President's action was taken following pressure by his Cabinet, members of Congress and the country at large.

The President will demand from Congress drastic measures to protect American commerce on the high seas. He is expected to announce that a state of war has existed between the United States and Germany since March 14, when the American steamer Algonquin was sunk. He will ask that some form of universal service be inaugurated at once to prepare the young men of America for proper and efficient service.

He immediately prepared the proclamation advancing the date of the extra session and at 9:30 left for a game of golf in spite of the fact that the day was damp and dreary. If President Wilson does not ask a war declaration, Congress may demand one.

In any event active steps will be taken to put the American navy and army on a war footing.

The President's decision was based on a tremendous appeal from the country for revenge for Germany's killing of American citizens.

The President's course marks the end of his constant efforts, efforts which have been alike strongly commended and bitterly condemned., to keep the country at peace, even with Germany, in order that it might "perform the greater service" of restoring reason to war- mad Europe.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Union League, a club of prominent Republicans, declares a state of war exists between Germany and the United States, and calls for action.

LONDON, March 21.—A man believed to be insane gained entrance to the home of Premier Lloyd George this afternoon, and was overpowered with difficulty when he demanded to see the Prime Minister.

The man was arrested.

LONDON, March 21.—It is now stated that casualties in the revolution in Petrograd reached six hundred killed and wounded. There will be public memorial service and fete day on Friday.

AMSTERDAM, March 21.—Rumours of a German revolution were in circulation on the Stock Exchange here to-day.

So far as was evident from undisturbed telegraphic connection of railway wires and the regular arrival here of German newspapers, there was no basis for the report.

The rumours, however, aroused intense excitement.

ADHERENTS OF THE OLD REGIME ARE BEING ARRESTED

Even Czar and His Family Are Reported to Have Been Included Among Those Ordered Detained General Amnesty is Promised by an Ukase

THE OLD ORDER GONE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, March 21.—A general political amnesty was declared in an ukase issued to-day by the Russian provisional government.

The new government is an established fact, declared Grand Duke Nicholas, in an interview at Tiflis telegraphed here today. "No restoration of the old order is possible." Russian troops in the Caucasus have crossed the frontier into Turkish territory toward Sakkis and are pursuing the enemy.

London, March 21.—Simultaneous with issuance of an ukase announcing amnesty to political prisoners, the new Russian Government to-day began wholesale arrests throughout Russia of adherents of the former bureaucratic regime. Even the Czar and his family were reported to have been included among those who were ordered detained.

At least one high dignitary of the Holy Russian church Rajeff, chief of the Holy Synod has been arrested.

Advices late this afternoon added to this list of prisoners, the names of General Gondatti, Governor-General of the Province of Amur.

London, March 21.—Special agency dispatch from Petrograd to-day declared that the new Provincial Government had ordered the former Czar and Czarina deprived of their liberty and brought back to Tsarkoe Selo.

Peterborough Boy Is Decorated For Bravery

The above picture will be of great interest to readers of The Examiner, inasmuch as it shows a well-known Peterborough boy receiving the recognition of his valour in the field. The photograph shows Pte. Bruce R. Blanchard, of the 21st Canadians, being decorated with the Military Medal by Brigadier General C. Greville Harston, at East Greenwich, England, on Jan. 4th.. Pte. Blanchard, who before the war was employed by Mr. C. R. Banks, left Peterborough in November, 1914, with the 57th quota to the 21st Battalion. He won his Military Medal by conspicuous bravery in the battle of the craters a year ago, when although seriously wounded he continued to hurl bombs at the enemy until his supply of grenades was exhausted. Pte. Blanchard was born in Lakefield, but lived nearly all his life in Peterborough. His father, Capt. W. H. Blanchard, and brother, are also overseas.

CANADA ADOPTS THE TERRITORIAL SYSTEM FOR FORCES OVERSEAS

Twenty-six Reserve Battalions Have Been Organized in England---Troops From Eastern Ontario Will Go to the Eastern Ontario Reserve and Thence to the 2nd and 21st Battalions at the Front--To-day's Orders and General Military News.

OTTAWA, March 20.—Details of the reorganization of the Canadian forces in England into reserve battalions and regiments on the territorial area plan, as announced some months ago, were given out to-day by the Minister of Militia. The force in England, with the exception of the battalions selected to form the 5th Division, has been redistributed into twenty-six reserve battalions and regiments, from which drafts are taken to reinforce the fifty-two battalions now at the front. The reserve battalions have been formed into reserve brigades in the usual manner, and they will in future supply reinforcements to certain specified overseas battalions with which they are linked. Drafts from Canada will be sent in turn to reinforce the reserve battalions in England, on the same territorial plan of keeping the men from the same districts together as far as possible.

HOW REORGANIZATION WORKS

For instance, two Western Ontario battalions, viz, the 4th Reserve Battalion and the 25th Reserve Battalion have been constituted, which will receive infantry drafts from Military District No. 1 (London), and will supply reinforcements therefrom to the linked overseas battalions which were originally recruited in that district, viz., the 1st, 18th, 160th, 161st and 2nd Pioneer Battalions.

Further drafts from the London area will be sent to the 4th Reserve Battalion, so that they may proceed either to the 1st or to the 18th Overseas Battalion, with which the 4th Reserve Battalion is linked; while drafts from Bruce county and Huron county will be sent to the 25th Reserve Battalion, so that they may join the 160th or 161st Overseas Battalions., originally raised in those counties.

BATTALIONS INTO REGIMENTS

The reserve battalions are further grouped into regiments for facility of administration. Thus the two western Ontario reserve battalions and the overseas battlions with which they are linked have been grouped together as the Western Ontario Regiment, which will have a regimental depot in England for the care of the personnel and records, and for other administrative purposes in connection with all of such battalions.

SCHEDULE FOR ONTARIO DISTRICTS.

The following schedule shows for each of the Ontario military districts the territorial regiments which have been constituted, the reserve battalions and the linked overseas battalions:—

Military District No. 1, Western Ontario Regiment, consists of: 4th Reserve Battalion, linked with 1st and 18th Overseas Battalions; and the 25th Reserve Battalion linked with the 2nd Pioneer Battalion 160th Battalion and the 161st Battalion.

Military District No. 2, 1st Central Ontario Regiment, consists of: 3rd Reserve Battalion, linked with 4th Overseas Battalion 19th Overseas Battalion, and 123rd Overseas Battalion; 5th Reserve Battalion, linked with 15th Overseas Battalion, 20th Overseas Battalion and 134th Overseas Battalion; 12th Reserve Battalion, linked with 3rd Overseas Battalion, 75th Overseas Battalion and 124th Overseas Battalion.

2nd Central Ontario Regiment consists of: 2nd Reserve Battalion, linked with 116th Overseas Battalion and 125th Overseas Battalion; 8th Reserve Battalion, linked with 58th Overseas Battalion, 119th Overseas Battalion, and 4th Canadian Mounted Rifles Battalion.

Military District No. 3, Eastern Ontario Regiment, consists of: 6th Reserve Battalion, linked with 2nd Overseas Battalion, 21st Overseas Battalion and 150th Overseas Battalion; 7th Reserve Battalion, linked with Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and 38th Overseas Battalion.

Pte. Wm. Webster Sage, of Toronto, has been added to the strength of the 247th Battalion.

Pte. H. Fagg of the 247th is taking the Armourer's course at Kingston.

QUAKER OATS CO. WILL REBUILD IN PETERBORO'

Announcement Communicated By Mr. W. H. Denham to Mayor Duffus and Conveyed to Council Last Night --Was Received From Mr. Robert Stuart Head of the Company in Chicago--Ask City to Build Overhead Bridge---By-law Will Be Submitted to Ratepayers.

The Quaker Oats Company will rebuild in Peterborough and begin work as soon as possible. This rousing announcement was made by Mayor Duffus last night and was greeted by a round of Aldermanic applause that expressed a relief from the uncertainty of the relocation of this splendid industry. His Worship stated that the news had been telephoned to him by Mr. W. H. Denham, who had received a brief but all inclusive telegram from Mr. Robert Stuart of Chicago.

The company's decision to reconstruct its plant in Peterborough is conditioned only by the citizens' sanction to the agreement approved by the City Council and Mr. Stuart at a conference here a few weeks ago.

WHAT THE COMPANY ASKS.

The terms of this tentative agreement are briefly, first the city shall build an overhead bridge on Hunter street; second also provide a bridge across the river from the foot of Dublin street; third, provide the company with a small strip of land along the C.P.R. spur line between Hunter and Simcoe streets to enable the straightening of the siding into the Quaker Oats yards, and fourth the closing of Mill street to be transferred to the company.

QUICKENING LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Analyzing these requests it will be noticed that the Quaker Oats Company has asked the city for no large concession. A new bridge over the Otonabee on Hunter street has become an absolute necessity. At the same time, the Ashburnham agitation for a street railway service has developed the resolution that a new bridge must provide street railway tracks. It must be also recognized that the rebuilding of the Quaker Oats plant is of vital interest to the East Ward. Hence, the company's first request merely crystallizes in one immediate action three public works the city had transferred to the future, viz.:—A new bridge, street railway accommodation, and the restoration of the Quaker Oats factory. In this matter the company simply asks Peterborough to carry out within the next year or two a project that had been indefinitely postponed.

THE DUBLIN STREET BRIDGE.

Before the devastating fire of December 11th, the two parties had practically reached an agreement whereby the city was to close Mill street and the east end of Murray street, and exchange this property for a strip of the Quaker Oats land north of London street to provide an approach to a new bridge above the company's dam. Hence the second term mentioned above practically covers the old agreement which was held up by the destruction of the factory. The Council now proposes to remove the Hunter street bridge to Dublin street, where it could be re-erected.

THE COMPANY'S NEW REQUEST.

The only new concession the Quaker Oats Company has asked from the city is a strip of land south of Hunter street adjoining the "spur line" sidings. This is required to improve the railway facilities, to straighten the present sidings, and to provide an adequate entrance into the company's yards.

IMMEDIATE ACTION BY COUNCIL.

"What we now require," Mayor Duffus said last night, "is united effort to carry out the agreement with the company. If we fulfill our promises it may mean more to the city than we immediately perceive. We must not lose one hour in getting things into shape so as to enable the company to proceed as soon as they are ready. The earlier the work is begun the better for the city. We must prepare a by-law to be presented to the people."

City Clerk Armstrong reminded the Council that the by-law will require a majority of three-fifths of those who vote on it.

Alderman Duncan asked that an effort be made to supply a sewer service to the new factory, thus doing away with the old method of direct emptying into the river above Hunter street.

THE PROBABLE COST.

The overhead bridge will probably cost over $200,000. City Engineer Parsons said he expected to have an estimate prepared by Thursday, when he will accompany Mayor Duffus to Toronto to confer with Sir Adam Beck. The Hydro-Electric Commission owns the Street Railway and is regarded as an interested party in the proposed extension to Ashburnham the overhead bridge will facilitate.

PREPARING AN AGREEMENT

City Solicitor Gordon was instructed to draw up at once an agreement to be signed by the city and the company. The sum to be borrowed for these several projects will undoubtedly exceed $200,000, but the Council is confident the people will endorse the entire agreement with the Quaker Oats Company.

The overhead bridge will extend from the foot of Sheridan street across to a point near the old McAllister mill.

Welcome News.

The Quaker Oats Company's decision will lift a weight from the public mind that has waited anxiously since December 11th for just such tidings. It brings the assurance that from the ashes of the grand old factory a pile will spring up probably as massive, and certainly embodying the latest ideas in construction. A special feature of the announcement is the retention and the renewal of the old association of Quaker Oats products with the name of Peterborough, an important advertising medium that was not sufficiently appreciated in the past. Moreover, the Quaker Oats Company, under the management of Mr. W. H. Denham, has proved itself the type of industry, from its managerial aspect, that Peterborough or any city should be proud to boast. Its methods, its paternalism, its very soul was hidden from the public until revealed by an accident where subsequent circumstances of relief impressed the citizens as never the flourishing days of high production. If Peterborough knew only the visible side of the Quaker Oats Company in the past, it was a result of the big business idea of hiding its softer light from the public.

Nothing will happen, it is hoped, to obstruct the development of Hunter street by the river to that stage which may be visualized as a centre of activity with grain barges drawing up to the big Quaker Oats mill, trains puffing back and forth beneath the overhead bridge and street cars rumbling across the river to Ashburnham. It is a glorious and an expansive picture and its possibility is in the present.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 21, 1917

THE QUAKER OATS STAYS.

It is a pleasure to be able to announce that the Quaker Oats Company has decided to remain in Peterborough—to re-build and re-establish its great plant, larger and better than ever. That is on conditions; and this is the point that our city authorities and the public have to bear in mind—a situation to be met by the promptest display of public spirit and enterprise on the part of the city council, backed by the business interests and the citizens, generally.

The intimation, as to rebuilding, was conveyed in a telegram from the head offices of the company, through Mr. Robert Stewart, and submitted last night to the city council. Generally, the conditions, attached to re-establishment of the works here is an overhead bridge at Hunter street; a bridge at London street and the concession of a piece of land, south of Hunter street and to the west of the present tracks.

These conditions are to be regarded as the more reasonable, since the overhead bridge is a necessity, and, in the case of both bridges, a desirable civic work; a most desirable thing in the public interest apart from its association with the retaining of the company in Peterborough. An overhead bridge has been discussed, time and again, for the past dozen years, and its erection postponed to a "more convenient season."

Evidently the more convenient season has arrived; and the matter must be faced with promptness, courage and resource. There must be no such discouraging delay as has obtained in the completion of the Canal, whose early operation is now more than ever a vital question that Peterborough must urge the settlement of with all its might, with all its energy and influence.

Without opportunity to study minutely the concessions required by the Quaker Oats Company, it is safe to pronounce them reasonable and not onerous, and worth to the city and citizens, directly or indirectly, many times over the financial responsibility they may represent, and which we should be promptly prepared to assume.

When fire laid low the splendid group of Quaker Oats buildings, under the keen sense of the moment, the public recognized the great loss—felt keenly the blow to our present and future prosperity, and felt also willing to meet any reasonable sacrifice that would restore the great industry. We must revive that feeling and in its spirit meet the responsibility that now comes to the city and citizens.

Apart from the great satisfaction arising from the specific material advantages of the re-establishment of the Quaker Oats works, is that due the great advertisement of the city of Peterborough as a good industrial centre, involved in the decision; especially in view of the large inducements offered by other places, which presented tempting advantages of location.

The vital question of the moment, reduced to brief terms is: The Quaker Oats Company wants to rebuild and re-establish here; do we want them to do so? Our answer should be prompt and practical.

THE POCKET TEST.

We read of a battle in earlier times in Europe that was so fiercely contested that the warring armies did not perceive the earthquake that "rolled unheededly away"; and at any other time than this great struggle, the tremendous import and danger of the threatened railway strike in the United States would have set us quaking, for our railway systems are so interlaced with those of the United States that the bad effects would have been almost as severely felt in this country. The railway men have got what they wanted, namely an eight hour day, with over-time pay beyond this statutory period. This means an extra sixty million dollars per year upon the companies' pay rolls. It seems that big business interests can be patriotic if, as is probable that was the motive that prompted the managers to yield to the demands of the Brotherhoods—to pay out an extra sixty millions to avert the calamity of paralysing railway traffic at the most critical time in the history of the United States. The pocket test of patriotism is the acid test.

SOWING THE WHIRLWIND.

Germany is filling her cup of retribution to the brim—compiling a terrible crime-list to be passed upon when the day of reckoning shall come, as soon it shall. Never in the history of civilized or even of savage warfare, has any nation so utterly outraged every international convention, and every law of war and humanity. Too-thick-headed to see that her mad methods of frightfulness have not frightened, but on the other hand set determination more firmly — roused the fiercer fighting spirit of her adversaries or executioners, but has alienated and outraged every neutral civilized and even every large heathen nation—failing to see a lesson in this, Germany still pursues her ruthless methods of barbarity. In her "strategic" retirement from invaded territory, she brutally destroys and leaves devastatoin and the desolation of fiendish destruction in her wake. Burning the remains of battered cities and villages, wantonly destroying historic churches and monuments; poisoning wells, and deporting into military slavery all able-bodied citizens of the invaded country. Germany, if beaten in arms, shows an unchastened spirit, and with hardened and impenitent heart "treasureth up to itself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment" of the victorious Allies. Germany, by her monstrous accumulation of outrage is slamming shut the door of mercy, and consideration, when the day of retribution shall came. Her allied antagonists are only human, as humane as she is inhuman and can't overlook everything. They will demand pay to the uttermost farthing. This exaction of penalty may ruin Germany, but the responsibility, linked with the punishment, will rest with those who like Sampson of old will be crushed under the ruins they have brought down.

TO EASY PUNISHMENT.

Public credulity is ordinarily severely tried by the current reports we receive of European happenings; but at times wild rumour comes in to add to the perennial problem of what to believe and what to reject. Such an instance is the exciting rumour that the German Kaiser had been assassinated, and that Germany had broken out in open revolt. This rumour relating to German affairs, naturally had its origin in the Hun spirit of deceit and crookedness. It was a New York stock exchange lie started by brokers inspired by hope of gain fro mthe falsehood. To show the popular importance attached to such a happening as the removal of the head and front of the scourge of this war, staid citizens called in considerable anxiety to ascertain the truth of the story, and children on their way to and from school were volubly discussing the event. It is fortunate that the rumour was unfounded. It is not the British way, or the civilized way to get rid of enemies of humanity, no matter how nasty and pestiferous, by the assassin's knife, between the shoulder blades. It is better to win in open fight. The Kaiser is deserving of a more exemplary fate than the euthanasia of quick extinction. That would be dropping him out of responsibility like a common criminal; and he is no common criminal, He should be reserved as a horrible example, a warning to tyrants; should be reserved for St. Helena—if the exile of Napoleon Bonaparte would not be polluted by his presence—and set upon that island pedestal,

A fixed figure for the time of scorn
To point its slow, unmoving finger at.

MANY MASTERS.

We have proverbial assurance of the truth of the saying that "too many cooks spoil the broth." And we have Scriptural authority—almost as good as aldermanic wisdom—that no man can serve two masters. Yet the Sanitary Inspector is expected to serve four masters. Mayor Duffus is right in thinking there are too many "bosses," to wit: the City Council, the Property Committee, the Board of Health, and the Medical Health Officer. This condition is not conducive to satisfactory results, and is liable to lead to complications that will impair the smooth working of sanitary oversight. Nor is the condition greatly improved by the decision ultimately arived at that "the department is to be handled through the medium of the Property Committee." If the Property Committee shows as much hesitation, indecision and backfiring in dealing with matters that may arise in regard to sanitary interests and administration, as they have done in appointing a sanitary inspector, it does not look as if they were divinely designed for the responsibility. As a matter of nomenclature, it seems as if the Board of Health had the call to deal with health matters, and that by centring authority and administration in the hands of a Property Committee, the Board of Health was robbed of one of its most important and logically indicated functions. The public health is too important a matter to be the shuttle-cock of practically divided authority. It appears to be evident—almost self-evident—that responsibility for the vitally important matter of sanitary oversight in the interests of the public health, should be placed with a body whose very name and nominal functions indicate them as the proper custodians of the health of the people.

Motor Driven Combination Pumper And Hose Truck Is The Choice Of The Council

Two smoke helmets.

Approximate Cost $10,000.

The committee of the Whole Council last night authorized Mayor Duffus and Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee to secure prices on a combined motor driven pumping engine and hose waggon and a light motor runabout for Chief Howard as a preliminary step in the ultimate motorizing of the Fire Department. The cost is estimated at approximately $10,000 which sum is expected to provide two smoke helmets at $225 each and life saving net to cost about $300 or $400. The motor pumping apparatus will be fitted with a stationary turret nozzle which can be operated in any direction from the seat.

A Special Report.

Mayor Duffus and Ald. Dobbin, it will be remembered, made an extensive trip in January to fire stations in Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa, Montreal, New York, Niagara Falls, Buffalo and other cities. Their experiences and the information they obtained was presented in a special and comprehensive report a copy of which has been in the hands of each alderman for several weeks. Last night the committee ,after digesting the report, discussed the particular recommendations proposed for the local fire department and finally adopted them.

Agreed on Type.

The present progress pertains only to the type of apparatus. Details as to horse power, pumping capacity and other particulars will probably be discussed by the Mayor, Ald. Duncan, Ald. Dobbin and Chief Howard and referred back to the Council with the manufacturers' prices, which will be advertised for.

Incidentally it was decided to advertise for sale the steam pumping engine at the fire hall since it will be displaced by the proposed new motor driven apparatus.

A suggestion to instal a forty gallon chemical tank on the present ladder waggon was rejected. Ald. Weir pointed out the fault that it would arrive at a fire after the motor hose waggon hence would be useless for incipient fires. However in the continuation of the modernizing of the department a motor driven ladder and chemical truck would be a valuable unit it was agreed. It is beyond the city's means this year since it would cost another $9,000.

Aldermen Smith and Saunders and Mayor Duffus debated with the confidence of their experience the respective merits of the chain and shaft drives. This, however, is a detail for further consideration.

Ald. Stratton moved that all things being equal, the new apparatus be purchased through a local agent. Ald. McIntyre seconded it.

The rest of the committee took the attitude that if there were any local agents they would be fully considered by the Mayor and Ald. Dobbin who were appointed to obtain prices. An amendment to that effect carried.

Council To Invite Sir Fred'k Nicholls To A Banquet Here

The Council last night decided to invite Sir Frederick Nicholls, recently appointed to the Canadian Senate to be the guest at a citizen's banquet to be held here in his honour. Mayor Duffus said that Peterborough had a warm place in its heart for Sir Frederick and it would welcome an opportunity to congratulate and felicitate with him upon his recent honours.

Protestant Home Plea For Fruit Tree Protection

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir: In these days, when the duty of increased production of food of all kinds is being impressed upon our citizens, it is perhaps timely and expedient to consider the care of the plant after it is produced. This is particularly true in the case of trees and fruit-bearing bushes. Anyone who has made a study at all of fruit-growing, knows that spraying of some sort is essential to prevent the insect enemies of fruit trees and bushes from destroying them.

Many persons, however, do not yet seem to understand the importance of spraying and the consequence is that not only their own fruit is imperfect, but their neighbours suffer from their neglect, as the pests spread from tree to tree.

Would it be possible to interest our City Fathers in this question? Could they be induced to see that it might result in the greatest good to the greatest number if they should invest in a spraying plant to be municipally owned, and rented at a reasonable rate to fruit growers by the hour or day?

Other cities have done this, and have found it profitable. It is not very long ago that the whole state of Massachusetts rose up in arms to destroy the tent caterpillars, and by vigorous, concerted and thorough effort succeeded in exterminating that particular pest.

I should like discussion on this question. It seems to me that action in the line I have suggested might be a decided benefit to the city, and result not only in an increase of quantity but an improvement in quality.

Yours truly,
A. M. Lancaster,
Supt. Protestant Home.

Most of my lots in South End were gardened last year and several are ploughed and manured, all of this coupled with low prices and any reasonable terms desired should enable a sensible man to decide quickly. Every lot I own being so close outside the city must grow in value as the city grows in population. BOWLING

The Canadian General Electric team won the major portion of last night's league game from the King Pins by a narrow margin in the last game.

Hamilton and Solomon of the King Pins pulled off some very hard spares, while Somerville, Early and Bishop did the same stunt for the Canadian General Electric.

Solomon of the King Pins had high score for the three games, with a count of 562; also he had high single game with a 208 score.

Bishop and Stewart were the only other players to pass the 500 mark.

THE YOUNG VILLAGE DOCTOR

"The Young Village Doctor," presented last night by members of Mark Street Methodist Church, in Victoria Hall, will be remembered as a great success.

The hall was crowded and well it might be for those taking part were artists in no small sense of the word, and well worth seeing. The plot was good and contained a vast number of the most ludicious situations and an extremely happy finale sent every one home happy and satisfied. The scenery was carefully and accurately prepared by Mrs. Hughson Johnson, who for many years has studied the theatrical profession and the costumes, works of art, from a standpoint both of beauty and suitability to the year they represented. Those taking part were well trained and showed great acceptability to the difficult parts many of them took.

"Rev. R. E. Benson," the village doctor, much in love with Jane (Miss B. Record), was splendid in the manner he handled his lines and situations. "Jane," the lively nurse, was extreemly fascinating and the audience loth to see her go off the stage. Mrs. J. Speer, as "Mrs. Crane, Jane's mother," was an artist in the way she took her part. "Delinda Clinger" (Mrs. W. K. Payne) and "Penelope Knowing," (Miss E. Whattam) the two village gossips, kept the audience in roars of laughter. Mr. K. Throop, as "Mr. Brief," the young and penniless lawyer, was realistic in his part. The other members of the caste, all gossiping villagers, with imaginary ills, were splendid, each taking the part in a manner creditable to those who trained them and their own talent.

The specialties between acts were most enjoyable:

Piano duet by Mrs Locke and Miss Bryce.

Recitation—Master Johnson.

Quartette—Mr. and Mrs. Ardiel, Miss Wand and Mr. C. Howson.

Solo—Miss Myrtle Succee.

Solo—Miss Bryce.

Several violin solos by Mr. Frank Whitehouse.

The cast follows:

Dr. Young—Rev. R. E. Benson.
Mrs. Crane—Mrs. J. Speer.
Miss Jane Crane—Miss B. Record.
Miss Belinda Clinger—Mrs. W. K. Payne.
Miss Penelope Knowing—Miss E. Whattam.
Mr. Brief—Mr. K. Throop.
Mrs. Groan—Mrs. R. J. Weir.
Mr. Grab—Mr. J. Speer.
Mrs. Grab—Mrs. J. H. Smith.
Mr. Wiseacre—Mr. H. Rightmyer.
Mrs. Frost—Mrs. H. Rightmyer.
Mr. Brook—Mr. G. Hurl.
Mr. Lovejoy—Mr. H. Nellist.
Dr. Baker—Mr. H. Smith.
Mr. Brave—Mr. T. Hendry.
Mrs. Ware and child—Mrs. A. Simons and child.

United States Imposes Head Tax of $8 On Every Alien Entering Country

New Law Goes Into Effect May 1—Notice Sent Railway Agents.

The local railway and steamship ticket agents are in receipt of a communication announced that on May 1 next a head tax of $8 on each person going into the United States will be exacted by the U. S. A. immigration authorities.

The only persons exempt are children under 16 years of age, accompanied by a parent or guardian. The act was passed by Congress on February 7 last, and becomes effective on the above-mentioned date. Whether the amount is collected by the immigration authorities and paid back again when the person leaves the United States is not stated in the communication.

The tax is to be imposed on all people not either by birth or naturalization citizens of the United States.

A few of the attractive girls in the Broadway Musical Comedy, "The Girl Who Smiles," at The Grand next Saturday, March 24. Popular price Matinee at 2:30. Best seates 50c. Second half of Balcony 25c. Children (any seat) 25c. All seats reserved. Sale opens to-morrow morning 10 o'clock.

REFERRING TO THE ENGAGEMENT IN MONTREAL "THE HERALD" OF MARCH 6, 1917, SAYS:—

"The Girl Who Smiles," the musical comedy from the pens of Paul Herve and Jean Briquet, who have written many successful musical comedies, is at His Majesty's Theatre this week and delighted last night's audience. It appeared here last season, and indications are that the comedy will be just as big a hit. There is a good human interest story interwoven with the musical comedy, and the music is very tuneful. The songs are pretty, carefully and effectively presented, and the cast is adequate. Beth Groves Young plays the part of Marie, the daughter of Paul Fabre, the irritable and impatient father, and acquits herself in a difficult sole very well.

Fred. Fear portrays the role of the fatherland and does exceedingly well throughout the action of the play. He marries off his spendthrift son, loses his only daughter to a poor but cheerful young artist, is the terror of his chef and servants, and, despite the sallies of wit and innumerable humourous incidents, he transmits his disagreeable mood to the audience. But later, when his son-in-law, after great success as an artist, returns with his wife and baby boy, he is finally overcome and the audience joins cheerfully in his mirth-provoking laughter.

The Elementary Graded Union

Interesting Address by Mrs. Palmer G. Burgess of Ottawa

The Elementary Graded Union of Sunday School Teachers held its regular monthly meeting last evening in St. Paul's Guild Room. The speaker of the evening was Mrs. Palmer G. Burgess of Ottawa, who gave a most inspiring address to junior workers. Mrs. Burgess is Superintendent of the Junior Department of Bell Street Methdoist Sunday School in Ottawa, a most successful, well organized department of over one hundred children, between the ages of nine and twelve. Therefore the speaker's suggestions were of a most practical nature, suitable for any of the Junior Departments of the city, where junior work has not been fully developed along scientific lines. Mrs. Burgess' address dealt mainly with the Sunday afternoon session for the Juniors, and a practical programme was suggested. A separate session was approved and Mrs. Burgess told of some of the benefits which had arisen from her own experience with it. In conclusion, Mrs. Burgess asked the teachers not to be discouraged with their work. Every other work, she said, was limited to the ability and talents of the worker, but Sunday School work, if given our best effort, is limited only to God's power.

Mr. A. Mowat, superintendent of St. Paul's Sunday School, made an efficient chairman.

Rev. Mr. Peever opened the meeting with Scriptur reading and prayer, after which Miss Florence Cameron, President of the Graded Union, took a few minutes to show and explain some Easter souvenirs and calendars to the Primary and Beginners teachers.

Outsider Won War National

(SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER)

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

A. Gibb, P. Gould, A. King, G. A. Pymer, C. E. Quackenbush, O. Saunders and C. Toms, Havelock members of the 247th Battalion have reported here for training with A Company.

OTTAWA, March 19.—Under the new plan for creating a Canadian Home Guard force of 50,000 men, to allow a number to go overseas, orders were issued this morning by the Militia Department for the mobilization of forty-eight city regiments.

The district officers commanding will recommend to the Militia Department such of the usual corps as it is considered desirable to mobilise. This order does not mean that men who at present belong to militia regiments will be ordered out, but rather that the names and organizations of existing regiments will be used in connection with the creation of the new force. The Home Guard, as explained by Sir Edward Kemp, when the official announcement was made, will be a strictly voluntary organization. The city regiments to be organized as Home Guards in Eastern Canada at once are as follows:

London Division—7th Fusiliers, London; 21st Windsor 22nd, Woodstock; 25th, St. Thomas.

The following letter has been received by Mrs. Stephen Scott, Young's Point, Ont.:

Somewhere in France, Feb. 17th.

My Dearest Mother,—Just a line in answer to your most welcome letter just received today. Was indeed glad to hear you were all well as this leaves all the boys here at present, but we can never tell how long it is going to last. However, we have been very lucky so far, although I have felt the heat of a couple of bullets go whizzing by my head, but as long as they don't hit me I don't mind that. Well, my dear mother, I dont know how to thank you for all those lovely parcels you have sent me, so I think I will jus thave to wait till I get home again to do that. They were certainly dandy and everything was so nice we sure enjoyed them. We are still out of the trenches yet, mother, and I am not a bit sorry for it. It is pretty cold here just now. It was 16 below last night, so that is not very warm. There has been about an inch of snow here this last month, but there is never any sleighing here.

Well, dear mother, I saw Rollie Johnston to-day. He looks fine, too. I also saw a bunch of the Coe Hill boys. It seems like home to meet my old chums again Dan and Joe and Lewie and Bert, and I do have great times while out of the front line. Dan has great fun talking to the French girls. I think he will be taking one home with him when we go.

Well, mother, it was too bad about Russel Taylor. I was within two feet of him when he was hit, poor lad. Lewie helped to carry him out of the trenches. I guess he was hurt pretty bad. I had a letter from Willie Tanner the other day. He is getting better. Freddie is over here, too, I think he is with the 2nd Battalion.

Well, mother, I think I will close for this time ,hoping to hear from you very soon again. Good-bye, from your loving son, Pte. Nicholas Scott. Love to all at home.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

"OUR MINISTER'S HONEYMOON" SCORED A BIG SUCCESS

Sparkling Entertainment Under the Auspices of Young People's Society of Knox Church Pleased a Large Crowd —Repeated To-night

The Young People of Knox Church have scored an enviable reputation for the excellence of the entertainment they have from time to time presented for the approval of the public and this reputation was enhanced last night when the laughable musical sketch "Our Minister's Honeymoon" was given to a large audience in the lecture hall of the church. With a wealth of rich comedy, funny speeches, and delightful music the presentation was even more enjoyable than its predecessors, and the enjoyment of the audience was indicated in no uncertain manner by the heartiness of the laughter and the frequent applause. The situations throughout are remarkably funny and the play is a sure cure for the blues. It will be repeated in the lecture hall to-night, and it is safe to say that a capacity audience will greet the clever entertainers.

The smoothness with which the presentation was given speaks volumes for those who had the training in charge and for the individual ability of the performers. There were few dull moments and the musical numbers were charmingly given. The work of the chorus indicated careful training and reflected great credit upon Mr. George Kenyon, the Choir Master of Knox Church, who was the musical director.

For the sake of those who have not yet seen the sketch and who intend to go to-night, the details of the plot will not be discussed here. It would only spoil the effect for those who will be in attendance this evening and it will, therefore, be sufficient to say that "Our Minister's Honeymoon" is replete with sparkling comedy and well worth a visit.

All the members of the caste acquitted themselves splendidly, and it would be invidious to single any one out for special mention. The different roles were cleverly handled and each performer had his or her share in the honours of the evening. There were no less than fifteen musical numbers, including five offerings by the chorus. Miss Ruby Carr made a hit in her song "Good luck to you," and her duet with Mr. George Roy was equally enjoyed. Mr. Vernon Morphet, who appeared as "Teddie Spangles," was heard to great advantage in his two vocal numbers "I Want to go on My Own Honeymoon," and "I Dreamt I went to Church," both of which were heartily applauded. Mr. John Smith, who was amusing as the Sexton, and Miss Annie Crocker and Miss K. Hall were effective in their number 'That's Just What I've Been Thinking."

Cast of Characters.

Teddie Spangles, His Best Man and Old College Chum—Mr. Vernon Morphet.

John Wesley Simpkins, Station Agent Telegraph Operator, Postmaster and Mayor—Mr. R. Hillier.

Uncle Alex, the Old Sexon — Mr. John Smith.

THE EGGLESS CAKE

High Cost of Living Reduced by Several Millions

The prestige of the hen is being curtailed in a new and interesting way.

She lays a billion eggs or so for the human race each year, and, under world war conditions the price of eggs per dozen to consumers had approached a dollar in some parts of the United States and has reached the prohibitive price of two dollars or more in the belligerent countries.

Therefore when the high cost of living looms large in the public eye unusual importance is attached to the announcement of the best known baking powder company in the world that it has evolved a ready and practical way for the housewife, to save in the aggregate, many millions of dollars in household expenses through the use of more Royal Baking Powder and less eggs.

Months of experimenting have elicited a large number of recipes for the making of home baked products with fewer eggs, and these recipes are being distributed gratis. It is claimed that they prove conclusively that the baking powder saves eggs— in some cakes about half the cost of the cake is saved. In recipes calling for the use of eggs, the number can be reduced and excellent results— healthful, appetising cakes, muffins, corn bread, etc.—obtained by using a small additional quantity, about a teaspoon, of Royal baking powder in place of each egg omitted.

The acme, or top-notch achievement, in this connection is an eggless, milkless, butterless cake that is pronounced by all who have tasted it to be delicious and wholesome. Its appetising quality, it is claimed, will be surprising to the housewife who tries it according to the recipe given.

The idea of using more Royal baking powder and less eggs in baking is not entirely new but the elaborate enlargement and perfecting of the idea just accomplished renders it a very present help, meeting the necessities of the housewife of moderate means in a time of soaring food prices.

In the British Isles the news has been received with enthusiasm. The baking powder company, while not being accused of being an out-and-out philanthropist in the matter, is pointed out as having provided the means of effecting an enormous saving in household affairs in a way that benefits everybody and harms nobody—except it be the pride of the autocratic hen. The company only completed its experiments recently, and already the announcements are being spread broadcast in the newspapers, which, it will be remembered, many years ago made the name of Royal Baking Powder a household word all over the world.

'The Girl Who Smiles" Made Hit In Montreal

Music is Delightful Throughout and "Teach Me to Smile" Waltz a Gem—Comes to Grand Saturday

The Montreal Gazette has the following to say about "The Girl who Smiles," which comes to the Grand on Saturday:

"The Girl Who Smiles," was presented last night at His Majesty's Theatre before what, considering the weather, might be considered a large audience, and promises to prove as popular as when presented in Montreal last season. It is a musical comedy by the French Briquet, who are also responsible for "Alma," "The Midnight Girl," and other successes. Much of the music is delightful, particularly the waltz "Teach Me to Smile," and there is an abundance of comedy intertwined with a human love story. Fred Frear, in the role of Paul Fabre, the impatient, irritable, and disgruntled father, had a difficult part to play, and acquitted himself creditably. Through the greater part of the action of the play he is frothing with rage, impatient with everybody and everyhing. He marries off his spendthrift son, loses his only daughter to a poor, but cheerful young artist, is the terror of his chef and servants and despite the sallies of wit and inimitable humorous incidents, he transmits his disagreeable mood to the audience. But later when his son-in-law, after great success as an artist, returns with his wife and baby boy, he is finally overcome and the audience joins cheerfully in his mirth-provoking laughter. Beth Groves-Young appears in the part of Marie, the daughter, who leaves her father and his unhappy home to find joy and laughter with the man she loves. Her eyes mirror each thought and she has the faculty of appearing to be the most sorrowful of mortals when she is sad and the most joyous when happy. The songs were effectively sung and the chorus and the supporting cast left little to be desired.

SHOVELLING SNOW OFF SIDEWALKS IS ONLY A SUGGESTION

The Mayor's suggestion that the citizens should shovel the snow off the sidewalks in front of their residences is only a suggestion he emphasized last night. On Saturday night His Worship fell on a slope of snow and ice, and was impressed with the necessity of some form of relief which, he asked, the Aldermen to consider with a view to securing some remedy. Some of the dangerous sidewalks mentioned were Reid street from Hunter to Charlotte street, Perry street near the Metal Products Co., Rubidge street from Wolfe to Townsend streets, Murray street near the Baptist church. These danger spots were caused by the swerving of the snow plows.

There should be some way of keeping the plows on the sidewalks, the Mayor stated, and suggested that a special plow should be secured. He believed that if citizens would co-operate by shovelling off the walks it would prevent the present slope of snow on the lake.

Ald. Duncan observed that Pearl Avenue residents had kept the walks clean and as a result they were now bare of snow. The Mayor's suggestion would probably be more timely at the beginning than at the close of winter.

City Will Invite Sir Adam Beck To Address Meeting

Sir Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission, will be invited by the Mayor to visit Peterborough in the near future and address a public meeting on Hydro-Electric and Radial Railway matters of interest to the people of this district. The Mayor suggested the idea and was warmly supported by the Council.

Sir Adam Beck had always been a friend of Peterborough, Ald. Duncan remarked, adding that whatever expense was entailed would be money well spent. Ald. Smith seconded his motion that the Mayor be authorized to invite Sir Adam Beck to Peterborough to meet a number of local men at dinner and afterwards address a public meeting at the Opera House.

TREACHEROUS AND SELFISH RUSSIAN GENERAL KILLED

PETROGRAD, via London, March 21.—One of the few men of prominence who were killed during the revolution was Gen. Stokelburg. He won notoriety in the Japanese war by transporting a cow to the front on a special train to supply himself and family with milk at a time when his army was starving.

His house was entered by soldiers who were sent to arrest him. The general asked for leave to retire to his private apartment, from where he opened fire with a machine gun. He was later overpowered and killed.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

C. P. R. PASSENGER TRAIN WRECKED NEAR NORWOOD

Part of the Early Morning Montreal Express Rolled Into a Fifteen Foot Ditch—Three Passengers Slightly Injured —Broken Rail Thought to Have Been the Cause—Several Narrow Escapes.

A broken rail is thought to have been the cause of the accident to the Montreal express, which was ditched near the Norwood station shortly after six o'clock this morning. The train is known as number twenty-three and is due in Peterborough at 5.54 a.m. Many miraculous escapes were recorded. Three passengers and a brakeman were slightly injured. All were able to proceed to their destination upon the arrival of a special train from Peterborough about nine-thirty o'clock.

SLEEPING CAR DITCHED.

The train consisted of four troop diners, which were on the way to London, Ontario, baggage and express car, three sleepers and day coach, including sleeper. The four diners remained on the track; also the engine and tender. The baggage and express car was turned across the track; also the day coach, while the three sleepers turned over and plunged fifteen feet into the ditch. One man who was in a lower berth was pinned down by a mattress from an upper berth. He cannot understand how the mattress came through the curtains. The switch where the accident took place is about three hundred yards east of the Norwood station. It is evident that a portion of the train passed over the switch safely before the break in the rail occurred. The train does not stop at Norwood. It was nearly an hour late.

A MIRACLE.

Mr. G. H. Buck, of Norwood, who has seen more than one train wreck and who has himself figured in one, describes this morning's wreck as one of the worst he has ever witnessed. "It was nothing short of a miracle that more people were not hurt," said Mr. Buck. Three of the passengers and a brakeman sustained slight cuts. Dr. Holdecroft, of Havelock, and doctors Sutton and Ford of Norwood were soon on the scene. They rendered first aid to the injured.

A wrecking train from Havelock reached the scene of the wreck in about half an hour after the accident.

HIT BY WATER TANK.

Mr. A. Bastien of Montreal was washing in the men's compartment, preparatory to arriving in Peterborough. His coach was the middle one of the three sleepers, and when it rolled off the track the occupants were thrown about helplessly. A water tank fell across Mr. Bastien, cutting him deeply on the shoulder. He was also bruised about the body and legs. He reached Peterborough and registered at the Snowden House where he managed to bear up until noon. After dinner he was forced to go to bed and Dr. Moir was called in to examine and attend him. He is expected to recover in a day or two.

AWOKE OUT OF BED.

A. H. Allen of Toronto, registered at the Empress to-day, was awakened from a deep sleep when his coach bumped into the fifteen-foot ditch on the south side of the track, opposite the old mill pond east of Norwood. He was in the lower 10 of the centre sleeper, which was stripped of its trucks and slid along for a short distance on the rails and ties. The travellers were spilled from their berths, but only two were seriously injured. One of them, A. Bastien. Most of them were shaken up and more or less bruised. It was extremely fortunate that there were no fatalities. The C. P. R. Company provided breakfast in the military diners for the passengers.

Mr. Allen had left a call for 15 minutes out of Peterborough, and Mr. Bastien had put in a half-hour call. Had Mr. Allen been in the lavatory he might have met with injuries as serious as the Montreal man's. The cause of the accidents it is believed was a broken rail.

Wanted For Theft Of $1409, Working In Local Office

James A. Hird was arrested by Detective Meagher this afternoon on information Chief Thompson received from Toronto where he is wanted for an alleged theft of $1409.

He has been in Peterborough several weeks; boarding at the Montgomery House. During the past week or ten days he was employed with the Metal Products Co., as office manager and was effecting certain changes of system for the improvement of the office. Hird is 58 years old and has two sons and six nephews at the front.

In appearance and manner he would pass anywhere as a business man. Since November he has wandered from Trenton, to St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and other places. Chief Thompson received a description of him from the Toronto police on Monday of this week. It is understood that Hird was warden of a church, the finances of which he used in the stock market. He claims that this step was taken to replenish the funds and for his personal profit.

JOHN WESLEY'S RULES OF HEALTH 170 YEARS AGO

CLEANLINESS, ABSTINENCE, EXERCISE AND TEMPERANCE URGED.

In 1747 John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, wrote "Primitive Physic, or an Easy and Natural Method of Curing Most Diseases." This volume of recipes, prescriptions, and directions, had a great vogue. In 1801 the 26th edition was printed. The following instructions on how to keep well are taken from his preface to this volume and were written in 1747:

I.

"For the sake of those who desire through the blessing of God, to retain the health which they have recovered, I have added a few plain easy rules, chiefly transcribed from Dr. Cheyne.

"1. The air we breathe is of great consequence to our health. Those who have been long abroad in easterly or northerly winds, should drink some thin and warm liquor going to bed, or a draft of toast and water.

"2. Tender persons should have those who lie with them or who are much about them, sound, sweet and healthy.

"3. Every one that would preserve health should be as clean and sweet as possible in their houses, clothes and furniture.

II.

"1. The great rule of eating and drinking is to suit the quality and quantity of the food to the strength of our digestion; to take always such a sort and such a measure of food as sits light and easy on the stomach.

"2. All pickled or smoked or salted food and all high seasoned food is unwholesome.

"3. Nothing conduces more to health than abstinence and plain food with due labor.

"4. For studious persons about eight ounces of animal food and twelve of vegetables in twenty-four hours, is sufficient.

"5. Water is the wholesomest of all drinks; quickens the appetite, and strengthens the digestion most.

"6. Strong and more especially spiritous liquors are a certain though slow poison.

"8. Strong liquors do not prevent the mischiefs of a surfeit nor carry it off so safely as water.

"9. Malt liquors (except clear small beer or small ale of due age) are exceedingly hurtful to tender persons.

"10. Coffee and tea are extremely hurtful to persons who have weak nerves.

III.

"1. Tender persons should eat light suppers and that two or three hours before going to bed.

"2. They ought constantly to go to bed about 9 and rise at 4 or 5.

IV.

"1. Adue degree of exercise is indispensably necessary to health and long life.

"2. Walking is the best exercise for those who are able to bear it: riding for those who are not. The open air, when the weather is fair, contributes much to the benefit of exercise.

"3. We may strengthen any weak part of the body by constant exercise. Thus the lungs may be strengthened by loud speaking, or by walking up an easy ascent; the digestion and nerves by riding; the arms and hams by strongly rubbing them daily.

"4. The studious ought to have stated times for exercise, at least two or three hours a day; the one half of this before dinner, the other before going to bed.

"5. They should frequently shave and frequently wash their feet.

"6. Those who read or write much should learn to do it standing otherwise it will impair their health.

"7. The fewer clothes anyone wears by day or night the hardier he will be.

"8. Exercise, first, should always be on an empty stomach; second.y, should never be continued to weariness; and, thirdly, after it we should take care to cool off by degrees otherwise we shall catch cold.

"9. The flesh brush is a most useful exercise, especially to strengthen any part that is weak.

"10. Cold bathing is of great advantage to the health; it prevents an abundance of diseases. It promotes perspiration, helps the circulation of the blood, and prevents the danger of catching cold. Tender persons should pour water upon the head before they go in walk in very slowly. To jump in with the head foremost is too great a shock to nature."

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Mrs. Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations the throat and bronchial tubes.

DEATH OF THE REV. MR. PEER

Well Known Norwood Minister Passed Away After Short Illness

NORWOOD, March 21.—Death removed from our midst the Rev. Mr. Peer, an honoured and highly respected citizen.

The many years Mr. Peer laboured as pastor of the Baptist church in Norwood and Centre Dummer, after which he went to New Ontario where he worked faithfully, and conscientiously for a long time.

The last few years he had been on a mission field in connection with the Presbyterian church, at Hall's Bridge.

On account of his advanced age, seventy-six and the hardships of winters in the back country, he found it necessary to resign his charge, and returned last December to his home here.

The funeral service will be conducted in the Presbyterian church by Rev. Wolland on Thursday afternoon. After which the cortege will proceed to the Norwood cemetery, where interment will take place.

"INTOLERANCE" SCORES AGAIN

Mr. Basil S. Courtney Responsible For Bringing Wonderful Picture to Canada

To Basil S. Courtney the young Nova Scotian who brought to Canada "The Birth of a Nation," is due all the credit for the production in Canada of D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance," which is now playing to delighted audiences at the Grand Opera House. After weeks of negotiation and an expense of many thousands he secured the rights for the Dominion of Canada for "Intolerance," and in the letter of acceptance, which he received from the Griffith Corporation, was a paragraph stating that although the United States Company had received other offers for the picture from Canadians interested, the officials decided to award the prize to Mr. Courtney, who had so carefully presented "The Birth of a Nation" in its entirety in the Dominion. "Intolerance," it must be remembered, is as expensive to present as a high-priced musical or dramatic production. Besides carrying a big symphony orchestra and a number of choristers, there is a large working crew, who handle a carload of effects, all necessary to the proper presentation of this great picture, which put Mr. Courtney on a par with great producers like Charles Frohman and David Belasco. It assures that we are getting the production in its entirety as it was presented at the Liberty Theatre, New York and the Grand Opera House in Toronto. To-night is the last performance at "The Grand," so don't miss it, as it sure is the treat of the season.

MR. W. H. STAPLES

A Tribute.

Sometimes great grief comes to us gently and gradually, so that we are in some degree prepared for it; but when it comes with one swift and sudden stroke we are paralyzed and a real realization of our loss must grow and grow and grow with each passing day. Such was the feeling of the community when it was learned that on Friday, March 9th one, much-esteemed and dearly-loved among us, Mr. W. H. Staples had met death by accident while engaged in his daily work For him, there was "no sadness of farewell." Why a life so imminently useful should be cut off in its strength we do not know, nor is it ours to question. "We see but dimly through these midsts and vapours." Some one has said, "Man is immortal till his work is done." Who shall say this life was unfinished, incomplete? His Lord had need of him and so he was transferred for higher service. "Be still and know that I am God."

Mr. Staples was a son of Mr. Samuel Staples and lived most of his life in Cavan. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, one son, Melville H., connected with the Canadian Patriotic work, and two daughters, Muriel G., of Winnipeg, and Elsie S., attending Lindsay Collegiate Institute. There are also, two brothers, Mr. Jos. Staples, Cavan and Mr. Fred Staples in the West and two sisters, Mrs. Purser, of Toronto, and Mrs. Moses Sutton, Cavan.

Mr. Staples was perhaps an unusually successful man, for while he prospered in a business way, he brought all the other and more important things along with him. He was for thirty-two years Superintendent of the Cavanville Methodist School and in all the time was rarely absent from his place. He was for many years a member of the Trustee and Quarterly Boards, and interested in all lines of church and municipal work. When honours came to him they were not of his seeking, but became of his worth. Widely known his influence was far-reaching and will remain while generations pass away. "For when a great man dies,

For years beyond our ken;
The light he leaves behind him lies
Upon the paths of men."

He can no longer guide but his memory will remain an inspiration. He was a kind husband, a generous father, a true and helpful friend. He was a king among men, for, verily, "There is nothing so kingly as kindness, and nothing so royal as truth." He was one of God's own noblemen and "his soul is passing through the door, though losing much, gains infinitely more." When a man's life draws to him irresistably, the love of little children, it follows inevitably that his death must cause strong men to weep. His very presence radiated good-will. We esteemed him, we respected him, we honoured him, and best of all—we loved him. Gladly he lived—and nobly.

There has been only one perfect man, our Saviour, but he who has gone from us leaving such a keen sense of desolation and community and personal loss, strove to pattern after the Master beside Whom he walked and the result was a life we well may emulate. He was a an of earnest prayer, not only in church, not only at the family altar, but every day he was on his knees alone with his Maker. That is a life that counts.

All who knew him join in sympathy to his stricken family in a very real sense, for we shall all yearn for his cheery helpful presence, but there is the other side of the picture. Can you not see his shining face as he greets loved ones gone before and—reverently let me say it—can you not see him as he, humbly, calmly, gratefully, yet without fear meets his Elder Brother.

"Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me;
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that, the dark:
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark."

Cabinet Decides To Go Beyond The Arming of Ships To Meet Prussian Submarine Menace

Sending of Chasers Into European Waters is Among the Courses of Action Considered, and the General Board of the Navy is Requested to Recommend Specific Defence Measures

FORCE OF MOTOR BOATS WILL BE ESTABLISHED FOR CO-OPERATION WITH THE ALLIES' CRAFT

WASHINGTON, D.C. March 22.—A member of the Cabinet stated yesterday that the administration has decided definitely to go beyond the arming of American merchant ships in meeting the Prussian submarine menace.

The policy was determined up at a Cabinet conference yesterday afternoon. Following the conference Mr. Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, went before the General Board of the Navy to request a formal recommendation regarding a military programme for the fulfilment of the policy.

Several courses of action were proposed, from which the General Board is asked to make a selection. Included in the naval programme under consideration is that of sending submarine chasers into European waters, to be operated from a base in England or France and in harmony with the French and British forces in strengthening the patrol forces guarding merchant ships from submarine attack along the lanes of travel.

Opinion in service circles is that this course of action will be recommended by the General Board as affording the most complete protection obtainable for American merchant ships and for the lives of American citizens on board ships of other nationalities, aboard which the American government supports their right to travel.

General Board Studies Problems.

It is expected that the General Board's recommendation will be ready for the administration within four or five days. The Board, it was stated, has been applying itself to a study of the problem for the last six weeks and has worked out in detail several programmes. While it was not explicitly stated, the impression was conveyed that the General Board had laid before Mr. Daniels the results of its studies, and that the data was considered by President Wilson and the Cabinet officers at the meeting yesterday afternoon, Mr. Daniels being instructed by the President to report back to the Board.

Unless there is something in the administration policy which specifically bars co-operation with the British and French in the operation of American submarine chasers in European waters, it is thought almost certain in naval circles that it will be the course followed. So far as can be ascertained, there is no barrier raised against such co-operation. In all probability, the next definite step of the United States will be to send submarine chasers to England.

As the motor boats to be used as submarine chasers are provided, it is said they will be grouped in tactical units. A force will be built up, probably simultaneously, on both sides of the Atlantic. Thus, with the first forty chasers completed, expected within sixty days, twenty would be assigned to duty on this side of the Atlantic and twenty to the barred zone in European waters. The United States would devote itself to building and manning as many ships of the type as can possibly be turned out.

ROYAL YEAST

Has been Canada's favorite yeast for over a quarter of a century. Bread baked with Royal Yeast will keep fresh and moist longer than that made with any other, so that a full week's supply can easily be made at one baking, and the last loaf will be just as good as the first.

Sees In Russian Revolution Germany's Deliverance And A United States of Europe

Mr. Gustave Herve Writes a Striking Editorial in La Victoire, in Which He Says the Powerful Blast of the French Revolution is Still Echoing 'Round the World, Shattering Autocracies

VICTORIES OF THE MARNE AND THE YSER TRIVIAL COMPARED WITH PETROGRAD

PARIS, March 22. — Mr. Gustave Herve has published in La Victoire the following striking editorial on the Russian revolution:

What joy! What transport! This is enough to make one delirious with joy. One feels carried away as at the news of the Marne

The Russian nation has its '89, and, like the French Guards, the Russian army has gone over to the nation and taken the Bastille.

The powerful blast of the French Revolution, after having for a century rocked all thrones from Lisbon to Pekin, has now thrown the Russian autocracy to the earth and will shatter the Hapsburg to atoms.

Ended is your servitude, Finlanders and Poles; ended is the painful Calvary; closed is the era of the pogroms. Russian Jews, herded like cattle in your Ghetto, ended are the sufferings of the glorious martyrs of the Fortress of Peter and Paul and of the prisons of Siberia!

What a blow to the bleating pacifists who are pressing us to patch up a lame peace—who are blind to the fact that since thirty months this war is a revolution, that it was fated to bring deliverance to the Russian nation, just as our victory will bring deliverance to the German nation—who are blind to the fact that we are witnessing amid blood and tears the birth of the United States of Europe!

What an encouragement for the republicans and democrats of the United States of America to launch forth into the great war for the right—they who would long since have marched with us but for an aversion to Tsarist Russia!

What new forces for the Russian army, at last about to have behind it an administration honest, patriotic and capable of giving to it a profusion of material and munitions, and what enthusiasm in its ranks when officers and soldiers feel the great vivifying breath of liberty pass!

And finally, what a stunning blow to the Kaiser and the Prussian executioners, and what an example to the German people!

What is Verdun, what the Yser, what even the Marne's immortal victory compared with the incommensurable victory the cause of the Allies has just achieved in Petrograd—the greatest event in the history of the world since the French Revolution?

BUSINESS MAN OF IDEALS

Character of Neville Chamberlain—Twenty Minutes For Lunch

Mr. Neville Chamberlain is, in fact, that rare example—the man of commerce who has ideals and knows how to put them into practice. He has hitched his wagon to a star and it has not run off the rails, writes an English admirer. He is the hard-working kind of business man whom the country will be in sore need of in the war after the war—the man who works ten and twelve hours every weekday and does not require a long week-end in the country in order to keep fit—the man who goes on steadily at his work and does not make a social function of his midday meal on the plea that it is a means of doing business.

While he has been engaged on war work as the Lord Mayor of Birmingham he devoted just about twenty minutes to his lunch, with no break at all for tea. A brisk walk from his house at Edgbaston to the office, and he starts work never later than ten and works through the day until seven in the evening and later, often taking his work home with him. He only discusses the most vital business on the telephone and leaves the rest to his subordinates. He never has any time for leisurely discussions, his talk is always straight to the point at issue; his decisions are quick and unhesitating and invariably right.

How the Ancients Bathed.

Ancient Rome is said to have consumed no less than 340,000,000 gallons of water a day, and one of the most noticeable features of the modern town is the prodigal effervescence of its water, gushing from fountains of every conceivable size and design. The Trevi is the most magnificent in the city, its waters (called Aqua Vergine, virgin water, because of its purity) the finest. The old Roman baths required a lot of water. The splendid Thermae, built by the degenerate Emperor Caracalla, had accommodations for 1,600 bathers. Besides the baths proper, the establishment included within its area of about a quarter of a mile square a gymnasium, athletic field, library and even a race track. Its ruins tower above the plain today like some mountain blasted by nature. —National Geographic Magazine.

IMPERFECT WOMAN

Noted Scientist Says Ideal To-day is Defective

"The imperfect or defective type of women is that represented by the very slight, thin-chested and nervous woman, at present so favored by fashion," declared Dr. Richard Root Smith, of Grand Rapids, in an address at the National Conference on Race Betterment. Dr. Smith added, however, "that we have no reason for believing that woman is worse off now than she has been for many generations."

The conference aimed to bring humanity to ultimate physical and mental perfection through eugenics, chiefly, and eugenics, incidentally.

At the opening session Dr. Stephen Smith, vice-president of the New York State Board of Charities and president of the conference, despite his advanced age of 92, read a typewritten manuscript of 42 pages devoted to the idea that 100 years is man's nominal age.

Modern methods of living, Dr. Smith said, have not proved more disastrous to women than to men. He added that the most perfect type of woman is "that represented by individuals compact in build, deep-chested with steady nerves and fleshy enough for the anatomical angles to be nicely rounded out."

Of the imperfect type in favor, he said she exists not because of any modern fad or fashion, or of diet, or of diversion, but because her deficiencies existed in her progenitors. The only time to correct faults, the speaker said, is in childhood or before.

Dr. Smith spoke of the hook-worm disease. She had recently completed an extensive investigation through the hills of eastern Kentucky, and the information which she gathered was given to the conference.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Riversham Heir

He Stood Between a Title and a Rascal

By ETHEL HOLMES

When the Earl of Riversham died his entailed estate fell to his oldest son, Ralph. He left his second son, Martin, a house with the ground on which it stood contiguous to the family manor house. Ralph married late in life a woman near his own age, and it was not supposed his wife would bear him an heir. But, contrary to expectation, a son was born to her several years after her marriage.

Martin Riversham, who had expected to come in for the entailed estate at his brother's death, was greatly disappointed at the birth of an heir to it. There was still one hope for him—the child was delicate, and there was a chance that he would not grow to manhood. If he died there was but slight chances of Lady Riversham having another.

Four years passed, and little Richard Riversham still lived, though he was very delicate. He was kept indoors by his parents, and Martin, who was much interested to know of his condition, seldom caught sight of him, for whenever he was taken out it was in a close carriage.

Martin Riversham was a family black sheep, and after many efforts to get him to leave the dissolute life he led his brother felt constrained to forbid him his house. Martin had seldom occupied the house left him on the property adjoining the estate of his brother, but after little Richard's birth he went there in order to watch the child who alone would stand between him and the title and estate in case of the earl's death. From a window in his house Martin could see the family mansion something like half a mile away, and with a strong glass he could get a pretty fair view of what was going on there.

One day he was walking on the road when he saw a carriage coming which he recognized as belonging to his brother. When it passed him he saw that it contained Lady Riversham, her son Richard and a dog, the dog being a pet of Richard, to whom he was devoted. Lady Riversham shuddered as she passed her brother-in-law, but he did not notice her, his eyes being fixed on the boy, who, he noticed, was very pale and thin.

A few days after this Martin, while watching the manor house, saw evidences of a commotion on the part of its occupants. Servants were running about, and there was every evidence that something dreadful had happened. Martin took it all in till quiet came again; then, laying aside his glass, he said to himself:

"I believe the boy is dead."

That night he noticed lights in the manor house later than usual. Thinking, under cover of the darkness, to learn something by a nearer view, he left his house and, entering his brother's grounds, stole near enough to the house to see anything that could be seen from the outside.

Suddenly a rear door was opened, and by the light within Martin saw a servant, bearing an oblong box, issue from the house, followed by the earl and another servant, the latter carrying a spade and a lantern. The trio made their way to a little patch of ground a short distance from the manor house set apart for a family cemetery. Martin followed as near as he could without being detected and saw the lackey with the spade dig a grave, and he was about to place the box in it when suddenly Lady Riversham appeared on the scene.

There was some conversation between her and the earl, but before Martin could steal close enough to hear what was said the party returned to the house, taking the box with them.

Martin returned to his home, congratulating himself that he had been in the nick of time for what he had seen. An explanation of this night scene was as plain to him as the sun in the heavens. Little Richard had died, and his father, in order to conceal his death, had taken his body to the family cemetery when no one was about to see the interment. A live child was to be substituted for the dead one.

But there was one unfortunate occurrence connected with the affair. If the body had been interred in the cemetery Martin could have had it exhumed, and it would have been very easy for him to expose this fraudulent attempt to deprive him of his inheritance. Lady Riversham's following the burial party and the change of plan were easily explained. It had occurred to her that the body should not be interred where Martin could reach it. But he did not believe that this would avail, since he could compel them by law to produce what they had buried.

Nevertheless Martin was at a loss just what to do in the premises. Even if Richard was dead the earl would be in possession of the estate and title so long as he lived. But if a boy were substituted for the legitimate heir Martin should get possession of the required proof of Richard's death when it was obtainable. The courts were not likely to serve him until a pretended heir laid claim to the inheritance, and by that time it might be too late.

There was evidently a very weak point for the earl and countess in the fact that two lackeys possessed their secret. Martin wondered why they had trusted any one but themselves. There were several explanations. First, these lackeys might be paid a good sum for holding their tongues; second, the countess might have seen at the last moment the impropriety of trusting them and concluded to bury the body where they would know nothing about it.

Martin waited till one morning he saw a little boy in the grounds of his brother in charge of a nurse. Then he was sure that a substitute for the legitimate heir had been found, who would eventually claim the estate. Then Martin laid his plans. His first move would be to learn whether the lackeys knew of the burial place. If they did his next would be to learn if they could be bribed to reveal it. But the earl had doubtless paid them well or had, more likely, promised them installments, to be paid over a term of years so long as they would keep the secret. If either of them were dishonest he might be successfully bribed, but the matter would be difficult. However, Martin could see no other way to proceed, and he must do so on those lines.

He learned that the two lackeys in the secret were the only ones at the time of the burial in the manor house, the other servants being women. He found a means of communication with them in one Higgins, who kept a public house.

One day James Healey, one of the lackeys, went to Lady Riversham and confided to her the fact that he had been offered £50 if he would reveal the burial place of the box he had carried out and brought back on the occasion described. He wished to be informed whether she would object to his earning the money.

The countess was puzzled. She asked the man many questions, but could not learn from him who desired the information or why it would be worth £50. Healey told her that Higgins had offered him the bribe, but the countess did not believe that Higgins was acting for himself. She told Healey to put off Higgins for awhile and she would think the matter over. She believed that her brother-in-law was up to some devilry, but she could not imagine what it might be.

The next day she told Healey that he might accept the bribe, provided he took whoever paid it to the grave himself and informed her when he was to do so. But she advised him to stand out for a larger sum. Healey was quite up to this work and told Higgins that he had been paid £100 to keep the secret. Nothing less than £200 would tempt him to divulge it. This being reported to Martin he went to London and put a mortgage on his house as security for the money.

The loan agent happened to inspect the property while Lady Riversham was about to enter her place in her carriage. The man asked her some questions about Martin's property and revealed the fact that it was to be mortgaged. Then she slipped a five pound note into the man's hand and asked him to send her the name and address of the mortgagee. Within a few days she had bought the mortgage, paying a bonus.

Healey having been offered the amount he claimed for his secret, instructed by the countess, agreed to pilot the briber himself and no other to the burial place at midnight on a certain date. Before the grave was opened Healey was to be paid the £200. His terms were accepted, the going to the grave at night being especially agreeable to Martin, who desired to make his investigation unseen.

The appointed night proved to be very dark. A few minutes before midnight Healey and Martin met at an angle of the Riversham estate. Martin had a dark lantern, which he hid under his coat, and a spade, which he held in his hand. Healey piloted him to a sort of bower a few hundred yards from the manor house, a vacant space shut in by trees on all sides. Martin knew the place well. It had been a favorite spot with him when a boy. In its center the ground was heaped, indicating that a grave was beneath.

Healey demanded his money, and Martin counted it out to him, Healey holding the lantern directed upon the bills. After counting the bills Healey took the spade and began to dig. The box had not been deposited far below the surface and was soon reached. Martin took from his pocket a screwdriver and as soon as the box had been lifted from the grave began to loosen the cover. Then he removed the lid and, taking up the lantern, brought it to bear on the contents.

There lay the body of the dog Martin had seen driving with the countess and her son.

With an oath Martin asked Healey why he had sold him out in that fashion.

"I didn't sell you out, sir. You offered me the money to show you where the box was buried. There it is."

Martin demanded a return of the bills, and Healey refused. Martin seized him, but a couple of Healey's friends started from behind the trees and beat him off.

The explanation of the story is that Richard's dog had been stricken with hydrophobia and been killed, Richard knowing nothing about his pet's death. After the starting of the burial party it had occurred to the countess that the boy must be told the truth, and it would be preferable that the dog should be buried in a spot in which the child played when out of doors.

Richard is now Earl of Riversham.

The countess got rid of Martin's espionage by foreclosing the mortgage on his house.

HARRY LAUDER'S BEST ON EMPIRE'S ALTAR

"I'm a Mean Man," But He Gave His Only Child—Tragedy of a Comedian

Two nights after Harry Lauder heard that his only child had been killed in France the famous comedian took his place in a revue in London "lest other members of the company go hungry." That night the company on the stage saw Mr. Lauder dash the tears from his eyes again and again as he went before the footlights to start the audience into roars of laughter. All that evening the people in the theatre before and behind the scenes were laughing and crying with him. Nearly two and a half years before, when Mr. Lauder was touring in Australia, his son came fresh from his studies at Cambridge to join him and Mrs. Lauder. The boy arrived on August 2. Two days later a cable came from England when they were at breakfast. It said, "Mobilise; report and report to depot at earliest. War Office."

"John" was at that time in a Territorial regiment. "What do you think of that, dad?" said the boy. And the father spoke like thousands of other fathers must have spoken on that day. "Well, my boy," he said, "if you go you will do your duty by your father and mother."

"Always a Vacant Chair"

"If you go out to the front, while you are absent there will be a vacant chair. If you do not come back there will still be that chair kept for you."

Later he was given a commission and went out to the front, and got wounded at Festubert and sent home. He recovered and went back again, and one day was found unconscious from shell-shock and later developed pleurisy.

All For His Heir

"They say I'm a mean man," said his father, "but I was saving it all for the boy." His friends say that he has saved $700,000. It was all for John. John had everything that a boy could wish for. He had the best education and he did not disappoint his father. He had motor cars, and he travelled on the continent a great deal. The beautiful estate in Scotland that his father bought was all for his boy.

At Cambridge the boy thrashed a bigger fellow for sneering at his father for being a comedian. The boys were great friends afterwards. John at one time thought of going to the Bar, but after the life in the trenches he said he felt he could not take up a book again, but that he would settle down on the land with the girl to whom he was engaged.

Dandruff Surely Destroys the Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do his, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp, and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve, and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

ROUMANIA'S GREAT NEED

Trained Officers Were Too Few—Some Inside History

The following is from Hamilton Fyfe, British correspondent in Roumania: When the new German military attaché arrived in Bucharest early in 1916 he made a proposal to the Roumanians that they should join the Central Powers. He said: "We know all about your army. As a small army it was a good one. You have enlarged it and weakened it. You had not a sufficiency of good material for officers. You could not expand your equipment to meet the increased number of men and the needs of modern warfare. If you fight alone, you will fare badly. What we suggest, if you will join us, is this: We will send you all the munitions you require. We will send also generals to assist your Headquarters Staff and a number of officers skilled in the technical arts of war, as well as regimental officers, one or more to each regiment. Finally, we will give you two German army corps to stiffen your inexperienced troops.

That was Germany's proposal. Roumania rejected it. She threw in her lot with the allies. They welcomed her with much shouting and throwing up of caps. They sent her munitions as quickly as they could, but they took no account of the flaws in her military preparedness. They made no such proposal to Roumania as Germany had made. The Roumanian army started upon its disastrous campaign with all its imperfections on its head. The climax came in the overrunning of Roumania by the enemy and the flight of her army to-day. What the Roumanians especially lacked was a sufficient supply of trained, vigorous, resourceful officers. Everyone in the country now admits this. There were many such, but not enough. The value of energy and force of character is found to be seen in the field than in any other activity of life.

It was a little out-of-the-way village in France, and the Highland regiment was swinging along the road. Two old Frenchmen, obviously puzzled by their costume, were having a heated argument on the same. Said one: "Zey cannot be men, for look at ze dress and ze shirts!" Replied the other: "Zey cannot be women, for ze have ze moustachios." "Ah!" replied the first speaker, "I have it. Zey are ze famous Middle-sex regiment of whom I have hoard so mooch!"

Here Is Home Evidence From People You Know

Ask Them to Confirm Their Statements About Dr. Chase's Nerve Food —Then Put it to the Test in Your Own Case

Peterboro, Ont., March 5. — Still more people are coming forward daily with good words for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. These letters are not from far-away, inaccessible post offices but from your friends and neighbors right here in Peterboro.

You can call on these people, and hear from their own lips just what was their condition and how they were benefited by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

When you have been convinced that this is no ordinary medicine but a bona fide restorative of exceptional merit put it to the test in your own case.

Mrs. J. Mesley, 490 George street, Peterboro, Ont., writes:

"Over a year ago I was in a nervous, run down condition—had no ambition, only a sort of languid feeling. My condition no doubt was due to the fact that I go out nursing at different times and after some severe cases I found my system in a run down condition. Some of my friends advised me to take some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I procured a box and commenced to use them. I continued this treatment until I was greatly benefited, and am now much better.

My husband also finds great benefit from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and the Linseed and Turpentine I have advised manny of my friends to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and they have received good results, also."

Mrs. William A. Murphy 491 Elm Street, Peterboro, Ont., writes:

"I had been suffering from nervousness, sleeplessness and a run down condition of the system. I went to the hospital for my nerves, and while there the doctor told me he could do nothing for them. A friend persuaded me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I did so, and all I am sorry for now is that I did not commence using them sooner. My head used to ache so at times I could scarcely stand it, and if I had not secured the Nerve Food when I did I don't know what would have happened. I can sleep well now and have none of those terrible headaches. From time to time I take some of the Nerve Food as a tonic—I would not want to be without them if they cost a dollar a box."

Nervous headaches, indigestion sleeplessness and irritability soon disappear when Dr. Chase' Nerve Food is used to restore the system, 50 cents a box; a full treatment of six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

RECIPES FOR BABY FOOD, ETC.

Lime Water.

A TEASPOONFUL of unslaked lime in a quart of boiled water. Shake in a large bottle such as a gem jar and let stand for twenty-four hours. The clear fluid standing on top may then be run off. This is Lime Water.

Barley Water.

Two level teaspoonfuls of Robinson's or Brook's barley-flour. Mix with water to make a paste. Add water to one pint. Boil for twenty minutes in double boiler. Strain through two thicknesses of cheese cloth. Add boiled water to make up that boiled away so as to have one pint.

Gruel.

Oatmeal or Barley. Use either Robinson's or Brook's barley flour or Robinson's oatmeal (groats). Take three teaspoonfuls of the flour. Add sufficient cold water to form a paste and add enough water to make a pint. Cook for twenty minutes in a double-boiler. Add a pinch of salt. Strain through two thicknesses of cheesecloth. The gruel should be thick enough to jelly when cold. If too thin, cook longer.

Whey.

To one quart of skimmed milk, heated to 105 Deg. F. add four teaspoonfuls of liquid rennet. Let stand in a cool place till the curd forms. Break up the curd with a fork and strain through four layers of cheesecloth or muslin. Heat the liquid (whey) to 155 Deg. F. and allow to cool gradually. Keep on ice. One quart of milk makes 24 ounces of whey.

Albumen Water.

To four ounces of water, heated to 104 Deg. F. add the white of one egg, stir with a knife until dissolved. Do not beat or shake. Strain through cheesecloth.

Broth.

Put a pound of meat in one pint of cold water. Add a pinch of salt. Cook slowly for three or four hours. Strain through two thicknesses of cheesecloth and cool. Remove all the fat.

Beef Juice.

Partially broil over coals, both sides of a half pound of the top of a round of beef. Cut in small pieces and squeeze out the juice using a meat press or wooden lemon squeezer. Add a pinch of salt. Half a pound of beef makes two ounces of beef juice.

Scraped Beef.

Scrape a piece of round steak with a knife and then very slightly broil. Scraped beef is free from fibre and is better than minced beef.

Junket.

To one quart of whole milk heated to 105 Deg. F. add four teaspoonfuls of liquid rennet. Add a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of granulated sugar. Let stand in a cool place till the curd forms. Strain off the liquid. The balance is junket.

Coddled Egg.

Put the egg in boiling water and immediately remove from the fire. Cover and let stand for seven or eight minutes. The white of the egg should be soft and not liquid.

Prune Juice.

Take half a pound of good prunes. Wash and soak in water over night. Cover with water and add half a teaspoonful of sugar. Cook in a double boiler until the prunes are perfectly tender. Strain through cheesecloth. The resulting liquid is prune juice.

Soap Suppository.

Take a piece of castile or common brown soap and cut out a portion one or two inches long, pointed at one end and about as thick as a lead pencil. This will make a very good suppository. Slightly wet when about to use it.

Boracic Acid Solution (2 per cent.)

Put one tablespoonful of boracic acid crystals in a clean eight-ounce bottle filled with boiled water. Shake the bottle. Not all the crystals will be dissolved, but the water will be a saturated (4 per cent.) solution. Some of this diluted with equal parts of boiled water will be a 2 per cent. solution. The 4 per cent. solution should be so labelled and used as a stock solution.

THE POTATO CROP

Thousands of farmers have suffered heavy losses at various times from fungus diseases attacking potato crops. Weak, spindly hills make breeding places for the diseases which would never get started otherwise. These spindly hills are often caused by planting weak seed, the result of carelessness in selecting the tubers for seed. Like begets like and the sooner persons planting small or diseased potatoes realize this the better it will be for their crop yields.

Remarkable results have been obtained by investigators in seed selection work with potatoes. Intricate methods are not necessary to obtain marked improvement in the ordinary field crops. It is a good plan to go over the field when the tops are about half ripened off and mark with a stake or twig the hills which show exceptional vigor and resistance to disease, to drought or to heat. At digging time these hills can be kept apart for seed. Any of the marked hills not yielding smooth or superior potatoes should be discarded.

Farmers may think it too much trouble to save all their seed in this way but enough can easily be selected to plant a special seed plot each year from which seed for the main crop the following year may be obtained. If the farmer neglects to mark the vigorous hills he should, at least, note and keep apart the high yielding hills of smooth, uniform tubers for a seed plot next year. Potato growers will find that it is highly profitable to select their potatoes for seed carefully and intelligently as it will mean greater productiveness, vigor and uniformity in shape and size.—F.C.N., in Conservation.

"HOMESTEADER BROWN"

Lawyer Who Found Health and Fortune in West

The following sketch is of Hon. George Brown, former Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan: In 1882 a lanky law student emerged from Toronto University in indifferent health. He decided to build up that health by forsaking the law for the wheat farm. He went West and he drove his team ahead of the C.P.R. then extended no farther than Brandon, to Big Boggy Creek, north of Pile o' Bones, now Regina. He homesteaded there and went through all the hardships of pioneering on land which nobody understood, and which more men abandoned than stayed on it.

There is no room here to explain the peculiarities of gumbo and the treatment of summer fallow. The curriculum the young lawyer went through was severe, but it resulted in his assertion that year in and year out he would produce twenty-six bushels of wheat per acre from land which was commonly believed to be worthless for wheat thirty years ago.

As Governor he was still farming a couple of thousand acres, which was some remove from the homesteading limitations of Big Boggy Creek. The interval had brought much more than a patent for the homestead. Farmer Brown transferred himself again into Lawyer Brown. When Walter Scott's advice to Sir Wilfrid elevated Lawyer Brown from an aldermancy of Regina to the Governorship of a Province the office force of Brown and Mackenzie was between forty-five and fifty. It is probably true that in the five years before the gubernatorial epoch no man in Western Canada was personally responsible for the lending of so much money to farmers as Homesteader Brown.

Province of Small Farms

Prince Edward Island is a Province of comparatively small farms. There are 14,369 holdings. Those classified are: (1) between 100 and 200 acres, 3,327; (2) between fifty and 100 acres, 5,494; (3) between ten and fifty acres, 5,349. The general run of farms cover from fifty to 125 acres each.

PARCELS TO SOLDIERS

should always contain a few boxes of Zam-Buk. Pte. J. R. Smith, of the "Princess Pats," writing to a friend in Ottawa, says:—

"Tell my friends, if they want to help me, to send more Zam-Buk. We need all we can get out here."

The men say nothing can equal Zam-Buk for the many ailments and injuries incidental to a soldier's life at the front. It is invaluable for cuts, scratches, burns, sore hands, cold cracks, chilblains, blistered feet, and all skin ailments.

Zam-Buk is antiseptic, and its application to a wound as soon as sustained will prevent blood-poisoning and save suffering.

Zam-Buk has been aptly described as "a dispensary in a two-inch box," and every soldier should carry a box in his pocket. All druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

ASKING SETTLERS' HELP

Enterprise of Foresters in Western Provinces of Canada

The ingenuity of some of the northern fire rangers in the prairie provinces in working up publicity schemes to aid fire prevention has often received a deserved testimony. The Canadian Forestry Association received and commended a unique book of photographs fashioned between birch bark covers, and with typewritten text graphically describing the case for forest protection. It was the work of Jas. T. Blackford, Chief Fire Ranger of the Dominion Forestry Branch at Norway House, Manitoba. The only means of access to the country patrolled by Mr. Blackford and his men is by steamboat, and the book was placed on a table of the steamer so that hundreds of travellers coming in and out read it through. On the cover were the words: "Manitoba North Fire Ranging District, Patriotic Slogan: 'No Fires in 1916.'"

Keep the wax-coated boxes in which crackers are placed. They make excellent polishers for irons.

If grease is spilled on the kitchen floor, cover with layer of soda and cold water before scrubbing. The spot will be easily removed.

In scouring faucets great care should be taken not to force the scouring material into the joints, as the small particles cut away the screw threads in turning many times each day.

Impress upon the mind the sink waste pipe was installed for carrying off waste water—not vegetable peeling, bits of paper, burned matches or grease.

One or two asbestos mats should be in every kitchen to place under pans on the fire so as to prevent their contents cooking too fast.

If the oven bakes too rapidly on the bottom keep a sheet of asbestos the size of oven. Place on bottom.

Was Troubled With Shortness of Breath

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, dizziness, and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

The nerves become unstrung, you dread to be alone, have a horror of society, start at the least noise and are generally fatigued.

On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be taken. They are just what you require at this time. They regulate and stimulate the heart, and strengthen and restore the whole nerve system.

Mrs. C. M. Cormier, Buctouche, N.B., writes: "Since two years ago I was troubled with a shortness of breath, and sometimes I could hardly breathe. I went to see several doctors, and they said it was from my heart and nerves, but they did not seem to do me any good. One day I got one of your B.B.B. Almanacs and read of a case similar to mine.

"I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking it I noticed such a change that I kept on taking them until I had used four more boxes, when I was cured."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box, three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

EVOLUTION OF GROCER ONE ESSENTIAL TRADE

"Engrosser" Was First a Dealer in Merchandise of Every Conceivable Kind

Nothing is so necessary in any community, nothing so unescapable as the grocer. It is the first business of the frontier settlement, and it plays the most important role in the business drama of any town. One can hardly imagine a city, in any age, in which there were no grocery stores, and yet the institution is a comparatively modern one. Do you know how groceries originated?

Only a few hundred years ago certain foresighted tradesmen in France went about the country buying up bargain lots of merchandise. They bought fire damaged goods, bankrupt stocks, all sorts of commodities. They bought these things "en gros" and made money out of them.

Replaced the "Spicers"

The trade was carried to England, where a man who bought hardware, thread, furniture, vegetables "en gros," or in large quantities, called himself an "engrosser." This was later shortened to "grocer," but the term was still applied to the proprietor of a general business. The grocery was a sort of racket shop, like the modern 10-cent store.

Gradually, it appears, the "grocer" found it more profitable to deal in tea, coffee, spices, fruits and non-perishable foodstuffs, and he confined his attention to these things. He took over the business of the "spicer"— in France the shop which we call a grocery is still known as an "epicerie." So far was the original meaning of the term lost sight of that a man who deals exclusively in fresh vegetables came to be known as a "green grocer."

As Saloonkeeper

The dealer in foodstuffs has not long been a grocer. Out on the Western frontier the saloon was formerly known as the grocery. It sounds strange to read in the border letters of 75 years ago, "The groceries are the curse of our camp." Perhaps the proprietor of such a place adopted that name as a blind for his relatives back East—but this is a mere supposition.

AGENT'S WOES AND RISE

How One Young Canadian Earned Big Promotions Quickly

An agent in 1898 and fourth vice-president of the world's biggest life insurance company in 1917. This surprising rise marks the career of a Canadian boy, James E. Kavanagh. Kavanagh was born in 1873 at Sharon, York County, and educated at Newmarket and in Toronto. He taught school, and then, during a mid-summer vacation, tried his hand at insurance for the Metropolitan of New York, his first and only insurance love. He let the teaching go—that is, school teaching—to educate the people in insurance lines. While collecting in the Ward in Toronto, he threw up the job three times in "concussion," so to speak. Fortune smiled after these shivers, and he went up fast.

He became an assistant superintendent at Toronto and Brantford in 1897. Two years later he was sent to Eastern Canada. There he was promoted to a superintendency, with headquarters at St. John, N.B. A transfer to Toronto came in 1901, and in 1905 he was made superintendent of agencies for the Great Northern Territory, including the Dominion of Canada east of the Rockies and New York State other than the city.

Mr. Kavanagh has done at least two things that have interested Canadians: (1) When the Metropolitan took over the business of the Union Life this Canadian was given charge of the huge transfer, and accomplished it in less than a month; (2) When the great war staggered humanity Kavanagh had an inspiration—to help insure Toronto's soldiers. The Metropolitan accepted a big share of the insurance—the directors could not resist this persuasive pleader, although at first they refused to even consider taking the war risks.

KAISERIN'S FINE JEWELS

Wears Fortune In Precious Stones But Dresses Very Plainly

The German Empress is said on State occasions to wear not less than $1,250,000 worth of diamonds and pearls. The Kaiser was furious when at one great function the Kaiserin was outshone by the ex-Queen of Italy, the beautiful Margherita, and insisted that the Empress should almost load herself with gems.

One of her ornaments, by the way, is said to be the circle of gems which Napoleon wore in his hat, and which was found by Blucher's soldiers after Waterloo. A few extra stones are attached to her fan, and at court functions it is the duty of two pages to see that none of these fall off. The Empress's personal jewellery, on the other hand, is said to be surpassed by that of many middle-class women in Germany; while she is also in ordinary life one of the plainest of dressers. Her gowns, in fact, have been styles by French ladies "simply appalling."

AVIATOR'S NERVY DEED

Badly Wounded He Thought Only of Saving His Machine

"The British air raid at Courtrai was one of the most heroic episodes of the war," says the Officis' Press Bureau. "The aviator started alone in a biplane. On his arrival over Courtrai he glided to a height of but 300 feet and dropped a large bomb on the railway junction. He was the target of hundreds of rifles, machine guns and anti-aircraft armament and was severely wounded in the thigh. He decided to save his machine at all costs and made for the British lines, descending to a height of 100 feet in order to increase his speed. He was again wounded and flew back to his own base, where he executed a perfect landing and made his report. He died in the hospital shortly afterwards."

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts, which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

DO TREES HOLD RAIN?

Swiss Experiments Show Value of Forests in Stream Control

Experience has proved that the forest works efficaciously against many dangers resulting from the elements let loose, such as avalanches, falls of stones, erosion, earthslides, inundations. These are facts admitted and indisputable, but how and in what measure does the forest exercise this moderating action upon the destructive power of water How can it lessen the destruction from inundations? It is in order to attempt an answer to this leading question that the Swiss Federal Station of Forest Research in 1900 installed an observing station in the basin from which two streams of the Bernese Emmental are fed. The geological formation is fissured pudding-stone which decomposes readily.

One of the basins, with an extent of 140 acres, is completely wooded. The other with an area of 175 acres has only a small average of wooded district, about 30 per cent. The forest is composed of spruce and of alder bushes. The measurements of the precipitation, rain and snow, takes place regularly throughout the year. In each of the basins there have been installed three rain gauge stations at diffrent altitudes. At the junction of the two streams with the Hornbach certain apparatus registers automatically every five minutes day and night the volume of the water flowing.

The Research Station has proved that: (1) In case of storms accompanied with heavy rains the maximum outflow in the wooded valley is from 30 to 50 per cent. less than that from the other valley, and there is another beneficial circumstance from the action of the forest, that this maximum flow is produced later in the wooded basin than in the other, (2) In the long periods of drought (the summers of 1904, 1906, 1908 and 1911) the wooded district gave without interruption a flow of water while in the denuded valley the stream dried up and all the springs ceased although at a normal time they have an abundant flow.

Aim of Rural Schools

"The Canadian rural school that is merely an attenuated city school is missing its mission to its community and should not be endured," says Neil McNeil, D.D., Roman Catholic Archbishop of Toronto.

German Retreat Is Coming To A Standstill

German Retreat Slackens As Allies' Reach Hindenburg Line

Resistance of Huns Increasing But French Forces Occupied Several Other Important Villages North of Soisson in Spite of Vigorous Defence By Germans---Sharp Fighting Reported--Allies' Advance is Systematic---United States Navy is Hustling Preparations For War With Germany.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, March 22.—The German retrogade movement on the western front was coming to a standstill to-day as French and British troops reached points very near the "Hindenburg Line." Fighting between the masses may now be expected shortly to occur, according to military experts.

This fighting may come in a German offensive.

Meanwhile despatches from the front indicated the tremendous scope of the forward movement of the Allied armies, a co-ordinated advance of every department of a vast attacking force.

PARIS (French Official Communique), March 22.—Despite vigorous defense by the Germans, the French forces have occupied several more villages north of Soissons in their forward sweep, to-day's official statement declared.

A French troop threw the enemy out of several important positions north of Tergnier during the night, the statement declared.

During the night after sharp fighting they also occupied several more villages north of Soissons despite vigorous defense by the Germans.

French troops raided German trenches north of Berry-au-Bac and captured prisoners.

WASHINGTON, March 22. — The navy will bear the burden of the coming war with Germany. While an army will undoubtedly be raised, military men say that this will not be an overseas army.

The navy is pushing contractors to the limit and for the most part is receiving the most earnest co-operation. Destroyers bids will be opened Saturday, in advance of the schedule time.

Special attention is given to air craft development.

A meeting to discuss that subject was booked for the War Department to-day.

GERMANS APPARENTLY MAKING A STAND

Great Battle Expected Between Lafere and Coucy on a Twenty Mile Front—Cavalry of Both Sides in Action and Artillery is Moving

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Eng., March 22.—The Germans are now apparently making a stand for a great battle between La Fere and Coucy on a twenty-mile front. The cavalry of both sides are in action and the artillery is moving up. Experts say the world's greatest battle is likely to be fought here at once.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES AFIELD, March 22.—The horror of the German retreat grew to-day when it became known that the Teutons at Rouy le Petit collected about two hundred old people and children in addition to the usual population of the place, and then deliberately shelled the village.

A number of these defenceless innocent people were killed.

As the Germans fall back under the relentless Anglo-French pressure, the ugliest side of the war is uncovered. Hideous evidences of vandalism abound everywhere.

But most tragic of all are the human wrecks left behind. They stare at the incoming British and French troops with eyes made wild by suffering. Their faces wear a blank expression, because back of them are brains dulled by lack of proper sustenance.

The faces of babies and the younger children are especially pitiful. Colourless they are, with great black circles under the eyes.

LONDON, March 22.—The German retreat is not yet ended, in the opinion of General F. B. Maurice, British director of military operations.

Discussing from the western front to-day, General Maurice declared the German destructive tactics far exceeded the military needs of the situation. He suggested the possibility that they were dictated by a political motive, the idea being to inspire fear from the French that all territory which Germany would relinquish would be treated similarly and thus to lead the French to consider peace.

PETROGRAD, March 22.—The Holy Synod of the Russian Church to-day decided to send a message to "All children of the church" declaring the revolution "was brought about by God's hand." "Inasmuch as the Lord holds the fate of the kingdom and its peoples," the message read, "we exhort our members to obey the new government and fulfill their duty as Christian citizens."

Correspondence between the Czarina and former Minister Protopotoff has been discovered, the Bourse Gazette asserted to-day, proving that Protopotoff and others in the former Royalist government, attempted to conclude a separate peace with Germany.

BERLIN, March 22.—"An aeroplane directed by Prince Friedrich Karl of Prussia, has not returned from a raid over hostile lines between Arras and Peronne," declared an official War Office statement to-day.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—There are 30,000 cases of small-pox in Germany, and the disease is spreading, according to a speech of the Socialist Reichstag Member Hoffman, received by the State Department to-day.

The speech showed a far more distressing situation in Germany than many reports thus far reaching the Department.

It strengthened the belief, caused by recent rumours, that conditions are ripe for a real revolution in Germany.

LONDON, March 22. — The Irish party in Parliament to-day sent this message to the Russian Duma President: "We offer to the Russian Duma our heartfelt congratulations on the liberation of the Russian people from autocratic rule, and send the Russian nation the heartiest good will of the Irish nation."

GREETINGS TO BE SENT TO THE NEW RUSSIAN PARLIAMENT

"Not Too Soon to Send Friendly Greetings" Remarks Bonar Law in Moving in British Parliament That This Step Be Carried Out

"IMMEDIATE RECOGNITION"

Examiner Special:

LONDON, March 22.—Greetings from "The Mother of All Parliaments" to the new Russian Parliament, were moved in the House of Commons this afternoon by Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law.

"It is too soon," he said, "to feel confident that the new Russian Government has laid a foundation on which liberty will have wisdom and justice as companions, but it is not too soon to send friendly greeting.

"The events in Russia arrested the attention of the whole world and remind one of the earlier days of the French revolution."

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said he had compassion for the Czar, who for three years was a loyal ally, and whose burden had been too heavy for him.

Former Premier Asquith, seconding Bonar Law, said "the momentous events in Russia are of such a kind as to deserve and demand special and immediate recognition".

Lieut. Crisp Fell 200 Feet In An Aeroplane

Former Machine Gun Officer of the 93rd Peterboro' Battalion Badly Injured in an Accident in Yorkshire, Eng.

HIS SKULL FRACTURED

It will be with great regret that his many friends in Peterborough will learn that Lieut. R. A. Crisp, former machine gun officer of the 93rd Battalion, and more recently with the Royal Flying Corps, who was reported seriously ill a couple of days ago is in very grave condition in a military hospital at York Eng. Further particulars received yesterday conveyed the news that Lieut. Crisp had sustained a fracture of the base of the skull as the result of a fall of 200 feet in an aeroplane.

Lieut. Crisp was with the 93rd Battalion during all its training in Peterborough, and organized and commanded the splendid machine gun section of the Peterborough battalion. When the 93rd Battalion reached England Lieut. Crisp transferred to the Royal Flying Corps and had practically completed his training as an aviator and was expected to go to France at once when the accident occurred. His many friends in the city will be shocked to learn that his condition is very serious indeed.

SERGT. VICTOR IS ELECTED MEMBER OF PROVINCIAL EXECUTIVE

Peterborough Returned Soldiers Represented at Gathering of War Veterans in Toronto--Most Important Meeting of the Club Will Be Held To-night---More Peterborough Men in Cobourg Heavy Battery--To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Sergt. Peter Victor and Pte. R. H. Muir have returned from Toronto, where they were representing the Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club at the convention of the Great War Veterans' Association at which a large number of important problems affecting the welfare of the men who have seen overseas service was discussed. The Peterborough organization was recognized by the appointment of Sergt Victor, who is the president of the local club, as a member of the Provincial Executive Committee for the Province of Ontario.

There will be a very important meeting of the Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club to-night in the club room in the Barrie Building to discuss the report brought back by delegates Victor and Muir. Every officer and returned soldier in Peterborough is urged to attend this meeting as there will be some drastic discussion on matters that must be attended to at once. Among these is the question of the affiliation of the local club with the Great War Veterans' Association. At present the local organization is known as the Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club. The Great War Veterans are applying for a Dominion charter and will oppose the application of the Army and Navy Veterans for a similar charter. A Dominion Convention of the War Veterans is to be held next month in Winnipeg and the Peterborough Association will likely be represented.

It is up to every returned man to "stand to" to-night and attend this most important meeting.

The Kingston Standard says:

Sergt.-Maj. Beale, of the chief recruiting staff, Princess street, who has recently been promoted to sergeant-major has returned from a successful twelve days' recruiting campaign in Peterborough.

CANADIAN ENGINEERS APPEAL FOR MEN.

The Canadian Engineers require men for overseas and are desirous of recruiting these men at once. The activity at the front would chiefly indicate the necessity for more technically trained men, as it is evident that it is all the time becoming more and more an Engineers war.

The Canadian Engineers are built up of tradesmen only. They hold the same relative position to the Canadian Army that the Royal Engineers do to the Imperial Army. The training depot for the Canadian Engineers is at St. Johns, Que., situated about 20 miles from the city of Montreal. Drafts are sent to St. Johns at frequent intervals where the training is completed before going overseas.

The training of the Engineers is modelled on the same lines as that of the Royal Engineers of Great Britain and it has been found that the men enlisting in the Engineers are so adaptable to their work that it has only taken a very short time to train them and they go overseas without any long waits.

The Canadian Engineers have won imperishable fame on the battlefields of France and Belgium and it is to uphold that honour and fame that we are now calling for men to assist in this important work.

The work of the Engineers is of paramount importance. The Engineers build wire entanglements, install water supplies, install sanitary systems, build bridges, build roads; in fact an army cannot move effectively without an efficient organization, and the various trades that are included in this organization are carpenters bridgemen, wheelwrights, bricklayers, gas engineers, steam engineers, fitters, turners, masons, harness makers, plumbers, painters, plasterers, blacksmiths, shoeingsmiths railway men, electricians, telephone men, line men, teamsters, etc.

The pay in the Engineers is the same as in other units but there is an advance in enlisting in the Engineers, which is, that a man is always learning something, if not in his own trade, in that of his neighbour; for instance, a carpenter might be a helper to a plumber today and tomorrow a plumber might be a helper to a carpenter. In this way men are not forgetting their own trade but are actually learning several trades, at the same time 'doing their bit' for King and Country.

INSENSATE DESTRUCTION MARKS HUNS' RETREAT

Germans Sacked Even the Supply Houses of the American Relief Commission—Carried Off Every Vestige of Metal From the Villages Evacuated.

A STREAM OF REFUGEES

(By Henry Wood, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

With the French Armies Advancing From Noyon to Chauny and Tergnier, March 21.—(By Auto to Paris, March 23).—Retreating German troops sacked even the supply houses of the American Relief Commission to leave the French civilian inhabitants utterly without food. They took every vestige of every metal in the French villages, and their policy of insensate destruction marked practically every house in the territory which they evacuated.

Nor is the French advance lacking in methodical system. A few miles beyond Noyon to-day, I witnessed the rapidity with which the French are overcoming every effort of the enemy to check their advance. There the French columns encountered a fifty-foot hole—a crater on the Noyon—Chauny road—exactly at the spot best calculated to impede the advance.

The French infantry and cavalry immediately detoured to adjoining fields and continued their forward movement without interruption. At the same moment engineers began filling the crater and bridging it. Another detachment started at work on a road winding around the place.

Almost before the last shovel of dirt was thrown and the last nail driven, batteries of the famous 'Soixante Quinze' guns went careening across while to one side, munitions and supply trains dashed forward likewise. The entire advance was resumed.

Along the road back from Tergnier and Noyon poured an unending stream of refugees from these blazing farms and villages. Nearly all were women—pitiful in their destitution a few scant pieces of clothing saved and strapped on their backs, or pushing baby carriages, or wheelbarrows, with tiny tots tucked therein. This was a pitiful appearing stream. Pushing afoot along a road stretching eighteen miles and constantly under bombardment, the refugees faced a driving winter rain. Although they were homeless, and hunger stricken, with only the clothing on their backs, or a few small belongings to call their own—despite all this they were supremely and radiantly happy. They were returning to France.

I talked to many of these to-day. They declared the happiest moment in their lives was when the French cavalry dashed into their village and chased out the Germans.

7,000 women and children sufferad this experience at Chauny alone. The village was under bombardment at the moment I arrived. The French Red Cross crews with their litters, who had pushed forward on foot, were carrying off women and children wounded during the shell fire.

COUNTER DEPUTATION URGED THAT BATHING PLACES BE DEFERRED

The Needs of the Hour Too Numerous and Serious to Admit of Expenditure For This Need

CONFERENCE HELD YESTERDAY

The agitation for public bathing places this year met a counter force yesterday afternoon at the conference of representatives of the Playgrounds Association and the Council's special committee composed of Mayor Duffus, Ald. Dobbin and Ald. Stratton. A deputation, comprising Mr. V. Eastwood, W. H. Bradburn and T. H. G. Denne attended the meeting. Mr. Bradburn and Mr. Eastwood expressed their sympathy with the idea of public bathing places, but they felt that the time was inopportune, and moreover that the great body of ratepayers did not welcome unnecessary expenditure this year when so many pressing necessities must be provided for.

"Contra-deputations" are no novelty, but they are rarely employed in movements of a public nature. Hence only one side of the case is impressed upon the Council and the silent opposition does not reach the Aldermen except from casual and individual expressions. In this case of public swimming places an exceptionally strong petition was laid before the Council and the whole movement was of a decidedly formidable and serious nature. But the opinion of the street has disapproved of action this year, while supporting the general idea of bathing places.

Mr. Meserve of the Y.M.C.A. who has given a great deal of time and study to Peterborough's stretch of water front devoid of supervised swimming facilities stated yesterday that only two locations presented themselves. Inverlea Park and the foot of Lake street. He also mentioned the vicinity of Riverside Park. He had prepared a plan of the dressing quarters, estimated at $1,000 for each of the two places mentioned.

The impression remaining after yesterday's conference is that the movement has been held up for a year at least, and that no further action will be taken by the present Council.

Mr. Mitchell, who leaves on Saturday for Toronto. Rev. T. A. Walker of Owen Sound and Calgary will preach at St. Andrew's on Sunday next.

WHERE WE TRIUMPH.

One consideration that is an appreciable one in connection with the cultivation of the home garden and the vacant lot, is the satisfaction to the citizen on his ability to largely overcome the price-rising causes of food, represented largely by the cold-blooded cold storage operators, the profits of the middlemen, the cost of transportation, and the deterioration of quality involved in waiting to purchase for use. Every householder almost can grow a considerable, if not sufficient, supply of green foods, have them fresh on the table from their growing places, at no cost but the paltry cost for seed. The labour involved, like a robin's feeding of its chicks—often and a little at a time—is not to be considered as cost. It is recreation—in the true sense, re-creation of physical energy, restoration of physical resources, by healthy exercise in the open air, inhaling the fresh breath of mother earth. Then we have added as a bonus, the delight of growing things, the delight of seeing things grow: creating something out of nothing, and the joy of figuratively sitting "under our own vine and fig-tree," with neither middleman nor cold-storage man, nor traffic-mover, "daring to molest us or make us afraid." According to the calendar spring is here; in a few days the ground wil be clear of frost, and warmed with the sun. Let us get together our little gardening tools and wear the winter's rust off them by use in our home gardens and vacant lots.

FOLLOW THE LEAD.

No limit need be placed to the credit bestowed upon the City Council for their prompt, energetic and alert action in regard to the important question of securing and facilitating reconstruction of the buildings and reestablishment of the plant of the Quaker Oats Company. The City Council seems to be anxious and ready to do their part, and to the citizens generally falls the lot of loyally and liberally giving the Council their backing. Every thinking ratepayer realized the loss the city sustained by the destruction by fire of the Quaker Oats buildings on Dec. 11th. The loss was not for a day, nor in the destruction of expensive and stately buildings; but if the works were not resumed the loss was permanent, and continuous—the loss of the benefits of a splendid and splendidly conducted business, the loss of employment, the loss of expenditure of wages of a huge pay roll in the city, to the stimulating and energizing of business; and all the other benefits incidental to the presence and operation of a gigantic industry. The permanent loss of the Quaker Oats enterprise would have been an enduring injury to the industrial prestige and general prosperity of Peterborough, with a depressing effect upon all real estate values. It is safe to say that the very announcement of the intention of the company to rebuild in Peterborough added distinctly to the value of every foot of real estate in the city.

The people and the Council must work together in giving effect to the conditions upon which re-construction and re-establishment depend. The Council so far is splendidly leading the way, and it is "up to" every citizen to loyally, in the city's interests, follow their lead.

THRIFT AND WASTE.

In meaning, thrift and waste are as antagonistic words as light and darkness. Thrift is a virtue; waste is a vice. Yet while Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance is beseeching us to practice thrift, he is in the midst of mighty waste conducted by the government, whose purse strings he holds. Sir Thomas is calling upon us to be saving and thrifty in order that we may lend more money to the government to waste; for that is what the situation amounts to.

In the estimates, Parliament is asked to provide $7,224,361 for the civil service the coming year. The civil service is charged with the collecting and expenditure of money, with manning the machinery of government, and as a rule its cost does not need to increase in proportion to the growth of the country and the increase in national expenditure. It isn't much more trouble to spend 40 millions than 20 millions—doesn't require any great increase of staff or other expense.

Bearing this in mind, it will give pertinence and point to the little contrast involved in the fact that in the last year of the late Laurier regime, the civil service cost the country $4,-583,637. There is almost a half million difference in the figures of the expenditures of 1911 and 1917.

There seems to be no accounting for the great increase except on the ground of extravagant and wasteful administration. It may be claimed that our expenditures are largely increased by the war. That does not affect the civil service whose cost has been nearly doubled. The cost of this year's or last year's civil service should not be, and is not, affected by war conditions. The amount voted or to be devoted to civil service expenditure does not include the salaries of temporary employees, or any of the large army of additional employees in connection with war expenditure. That is all paid for out of the special war appropriations.

And the increase of civil service expenditure of nearly sixty per cent. in five years, does not come from increase of salaries, for there have been no increases since 1911. The cause of it is largely due to the patronage system. Party workers, party heelers, clamour for their rewards and their clamour is met. They are pitchforked into positions in the civil service, where they are not needed except to meet the demand of reward for party service. A class paper, the Civilian, the organ of the Civil Service at Ottawa, states:

"The Civil Service is over-manned to a remarkable degree, and on account of this over-manning, of inefficient organisation or duplication, or other kinds of waste, there is a loss, conservatively estimated of five millions a year."

Thus we have an explanation of the riotous waste in civil service administration at Ottawa—why the expenditure has nearly doubled in five years; and the malign operation of the patronage system explains the explanation.

If the civil service at Ottawa were conducted upon the business principles that are applied to a private enterprise, with efficiency and sufficiency of service, the only rule we should find the government practicing thrift instead of wasting the public money by the millions.

Besides, if the government should take one-half of the superfluous civil servants by the nape of the neck and the posterior redundancy of raiment, and pitch them into the ranks of the Canadian army, as it has pitchforked them into the expensive ranks of the civil service, a double good would there by be done. There is a splendid chance to do this. Captain Dancy, of Ottawa, speaking at a recruiting meeting in Cornwall, declared that of the 1900 in the civil service, only four had volunteered.

Sir Thomas White may talk "saving and thrift" till he is black in the face, and still be showing mighty bad inconsistency, while he and his government permit supernumerary civil servants, paid out of the public purse as a reward for party service, to carry away—steal as far as public interests are usefully and necessarily served—from four to five million dollars a year.

ARE WE IN EARNEST?

The Ottawa Journal-Press, a staunch supporter of the government, praising all things, excusing all things, the government does or doesn't do, qqualifies its commendation by occasional and not infrequent pin-pricks—but still enough, one would think to penetrate the thick skin of government self-complacency. The Journal-Press, for instance, in discussing, in reference to calling out 50,000 militia men for home defence, the quqestion—"Should it have been a compulsory call"? says:

The Journal newspapers fully realise the difficulties of the problem which Sir Edward Kemp has to face, they demand for him all public sympathy and help, but they do urge upon him the importance, now of at least announcing that it is young unmarried men he requires for the Home Defence force, and that this is the last chance that they will get of voluntary enlistment in this force.

Further, men of less than 30 years of age should not be permitted to cross into the United States without a passport. If such an order did nothing more than remind some of the young fellows that there is such a thing as a war on, it would be worth while.

It is no wonder the Journal-Press calls for closing the door against skedaddlers." It is so obviously the right thing to do that The Examiner weeks ago, and from time to time, has urged the government to bar the door, and prevent eligible young men from leaving their country to their country's loss—for though they fight shy of fighting, of enlisting willingly, they should still be reckoned upon. We are not yet done with this war, and do not know to what calls we may have to respond, how much we shall have to extend o rselves, and make fight the young man who can fight, and won't fight.

But we can't expect the government to take either our advice, or that of its own organ. We have plenty of young men slackers, which is not so surprising since the government is somewhat of a slacker itself. It has dallied, trifled, and played with the recruiting question, and has failed to give the official help, countenance and impulse to recruiting that its responsibility and the situation demanded. The government and the military authorities seem to have caught the cacoethes scribendi—the writing itch—from President Wilson. They tried to mobolize the young manhood of the country by post card correspondence, which failed to reach the very class it was intended to net—the slacker class. Now, as another example, No. 1 Military District, headquarters, London, has sent a polite invitation to eligible young men, "requesting the pleasure of their attendance" at recruiting headquarters. In addition, to those sending "regrets" the greater number will not pay any attention to the invitation, as happened in the cases of tens of thousands of the National Service Cards.

This childish trifling with the serious matter of recruiting, would be laughable if it were not so tragic.

Is the call for mobilisation of the militia any more likely to succeed? The Journal-Press urges the government to hasten to fasten some dignified name upon the National Home Guard Army, lest the irreverent should dub it with some ridiculous title a la "tin-pot navy."

Are we in earnest? Is the government in earnest?

Government Organ's Opinion Of Effects Of Government Inaction

The Toronto Mail, one of the Toriest of Tory papers, is apparently as absolutely disgusted with the disgraceful inaction of the Government in connection with the price-boosters and food combines as most of the rest of the Press of Canada. Referring to the ridiculous excuse for inaction put forward by Mr. Crothers in connection with the famine prices for potatoes, it says:

The decision at Ottawa is against an embargo on the export of potatoes, because, according to Department of Agriculture estimates, there is a surplus of a million and a half or two million bushels in this country over food and seed requirements. If that estimate of supply is correct, why have potatoes advanced to $4 and $5 a bag? It is claimed that the scarcity is only in Ontario and Quebec — that the Maritime Provinces and the West have plenty. Shortage of transportation facilities is blamed. The remedy of the situation is said to be in the hands of the Provincial Governments. The Provincial Governments have no authority of particular value over railway transportation, over exports of potatoes, or over holding up of supplies. It is true that the provincial and municipal authorities and a good many private organizations are endeavouring to arrange for the stimulation of potato growing, to prevent any such famine prices next year. But that remedy cannot be effective before midsummer, and has no relation to the failure of the Dominion Government to grapple directly with an obviously artificial "famine." A good deal more attention to the needs of the city consumers has become necessary than has been given in the past. The burden of war taxes falls most heavily upon the wage-earners, because they do not get added prices for their product, labour—at least in a sufficient degree—and these are left at the mercy of many casual conditions that ought to be firmly grappled with by the authorities.

We wonder if the members of the Government realize the disgust and indignation of the people over the way in which they are assisting in the bleeding of the public? The Government made this state of affairs possible by imposing enormous taxation on all imports, and then leaving consumers to struggle unaided in the grip of combines and trusts. They actually assist by their legislation the promotion of combines and unfair trading, and then pass an Order-in-Council which, while pretending to tackle the cost of living, is used by Mr. Crothers only for the purpose of giving price-boosters a governmental blessing.—Montreal Herald.

Liberal Members On Crusade or Rampage

Special to the Examiner.

TORONTO, March 20—Every little while the Liberal members in the Legislature go on a crusade or a rampage, according to one's point of view. Their latest object of anathema is race track gambling, particularly during the war. This propaganda has brought into prominence a member of the Legislature and of the Liberal party, who, up to the present, has not taken a very active part in the debates, but who, since his coming into the House in 1914, has been greatly admired and respected for his solidity and good judgment—Mr. Lambert Wigle of South Essex. Mr. Wigle is a practical, hard-working farmer, who really tills the soil, and in his vigorous protest against the evils of race track gambling, he undoubtedly represented very widespread public opinion among the country districts in Ontario, as well as reflecting a considerable body of opinion in the cities as well. Mr. Wigle gave an example of a man whom he knew, employed in a departmental store in Windsor, who had lost $1,800 on the horses.

Sam Carter again was riding a charger and waving the white plume in his reference to race track gambling in Ontario as an "outrageous scandal." His attitude showed up clearly the difference in the Carter-businessman type of mind and the legal mind, represented in this case by the Hon. T. W. McGarry. The Provincial Treasurer had said emphatically that the government could not keep out the race tracks, and that all they hadd done was to impose a license on them for revenue purposes. Carter, however, was for cutting the gordian knot by using this license as a lever to throw the white business out of the Province by raising the license to a prohibitive point. Mr. McGarry was afraid that such action would be declared illegal by the courts, but the debate closed with Carter wagging his head skeptically.

Sun Life's President On The War Loan

Mr. T. B. Macaulay, president of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada gave the following interview in Montreal: "Our Canadian people responded so enthusiastically to the appeal of our country when the previous Dominion loans were issued, that we can be perfectly sure they will patriotically and unitedly support this loan also. It is quite unnecessary for me to urge Canadians to do their duty for they need no urging. I would, however, draw attention to the attractiveness of this loan from the strictly investment standpoint. Five years ago no one would have believed that it would ever have been possible to obtain 20-year 5 per cent. bonds of the Government of the Dominion of Canada, at such a low price as 96, taking into account the fact that a full half year's coupon is paid at the end of six months although purchase price is payable by four monthly instalments. The rate of interest is precisely 5.40 per cent. for the whole twenty years. Who would not rather have such an investment than even a gilt-edged mortgage. I believe this loan will be heavily over-subscribed as every previous loan has been. This means that the bonds should rise to a substantial premium over the issue price as soon as the subscriptions lists are closed. Moreover, it is so nearly certain as anything financial can be, that, in say five years from now, when this war will be history, these same bonds will be worth considerably more than par. Even if they reach par, the holders will be able to sell at a profit of nearly 5 per cent. besides getting a high interest in the meantime. The fact that these bonds run for twenty years and that they are payable in either Canada or New York, thus assuring them a very broad market, makes them more attractive as an investment than any previous issue. Viewing the question from a strictly financial standpoint, I have no hesitation in saying, this issue is so wonderfully attractive, that people will act wisely if they strain themselves to take all they can when both patriotism and financial wisdom urge us all to subscribe. The success of the loan is not open to doubt. I believe that the amount of subscription will be much in excess of the total for any previous loan offered by the Government. Our own Company is subscribing for ten million dollars. — The Monetary Times.

Commission Orders Reduction of From 20 to 50 Per Cent.

PETROGRAD, March 19.— One of the first measures of the new Government was the naming of a commission has announced an approximate scale which consumers might reasonably be asked to pay. The prices in this scale are from 20 to 50 percent. lower than those formerly demanded.

Among other things determined upon was the organization and conservation of supplies. It is formally announced that in the near future bread, butter, eggs, milk, flour, meat and forage will be placed under Government control. This step is planned not because of a shortage, but as a precaution against exploitation. The only commodity formerly regulated by ticket was sugar.

350,000 Women Make Munitions For France

Albert Thomas Says They Are More Skilful Then Men in Delicate Work

PARIS. — Three hundred and fifty thousand women are now working in the government controlled munition works in France. Albert Thomas, the Minister of Munitions, in talking of their work to the Associated Press, said:

"They are more skilful than men in things requiring delicacy of touch, quickness of hand, such as the mounting of rifle parts or the rolling of fuses. They are particularly good at laminating work.

"Then, on the heavier labor! Look at the woman on cranes lifting five tons! I have in mind a scene in heavy mechanical management in a copper-working mill. An active girl of 19 on a travelling crane is so attentive to her work that she anticipates the slowing down and stopping signals of the men who guide the load to its place. Leaning over the railing without taking her hand from the handle of the electric wheel, her eye judges the movement of her machine 30 or 40 feet below. The people underneath, working in cooperation with her, know that she will slow down at the necessary instant. It is a fine example of intelligent and trained teamwork.

This woman sewed ready made clothing before the war. Her physical labor was spent on the pedal of a sewing machine. Now she has only to move a lever. Passing from feminine employment to some of the heaviest work of men, she has said that she never worked at so profitable a trade and with less fatigue. Instead of pedalling 12 hours a day she refers managing a travelling crane for eight. The same quaqlities suffice. Instead of following the way of the needle, she surveys the descent of the load. They see from below the stern attention of her eyes."

M. Thomas has noticed that women have brought into iron working trades a personal consideration of working people for one another.

"Women from dressmaking and millinery shops for example," he said, "coming into ruder workshops, insist upon courtesy. They will not tolerate coarseness and roughness of bearing. They bring into the metal working mills their own standards of deportment and the men adopt them. The change where large numbers of women are employed has been remarkable."

M. Thomas was elected as an extreme Socialist, one of the 103 members of the United Socialist group in the Chamber of Deputies. He knows the feeling of workingmen in France more thoroughly perhaps than any other member of the Cabinet.

"I have an impression," he said, "that the idea has spread in America that the workingmen's parties in France are growing indifferent towards the war. I would like to correct that view if it exists. The French workingmen are Frenchmen. Therefore they are penetrated profoundly by the French national spirit, exalted in this period of war so powerfully that private and personal interests have been merged in the national interests. The individual soul, as it were, has been absorbed for the time being into the collective soul. The personal habits of men, the things dear to them in their daily round, the motives which inspired their lives, their very opinions concerning social and political arrangements, have for the time become so absolutely secondary that they seem not to exist. The national aspiration to win the war and to do everything that can contribute to that result, is supreme in individual life throughout France, regardless of what a man's occupation is or what his individual ambitions were. The French workingman therefore, whether he is serving in the trenches or whether he is serving in the workshop, has a supreme aim, that is to contribute to the saving of France, to do something toward the hunting from French territory of the invader and to do something for Belgium, for Europe."

Public Opinion

"NOBODY HOME."

(Louisville Courier-Journal.)

"Zimmerman confesses the plot." A little bit late to create a first class sensation, but possibly it would ease the mind of Senator Stone if Senator Stone had a mind.

REWARDED AGAIN.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

The German Crown Prince has been promoted again. Which reminds one of the way the boss' son "starts at the bottom" in a factory, and by his own unaided efforts becomes vice-president of the concern in six months or less.

FISHERS OF MEN.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

Seven Princeton theological students admit never having kissed a girl. How do these chaps ever expect to become successful fishers of men unless they learn to handle smacks?

GERMANY'S MORAL ISOLATION.

(New York Evening Post.)

The plain truth is that the moral isolation of Germany, in this matter of lawless and inhuman warfare at sea, is complete. Whatever the action of the neutrals may be, their feeling is unanimous. And it is nonsense to assert that this fact when it penetrates to the knowledge of the German people, will not have its depressing effect. Bravado and boasting may prevail for the moment but in the end the nation even in desperate mood must experience a sense of recoil and apprehension when it is made aware that its policy goes counter to the deeply-rooted convictions of the civilized world.

CREDIT AS CAPITAL.

A prominent member of the financial district, who has had many ups and downs financially states unequivocally that "Credit is a man's best capital."

He says that credit is something that may be invested and used to great advantage in business, but should not be squandered, lived on or worn away. "A man's credit may outlast a dozen fortunes and enable him to succeed on another attempt," he avers, and states that he has recently written something to the effect that it is useless and foolish to advise men to keep out of debt. Useless, because men not so constituted cannot keep ont of debt; and foolish, because the great majority cannot do business without credit.

"To use one's credit in business may be a wise and profitable investment, but to live on credit and thus wear it away, is always dangerous. A man should live on what he earns; and invest his credit only after careful investigation, and when his best judgment convinces him that it will be safe and likely to yield a profit."

The author of the foregoing is now in circumstances of affluence, after having lost nigh well on to a dozen fortunes. He attributes his final success to the fact that he never abused his credit.

THE HOUR GLASS AND EFFICIENCY.

(The Boston News Bureau.)

The electric light has not diminished the value of gas, and candles are selling better than ever before. Probably nobody has dreamed of the old-fashioned hour-glass coming back and replacing the clock in modern efficiency system—yet it has arrived.

A. E. Little, the Lynn maker of the Sorosis shoe, like Mr. Schwab, believes in interesting his employes in the progress of his business and in its sound continuity. Every forenoon there is some committee in session considering efficiency problems. In the room are old-fashioned sand glasses set for fifteen and thirty minutes. Everybody that starts to talk knows that the sands are running and no committee is ever permitted to be in session over thirty minutes and most of them are limited to fifteen minutes. But regardless of anything else the "talk" ends when the last grain of sand has run down. There are also three-minute sand glasses near the long distance telephones that are found to make for economy, as well as speed and efficiency.

Mr. Little finds that brief limited conferences oil the machinery, concentrate energy, and that the habit of quick decisions maintains speed with efficiency.

GRIFFITH TO FILM WAR.

D. W. Griffith, the motion-picture director, will sail on one of the first ships leaving for Europe, to fulfill a commission he has accepted from the Entente Allies. Mr. Griffith's commission is to make a great moving picture history of the great war to be filed in the archive of the various governments. The completed reels will be deposited in the British Museum, the Bibliotheque National of Paris and the Royal Library of Petrograd.

Mr. Griffith has been considering the offer for some time. His credentials will take him to all of the fronts and every facility will be accorded him to photographing war in all its different phases.

TALES OF THE TRENCHES

By T. HOW HUGHES

(By T. How. Hughes.)

He was a bantam —height, entered on his attestation papers as 57 inches—and he was proudly marching a Prussian Guardsman of 6 feet 2 inches along a German trench that had just been captured with intent to hand him over to the proper quarter. But his pride was tinged with just a shade of melancholy. A pal stopped to ask him how he managed it. "Easy," he says. "He was just going to throw a bomb at me, when I ups at him with my bayonet, but before I got to him he drops on his knees and shoves his bleeding hands up—and I 'adn't the 'eart to stick 'im."

'E is the British soldier's way.

They were a working party, and had almost completed a quiet night's work in No Man's Land. Suddenly the Boche gunners opened out a bit and after three shots had gone wide, a shell dropped close. The sergeant who was working among his men appeared to be hit slightly, but as he said nothing, no one took any notice. He carried on for half an hour or so and then asked permission to fall back to the trench. He walked back. A few minutes later the party returned and as they entered the trench they saw a stretcher being carried away. It was the Sergeant. His wound had been fatal.

It was just an ordinary case of devotion of duty.

Tommy Dodd was seventeen years of age and a soldier. Not being 19 he was not allowed to go to the front. But Tommy was determined so he deserted from his unit and re-enlisted in another battalion, giving his age as 19 years and 5 months. He was smart, clean and clever. But his Company Officer in time became suspicious, so he obtained Tommy's birth certificate. And Tommy did not go to France. He behaved himself for months as a soldier should, but one day at reveille, he was missing. The necessary days elapsed, and Thomas Dodd was declared a deserter again. After a time we heard rumours; but we said nothing, and we were not altogether surprised a little time ago to see in the casualty lists.—Regt. Killed in action, 21472 Dodd, Thomas, Pte.

We had taken a large batch of German prisoners and as they filed along they were objects of much interest to those of us who happened to be about. They looked hungry and absolutely wornout. A British officer walked across to a Boche captain who was standing by and good naturedly offered him a cigar. The Boche merely spat in his face.

Close by we saw a soldier hand his mess tin of hot tea to a German prisoner who drank it with avidity. "Giving 'im your tea!" said another, "didn't you see what that swine did?", and he pointed to the German officer. "Yes," said the first soldier, "but I ain't a Boche you see."

That illustrates the chivalry of Britain—and of Germany.

You have probably heard of the British soldier's pleasure in cleanliness; how he shaves daily in the trenches and under fire, washes his clothes, cleans his boots and so forth, even in the most out-of-the-way places. We were walking along a front line trench one day and saw a soldier diligently polishing his bayonet with a piece of (obviously stolen) emery paper. It was almost as bright as a mirror. His explanation was typical.

"Going over the top to-night, sir, so I hear, and I'm damned if I want to be found dead with a dirty bayonet."

He was ready to die, but even his death had to be well ordered.

They are ordinary stories of everyday occurrences; you can go to any part of the line on any and every day and see or hear them yourself. They are the British soldier at war, which is just the same thing as the British soldier at play. For in both he behaves like an honourable man. Some people would say that he is too gentlemanly for war; that war is war and must be brutal. But that is not the British soldier's way. He knows how to die. He has hundreds of years of tradition and history behind him. But by the same token he knows how to live—and fight and win like an honourable man.

Scolding the Children

Nervous mothers, worried from morning to night by the care of children and the duties of the household; nervous children, perhaps worn out by overstudy, unable to sit still or stand still, or keep their minds concentrated on anything, both need Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to build up the blood and strengthen the nerves.

Try a short treatment with these strengthening, tonic pills, and watch the color return to the pale cheeks and lips; see how the worn, tired nerves recover their poise, note how much less irritating the children become, and how much less scolding they need. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a blessing to nervous people everywhere, men as well as women, boys as well as girls, because they build up the blood and strengthen the nerves. They lighten the cares of life because they give you new strength to meet them.

In the case of nervous children the trouble should be corrected at once, as it is but a short step to St. Vitus dance. Give them Dr. Williams Pink Pills to build up the blood and whether boy or girl they will become pink-cheeked and rugged.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be kept in every home as a precaution against the many troubles due to watery blood and weak nerves. You can get the pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE GREAT SACRIFICE

Sublime Letter Written by a Dying Soldier

Written as he lay dying on the battlefield in France, a letter from Private Thomas Heaton, of the Liverpool Regiment, discloses a wonderful fortitude and consideration to his parents, sisters and brothers.

Prior to joining up in 1914, Heaton was employed in the advertising department of Messrs. Hulton and Co., Withy Grove, Manchester. Last week his dead body was found in France by Private Moores, of the Newfoundland Regiment, and in his pockets was found the following "letter home":—

My Dear Mother, Father, Sisters and Brothers,—The Good God has willed it so, that my existence in this life, like many another, should be ended suddenly, unexpectedly, in the time when all is young, and life offers unlimited means of enjoyment, and I want this last message to reach you, to show you that it does not find me unready to make the Great Sacrifice.

My last thoughts are for you all, well knowing that the decree will greatly upset you, but remember, and I hope you will draw some consolation from it, that I am not the only one, nor you the only parents who have been called upon to make the Great Sacrifice.

This, then, is what I want you to do; to bear the loss as bravely, quietly and resignedly as you possibly can. I myself will have the far easier task, and you the more difficult, but it is the will of Him above, and He knows best. You will remember the good old hymn as you sometimes sing in the chapel:

"God moves in a mysterious way and please, for your own sakes, try not to rail at His decision for us, as we are not the only ones to suffer.

In conclusion, give my love to Annie and Ada, James, Robert, Arnold, and Willie, and anybody who may have been interested in my welfare, an daccept the very best yourself, and perhaps God in His goodness, although He has denied us the pleasure of meeting again on this earth, may He in His abounding mercy grant us the greatest pleasure of all—a reunion in the Great Beyond.

With the greatest affection for you all, I leave you.

Your loving son and brother.

THOMAS

The letter is authenticated by Lieut. Minus, of the Newfoundland Regiment.

MILLBROOK PERSONALS

MILLBROOK, March 21. — Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Oliver of Warkworth were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Fallis, of the Fallis line, and Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Raper, Tupper street, Millbrook, last week. They were on their honeymoon.

PETERBORO' FLORAL COMPANY'S TENDER WAS ACCEPTED

Horticultural Society Will Work Hard For Success of Next Tuesday's Meeting

A meeting of the Executive of the Horticultural Society was held last evening in the office of Roland Denne.

The only tenders for the supplying and planting of the parks with flowers, as well as for the options for the members of the Society were from the Peterborough Floral Co., whose tenders were accepted.

Those present will do their utmost to make the meeting to be held on Tuesday evening in the Council Chamber a success. The Mayor is sending an invitation to Mr. Robson, a lecturer from the Department of Agriculture, on back yard and vacant lot gardening to address the meeting. The Society is working with other organizations in the city to have the importance of this question brought clearly before the residents of the city.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

CAN. GEN. ELECTRIC'S RECORD PROFITS

Very Satisfactory Figures Presented at Anoual Meeting of Shareholders

TORONTO, March 21.—Canadian General Electric shareholders at the annual meeting at noon to-day had the pleasure of listening to a remarkably fine statement, the gross profit shown of $2,225,912 being the largest in the history of the company. Appropriations were heavy, $408,888, being reserved for depreciation of buildings ,machinery and patterns, and in addition a further sum of $631,603 was reserved for the amortization of munition plants and equipment, leaving a net profit of $1,185,420, over $400,000 greater than in the previous year. From this amount $779,844 was paid in dividends, leaving a surplus for the year of $465,577, which, added to last year's balance at the credit of profit and loss account, makes a total at the credit of that account of $1,112,696. From this total the sum of $500,000 has been transferred to reserve, bringing the amount to the credit of reserve account to $3,500,000, and leaving a balance of $612,696 to the credit of profit and loss.

The directors report that during the year the mortgage indebtedness on properties purchased has been reduced from $1,367,751 to; $413,814 thus reducing fixed charges to a nominal amount. Total liquid assets, including cash on hand, accounts receivable, inventory and investments, amount to $8,340,013, and reserve for depreciation now amounts to $2,920,948, and surplus, including reserve account and the balance at the credit and profit and loss, to $4,112,696.

The directors reported that sales of machinery and supplies show a very gratifying increase over the preceding year, and from present indications the situation should continue to improve. At the present time there are approximately five thousand employes on the pay rolls of the company and its various plants and offices, but the scarcity of labour is the company's principal difficulty in the way of further increasing production.

Earnings shown are at the rate of 13 per cent. on the common stock, as compared with 7.60 er cent. in 1915.

Cincinnati authority tells how to dry up a corn so it lifts out

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn stops soreness at once and soon the corn loosens so it can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

A quarter of an ounce of freezone costs very little at any drug store, but is sufficient to take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue or skin.

VAST PROPERTIES OF CZAR AT STAKE

HIS INCOME OVER $42,500,000

While the Forty-Six Grand Dukes and Duchesses Draw many Millions in Allowances.

"The autocracy of Russia," said Jaakoff Prelooker, the author of many revolutionary books and the last editor of the Anglo-Russian, a monthly periodical published in London just before the war, "is like the head of a family grown too large for personal direction and control. Successive autocrats or Czars have attempted to preserve personal control through members of their family and those in sympathy with them until an immense bureaucracy has been evolved, which is entirely apart from the people except as it controls their life and property in the name of the Czar. The autocrat, because of this bureaucracy would grant no rights to the people, which would transfer its power to them any more than the father of a family would surrender any of his domestic rights to his children without abdicating as their head."

In the many ways in which the Czar and his family and their servants of the bureaucracy have managed to maintain the autocracy, the land question and the imperial revenues are said to offer a striking example for immediate adjustment by the revolution.

Since the treaty of Portsmouth the Russian Empire has occupied 8,647,657 square miles or one-seventh of the land surface of the globe. It has a population of about 200,000,000, or fewer than twenty-five to the square mile. Nominally, the autocrat 'owns' both land and people, but he and his family out of the immense total of 948,063,763 acres, actually own and receive the revenue from 680,938,927 acres, about 70 per cent. of the whole land area of Russia; one tenth that of the world. The banalce, or 267,124,836 acres, is distributed as follows, according to the 1910 report of the Department of Agriculture, the latest to hand:

	Acres
Nobility	181,606,519
Merchants	36,321,303
Peasants	35,141,886
Landed proprietors	8,381,830
Other classes	5,673,289
Total	267,124,836

The nobility number about 1,400,000, the agricultural classes (peasants and landed proprietors) 110,000,000. Thus the tiller of the soil and taxpayer possess on the average about one-third of an acre; the Russian noblemen, who does not pay taxes, possesses on an average some 128.

To put the case in another form: From every 384 loaves of bread produced by the Russian agriculturist the noble land owner alone takes away some 383 loaves for himself, leaving one loaf for the producer, from which the latter has yet to devote a part to satisfy the State or the autocratic tax collector.

In many instances, aside from the tax, there is an autocratic perquisite in kind; as for example, in the trapping of sables. About every one in ten is a jet black sable. These from time immemorial have been the property of the Romanoff family, and may be worn in Russia by no one else, under a severe penalty. Other penalties are attached to attempts to export the black pelts.

Concerning the autocratic power of the Czar and how it may be used independently of any legislative functions of the Council of the Empire, or Duma, M. Prelooker has cited the following instances:

"An action was brought against the Princess Imeretinsky by her late husband's heirs. The Princess privately petitioned his Majesty to intervene on her behalf and he ordered the plaintiff to be nonsuited, against the decision of the law. Similarly, in a case when the Tula Bank was charged with the sale of the estates of a bankrupt to satisfy the claims of creditors, the Czar interfered, issued a personal order stopping the sale, and suspending the operation of the law.

"Again in another case, some nobleman sold his estate to a syndicate of merchants; the transaction was properly carried out, and legally ratified. But Czar Nicholas II., by his autocratic power, cancelled the deed of sale, and ordered the property returned to the original owner, whose only desire had been to obtain the use of the purchase price for a few months."

Nobody knows exactly the amount of the Czar's enormous income. The expenditure of some of it is traceable to certain public works whose budgets are matters of public record and a large part is known to be absorbed by his family and their dependents who number about 3,000, and are entirely apart from the noble class, which has no Romanoff affiliations. According to M. Prelooker the Czar "takes" an annual salary of $12,500,000.

"I use the expression 'takes' deliberately, for there is no one, no law or institution in Rnasia that could veto the assignment by the Czar to himself of any sum he is pleased to name. Besides the enormous revenue, he derives yet another annual income from his private estates and his mines, the latter being worked by common and political convicts."

According to the "Almanach Hachette," the Czar enjoys an annual income of $42,500,000, or $85 every minute.

There is still another source of income, which with the consent of the Czar, is more or less devoted to the support of his immediate family. This is from the Romanoff property of 680,938,927 acres, 32,000,000 acres of which are at present productive. The annual revenue is $10,000,000. This sum goes for the support of the Grand Dukes and Duchesses, who number 46, many of whom draw yet other incomes from private sources or from various posts occupied in the army and navy, or in the general administration of the bureaucracy — posts which of course outside of the actual working departments which extend from the ministries down to the most insignificant official, are mostly sinecures.

The Russian autocracy has been, therefore, not only a political form of government, but a tremendously paying business for the autocrat himself and all his relations, near and remote.

The disposition of the properties of the Romanoffs will naturally be one of the first problems for a new government to solve, for the members of that family, while abdicating all political rule, may still as individuals claim that vast wealth as their own.

Conditions In Bucharest Deplorable Says Minister Returned From Roumania

NEW YORK, March 21.—Glad to escape the surveillance of innumerable Prussian spies who dogged his footsteps and hampered the business of his legation. Chas. J. Vopicka of Illinois, American Minister to the Balkan States, arrived here on board the Ranenfjord, of the Norwegian-American line. Mr. Vopicka stated that conditions in Bucharest when he left were deplorable, and gave a graphic account of the miseries the war had brought upon Roumania.

"The spies were pests," said Mr. Vopicka. "Many of them were women, and they came to me on all possible pretexts. I did not take a step that was not watched, and they were always trying to come into the legation.

"Bucharest was like a cinema," he continued. "At first we had the Roumanians, Serbs, Russians, British and French. I had dinner one evening at the hotel with some British airmen. They were fine young fellows. Then when they left came the Germans, the Austrians and the Bulgarians. And with each change I found myself representing different nations. At one time I had charge of the diplomatic affairs of eight nations.

"The Germans wanted me to get out, as they desired no foreign diplomatists there. They sent me up through Germany and gave me a special train all the way.

Mr. Vopicka said that Roumania entered the war for patriotic and humanitarian reasons.

"I want to deny the reports that have been current," he said, "that Roumania entered the war for the spoils. She did not. She went in for two reasons: First, to free her 4,000,000 brethren in Transylvania, and, secondly, because she believed that her entrance into the war would shorten it by six months. Roumania thought that she was prepared for the war and that it would now be over."

Food Commandeered.

When the Germans entered Bucharest they commandeered all foodstuffs for their own men, thus causing terrible privations, he said.

"For seventeen days we had no meat in the neighbourhood," he stated. "We had to get permission from the German commandant to get a baker to bake bread for us. At last I managed to get permission to have a baker come every day and turn 1,000 kilos of grain into bread.

"Wives of Roumanian soldiers kept crowding to the legation for help, telling us that they had had no food for days. It was horrible. I could not help them and we had to turn them away. At last I had to keep the main entrance to the legation closed. I got up a petition, which hundreds of them signed, and managed to get for them a meagre allowance.

"While Roumania was neutral I was helping to relieve the food crisis in Serbia. Just before Roumania entered into the conflict I got away a shipment of 200 carloads of foodstuffs—the last shipment that went into Serbia.

"When hostilities began the inhabitants of Bucharest were not unfriendly to the Germans, but when the air raids took place the sentiment changed at once and the most bitter enmity took its place. Later, the feeling was increased if that could be possible, by the want. In the height of the cold weather coal and wood were unobtainable, even at fabulous rates."

MANY ARTILLERY OFFICERS ARE REVERTING TO RANKS

OTTAWA, March 22—A large draft of artillery men and officers are leaving for the front in a very short time. These men have been eagerly awaiting sailing orders for the past month, as nearly all of them have chums already in France, serving the Canadian guns.

A feature of this draft is the large number of officers who have given up their commissions and reverted to the ranks, that they might get into action sooner. Four qualified artillery officers enlisted as gunners during the last three days at the Base Recruiting Office on Sparks street.

The artillery has been the great magnet for the majority of the young men of Ottawa. The stories that have come back from their friends at the front, describing the exciting times they were enjoying, has been the stimulant which caused many to join this branch of the service. Another thing that has attracted many is the fact that the field artillery is a mounted unit, and the course of training is interesting, instructive and certain to improve every man.

All the Kingston batteries are well filled with Ottawa boys, and another attractive branch of the artillery, the divisional ammunition column, is also claiming its share. Several Queen's University students joined this unit last week, and Lieut. Frank Shaughnessy expects to land a lot of McGill men in a few days, as several have written him expressing their willingness to go with him.

The men in the divisional ammunition column take the same drill with the guns and horses as the men in the batteries. They must qualify as gunners and drivers.

They will train at Petawawa, and will go over during the summer. "Shag" has several good athletes going with him, and expects to have a champion ball team.

MOTOR SHOW IS ENDORSED

Red Cross Appoint a Committee to Work With Other Organizations

The advisory board of the Red Cross Society met yesterday afternoon in the Public Library to discuss the question of co-operating with the Motor League and automobile dealers in the putting on of a motor show in the armouries, the proceeds to go to the funds of the Red Cross. It was agreed that the proposition was a good one and a committee was appointed to work with committees from the Motor League and dealers to arrange the details.

Incidentally Mrs. Matthews reported to the meeting that advise had been received of the receipt in England of one of two large shipments of Red Cross supplies from the local branch. The other shipment, it is expected, would also have arrived by this time.

A PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS

MILLBROOK, March 21. — A very enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Brown, Carmel, on Friday last when about one hundred and fifty of their neighbors and other friends took possession of their home and presented them with a handsome parlour suite, and a $5 gold piece to each of their three sons; while Miss Olive Hanna was presented with a handsome pearl necklace. The beautiful $50 parlor suite was purchased from Mr. W. J. Gillott and the necklace from Mr. Steele.

The address printed on satin, and framed, was read by Mr. Wm. Earle, and the committee presented the gifts. The address follows:

Dear Friends:

We have learned with regret that you are soon to remove from our neighborhood to another home so far from here that we can scarcely hope to see you very often.

Before you sever your connection with our community we would like to express in some way our deep appreciation of the many virtues and qualities of character which you possess, the many acts of kindness which you have rendered as neighbors in the community, and the high character of Christian citizenship which you have always maintained, and continually set before us an example to be prised and followed.

The church loses in our removal, earnest worshippers and willing workers; the Sunday school efficient and faithful teachers and leaders, and much loved fellow scholars; L.O.L. 421 a loyal Brother, and as Chaplain of the Lodge you have shown a good example to the Brethren. It is well known that as pathmaster you, Mr. Brown, have done excellent work, the splendid condition of the roads under your supervision bearing testimony to this, and we will surely miss you.

We are convinced, however, that what we lose others will gain and that your work will continue elsewhere and will be as fully appreciated and as abundantly blessed as here.

We will follow you with our best wishes for your success and happiness in your new sphere of service and trust that it will unfold to you a larger and fuller experience of the best things of life than was possible in the one you are leaving.

As a slight token of our esteem and affection we ask you to accept these gifts, not for their intrinsic value but as evidences of our good will that will always bring back memories of other days and old friends, which will be pleasant to recall.

We shall part in the hope that when all our life's labors are over we shall meet to part no more.

Signed on behalf of the Committee.
George S. Thorne,
John Gray,
James Eastcott.
Norman M. Henry.

March 16, 1917.

Mr. Brown on behalf of himself and family replied in a few well chosen words, thanking the donors for their beautiful gifts. He welcomed all to their new home.

A programme was then rendered by the following: Mrs. Wm. Gra- Perrytown, elocutionist; Miss Ella Elson, soloist; trio by Mr. and Miss Dawson and Miss Emmerson; selections by the Millbrook S. S. orches; tra; addresses by Reeve Henderson, Rev. Higgs, Ex-Reeve Thorne, and Messrs. Gray and Earl. Mr. N. M. Henry was master of ceremonies, and he deserves great credit for his untiring efforts in preparing the programme.

After the refreshments were served a delightful time was spent in games and music, etc., after which the self-invited guests departed for their own homes, well pleased with the liberal hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Brown, and family.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Stanton returned to Millbrook on Thursday last after having had an experience that they will never forget. They witnessed the terrible destruction caused by the cyclone at Newcastle, Ind., on the 11th of March, in fact the home of Mrs. Stanton's brother at which they were staying had the roof taken off. Mr. Stanton saw the storm coming and had just time to close the windows and get the inmates down into the cellar when the storm broke. In about half an hour about $1,000,000 worth of property was destroyed; over 25 people were killed and about 1000 more injured; some 2000 people were made homeless. It is a miracle that none in the house where Mr. and Mrs. Stanton were, were injured, except that Mrs. Stanton's hand was slightly hurt.

Mr. Stanton says that trees a foot or more through were snapped in two with the terrific force of the storm. A horse was blown up into a tree and was safely brought down with rope and tackle, none the worse for its experience, although the driver and the buggy has not since been seen.

Rush Arming Of All British Ships

Great Activity at the London Docks —Equipment is Undergoing Constant Improvement.

LONDON, March 21 — In the wilderness of piers and basins which constitutes the "London Docks" there have appeared in the last few months a number of low, unobtrusive buildings, dressed in fresh paint of the prevailing war gray, bearing over their doorways a modest sign, "Defensive Armaments Office; No Admittance."

These buildings are just now centres of a great activity. Here are the men who are providing incoming ships with arms against the German submarine. It is scarcely permitted to go into details as to the character of the work of these men; sufficient to say that not a British ship of any size enters the Port of London that escapes their attention.

Many of these ships, returning from distant voyages, are still unarmed, and must be provided with an entire equipment of the latest devices for opposing the submarine menace. Other ships, already equipped with armament of a type which was approved six months or a year ago, are already out of date as defensive units, for things move rapidly in war time, and these ships must have their equipment brought up to the minute.

The arming of a ship for defense is no small task. It is not merely a matter of slinging a gun into place at the stern and bolting it on the deck. Decks are no strong enough to carry guns of the type which is nowadays being mounted on British merchantmen. Such a gun, if fired from the unsupported foundation of a ship's deck, would probably be carried right through the deck, bolts and all, by the force of its recoil, and would do almost as much harm as a hostile torpedo. Therefore a complex steel framework, riveted far down into tons of stout structural steel, must be fitted into place.

Deck space must be cleared, to give the gun a clear sweep in all directions. Everything possible must be done to assist efficiency and rapidity of action, for here is a matter where minutes, and even seconds, count heavily. Then there must be provided quarters for the gun crew handy to the gun, and convenient space for the storage of ammunition.

While the Defensive Armaments Office is at work on its task, the owners of the ship take advantage of the breathing space to make repairs and alterations which have been postponed by the pressure of business in war time. Frequently the owners would like to have a ship put in dry dock and properly cleaned and overhauled while the armament men are at work, but this is rarely possible, for dry dock space is at a permium these days, and can only be given up to the casual maritime visitor in cases of the most urgent necessity.

GOLDEN WEDDING OF MR. AND MRS. J. DONALDSON IS FITTINGLY CELEBRATED

A most enjoyable time was spent on Wednesday, the 21st of March, at the residence of Mrs. S. J. Dickson, Smith, the occasion being the golden anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. John Donaldson, Omemee. The home was beautifully decorated with the colours of the Union Jack.

An address and presentation were read, the former by Miss Lillian, and a purse of gold was presented by Mr. Joseph Donaldson, and ably responded to by the groom of fifty years.

Little Muriel Farley, of Toronto, three years old, a granddaughter, presented a sheaf of daffodils which were much appreciated.

Afterwards a dainty repast was partaken of by about forty guests, gold favours being a feature of interest.

The entire family of eight, which never had a bereavement, were all present: Mr. Joseph Donaldson, Mrs. J. H. Savigny, Peterborough; Mrs. W. H. Steinkraus, Mrs. S. J. Dickson, Smith; Mrs. W. [illegible] Smith, South Monaghan, Mrs. [illegible] Farley, Toronto, Miss Christene, Toronto, Miss Lillian, Toronto.

A social evening was engaged in, and brought to a close with the best wishes for the old and respected parents.

Cost of Building Greatly Increased

A gentleman on Brick street, who had received a price to build a house about two years ago was considering the question again a short while ago. He went to the same contractor to get a tender on the same style of house.

The contractor told him he could not give him a definite figure, but the increase would be from $20.00 to $25.00.

This gives an idea of how costs have gone up in the building line and just how it is apt to restrict building.

Photograph of Quaker Oats Fire

The London Daily Mirror of February 28th has an excellent photograph of the fire at the Quaker Oats plant. It is printed under the heading "Canada's Largest Factory Destroyed," and printed in a paper with a circulation of 2,000,00, is a striking advertisement for Peterborough.

Pathetic Interview

Andrew Hogue, Mining Engineer, Tries to Get Brother's Sentence Commuted.

WINDSOR, March 22.—Separated for thirteen years, John Hogue, alias James Steward, awaiting the death pepnalty in Sandwich Jail for the murder of W. Marshall Jackson, Canadian Immigration Officer, and Andrew Hogue, thes layer's brother, met in the condemned cell yesterday.

Andrew Hogue, who is a wealthy mining engineer, came here from Chaleston, West Virginia, with credentials signed by Governor John S. Cornwall and Secretary of State Houston G. Young, with the avowed intention of spending his last cent, if necessary, to have his brother's sentence commuted.

Accompanied by Barrister F. C. Kerby, of Windsor, who defended Hogue, Andrew Hogue secured permission from the Attorney-General of Ontario to visit his brother.

$18,700 Insurance For Damage To The Court House

The insurance on the Court House received by the County and City is announced at $18,700. This sum is practically the finding of Messrs. Finnie and Graham, who were engaged as appraisers to determine the loss to the building. It is expected that this settlement which is understood to be entirely satisfactory to the County and City officials, opens the way to an early commencement of the restoration of the building.

ADDRESS ON VEGETABLE GARDENING THES. NIGHT

Mayor Duffus has issued a general invitation to the public to attend a meeting in the Council Chamber on Tuesday night next, at which Mr. Fred Robson, 226 Glen Road, Toronto, will give an address on "Vegetable Gardening." Mr. Robson is being sent here by the Ontario Department of Agriculture in connection with the greater production movement. Citizens are asked to keep this date open.

MAYOR DUFFUS IS IN TORONTO

His Worship Mayor Duffus, accompanied by Mr. S. R. Armstrong, City Clerk, are in Toronto to-day in connection with an effort to secure an improved train service for Peterborough. An attempt will also be made to obtain from the Hydro Power Commission of Ontario, taxes on the local properties of the Hydro Commission. This will mean an extra seven or eight thousand dollars for the city.

Ruled Motion Out of Order

LONDON, March 22. —In the Commons to-day Ginnell, an independent Nationalist member, declared Lord Milner, one of Lloyd George's War Council, had recently been sent to Russia to foment the Russian revolution. He moved a vote of appreciation of this move. Speaker Lowther ruled Ginnell and his motion out of order.

Sub. Peril Will Vanish When All Ships Armed

NEW YORK—Charles H. Grasty, a correspondent in England of the New York Times, went to Spain and joined the party of the American Ambassador from Berlin, returning to America with it on board the Infanta Isobel. Regarding the submarine campaign he writes:

"I have tried to get information as to the number of German submarines, but Germany successfully conceals the figures. The best composite guess I have been able to get is 250 to 300 big ones. All on the ship expressed surprise when I gave them the current English valuation of the submarine effort, namely, that while it was regarded as serious, there was not the slightest immediate prospect of starving England. There is more food in England to-day than ever before, perhaps six months', and certainly three months', clear surplus. Germans will have to increase vastly the present rate of destruction to empty the British cupboard in a year.

"Meanwhile British seamanship is on its mettle to meet the submarine menace. Arming merchant ships alone will give protection. Submarines cannot overcome them when the work is completed.

"The Berlin contingent admit that if the submarine stroke fails the disappointment and hunger in Germany will create a situation favourable to the acceptance of peace without victory.

"The Germans don't advertise their own weaknesses, but when elephants are commandeered from Hagenbeck's menageries to pull heavy loads through the streets of Berlin it suggests a breakdown in means of transport, maybe more serious in conducting the war than the loss of man power."

WITH THE CURLERS

Lead Cup Moves.

With a safe lead on the last end in a Patriotic Cup game at the curling rink last night, Dave Esson lost out by 9-7, when G. H. Logie scored four on the last frame. And the little lead cup wanders on. There is a suspicion more or less founded that when a vice-skip wins this cup, his own "vice" might as well be counted with the other side. Of course, there is nothing definite to charge the regular skips with in this connection, but practically every game has gone that way. This is no reflection upon Tom Brightman, who is above anything of that nature. Still that four end looked queer.

Annual Meeting Monday Night.

The fine weather has come on so quickly that the curlers have scarcely become accustomed to the fact that winter is merely lingering dissolving as it were under the ascending sun. Another season has gone, and gone blithely with the cheery farewell that is characteristic of parting. But it is those who remain behind that feel the loss, recalling old scenes, old associations. The annual meeting on Monday night represents the formal passing of the season. A large attendance of members is requested.

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

Special to The Examiner:

New York, March 22.—Marine shares were strong while the "war brides," which started on a bull drive two days ago, met a check on the Stock Exchange to-day.

The Government's low price copper contract and indications from Washington that war profits are to be trimmed if there is a war declaration, threw a scare into speculators who have been building on hopes of a roaring war market.

Market Qnestion This Evening

The Property Committe of the City Council will meet this evening to consider the matter of dealing with the market question. Tenders have been submitted for the market privileges which include the right to collect tolls, but whether or not the Property Committee will adopt the usual course and appoint a caretaker dependa entirely on the attitude of the Council towards the free market scheme. The majority of the merchants are in favour of a free market as they claim it will create a much larger volume of business.

WHEN THE WAR IS OVER.

When the mighty war is over,
And the Hun has done his worst;
When the strongest trench is taken,
And the last great shell has burst.

God have pity on the slacker,
God have mercy on the men
Who stayed that side the water,
When the boys return again.

They will slink along the by-streets,
Finding shelter in the night;
From the daily scorn of others,
Who were not too proud to fight.
For the man who'll rule the country,
Will be he who faced the foe;
And the man who stayed behind,
Will stay behind for ever more.

He may make a pile of money,
But that will not bring him fame;
When he finds out all too late,
That he has trampled on his name.
Now young men the war's not over,
For the Hun is fighting still;
You have still a chance before you,
You can seize it if you will.

So take my advice and do it,
Mark the words you'll bless the day
That you donned the good old uniform,
And did your bit in the world's great fray.
—One of the 93rd Boys in France.

Famous Gaming Casino Is Destroyed By Fire

AMSTERDAM, March 22.—The theatre and magnificent gaming casino of the Kursaal at Spa in Belgium have been destroyed by fire. The buildings have been utilized since the war as a hospital for German officers. The fire was caused by a short circuit in some temporary wiring, and the fight against the flames was made impossible by the fact that practically all the fire hydrants were frozen.

Spa, which is situated seventeen miles from Liege, was the most popular of the high-class watering places in Belgium before the war. It had about 20,000 visitors a year, most of them drawn by the waters of the celebrated Pouhon spring. The general term spa, as applied to watering places, was derived from the name of this town.

Diamonds Made Peacock Alley Gasp

Out in Muncie, Ind., where preparedness is regarded as a rash confined to the hectic East and wheat is the axis upon which the world revolves, lives Mrs. Charles H. Anthony, says the New York Tribune.

If it were not for Mrs. Anthony Muncie might be nothing more than an agate line in an atlas, as far as New York City is concerned. But there is Mrs. Anthony—a pretty blond woman, with a passion for diamonds and a habit of descending upon the metropolis every once in so often to let them scrape in the rarefied air of Peacock Alley.

Three years ago New York indulged in a slight spasm of surprise when she appeared wearing diamond buckles on her neat little slippers. The sparkles emanating from a 2-inch ring exhibited in Peacock Alley the other day aroused the city to the fact that Mrs. Anthony has a penchant for diamonds.

An apartment at the Waldorf-Astoria is occupied by the matron from Muncie.

Mrs. Anthony wore a 3-piece suit a string of pearls and some diamonds. The skirt was white silk of some shimmery stuff. She also wore a white straw hat and some diamonds; a white silk shirtwaist, cut low, and some diamonds; a white velvet coat and some diamonds.

DIAMOND HER BIRTHSTONE

"The diamond is my birthstone," she explained. "I have a large collection of them. Each stone is picked out and bought separately for me by an Indianapolis jeweler. They are all set in platinum."

Perhaps Mrs. Anthony was not wearing the entire collection. It was afternoon and besides they were not catalogued. It is quite possible, therefore, that a trinket or so may have been overlooked.

Yet, as accurately as one could tell without the aid of smoked glasses, she wore (1) two earrings, each two inches long and each with a 4 1-2-carat diamond and two smaller brilliants; (2) a simple pearl and platinum chain; (3) a drop chain of diamonds, to which was attached (4) an odd brooch containing five large diamonds; (5) a diamond and platinum chain, caught with a platinum and diamond fleur de lis design, in whose centre was (6) a large heart shaped diamond and to this chain was attached (7) a lorgnette with a large diamond in its handle. Also, the (8) famous 2-inch ring which has three large stones and a score of smaller ones, and three additional (9, 10, 11) marquise rings.

FAVOURS NARROW SKIRT.

"Diamonds are a hobby with me," admitted Mrs. Anthony.

The Muncie arbiter does not care for the wide skirt, for flounces or furbelows.

"I am in favor of the narrow, clinging style and I like short skirts," she said, glancing at her small feet, incased in high white boots.

The war scare has caused Mrs. Anthony to engage passage for Muncie. You see, she took the last train out of Paris when the European war broke out, and she knows consequently that she and the diamonds would be much more comfortable in the heart of Delaware County, Indiana.

A well known business man who was lately married, says Billy Blair in the Kansas City Star, took out some life insurance last Thursday. Coming up-town Monday morning, he was accosted by one of his friends with the salutation: "What's the matter, old man you look worried?" "Well, to be honest with you, I am. You know, I took out some life insurance last Thursday." "Yes," replied the sympathetic friend, "but what has that to do with the woe-begone expression on your face?" "Well, the very next day after I had it written my wife bought a new cook-stove. Possibly it's all right, but it certainly looks suspicious."

WAS SPRAYED WITH AMMONIA

SARNIA, March 21.—A boy named Dionne, living on Maxwell Street, may lose the sight of an eye as a result of being sprayed with spirits of ammonia by two other boys, Charles Markes of London Road, and George Kirby of George street. The two latter boys had a bottle of ammonia and a syringe for spraying apple orchards, operated by a rubber bulb, with which the ammonia was shot into young Dionne's face. How serious the injuries are cannot yet be ascertained.

Portrait of Kaiser Torn From Wall of Washington School

Students Take Action Impulsively, Cheating Cadets of Honour.

WASHINGTON, March 21. — Patriotic students in the Central High School here tore down from the walls of a classroom a picture of Emperor William of Germany, and hung in its place a photograph of President Wilson, decorated with two American flags. The emperor's likeness disappeared before officers of the school cadet corps had an opportunity to present to Miss Marie Siebert, teacher of German, a resolution protesting against the presence of "a murderer's picture," and demanding its removal.

Harry Roper, 15?year-old son of Daniel C. Roper, recently appointed to the tariff commission, led the agitation begun several days ago against the picture by turning its face to the wall several times. Miss Siebert, who is an American citizen, insisted that it should remain, saying that she intended to use it to illustrate a lecture. Then the cadet officers interested themselves, and they were ready to act, when other students entered the room during a recess and made the substitution.

School authorities are investigating the incident.

Nova Scotia Women To Get Right To Vote

Assembly Unanimously Passes Bill on Second Reading—Admit to Bar, Too.

HALIFAX, March 22.—The bill to amend the Nova Scotia franchise act so as to give women the right to vote on precisely the same basis as men, passed its second reading in the House of Assembly yesterday unanimously.

The second reading was moved by Mr. Henry Graham of Pictou, who ably championed the women's cause and argued for the adoption of the measure as a great democratic reform and a just recognition of the contribution which women are making to the country in the conduct of affairs and in war enterprises.

A bill providing for the admission of women as barristers and solicitors was also unanimously adopted on the second reading. Opposition to both measures may develop on the third reading, or in the Legislative Council, but their supporters, who number the leaders of thought throughout the Province, are hopeful that Nova Scotia will soon be lined up with her sister Provinces in consummating these reforms.

REFUGEES IN SYRIA CANNOT LEAVE COUNTRY

WASHINGTON, March 21.— Turkey again notified the State Department today that neither Germany nor Austria-Hungary had indicated a willingness to give assurances for the safe passage of the American cruiser Des Moines and the American naval collier Caesar from Alexandria, Egypt, to Beirut to deliver relief supplies to the destitute Syrians, and to bring out 1,000 or more American refugees.

The plight of the Americans stranded at Beirut is causing increasing concern here, for officials feel they virtually have exhausted every diplomatic resource to reach them. Ambassador Elkus is expected to renew his efforts for a safe conduct, but in the face of the growing seriousness of the situation between the United States and Germany there is little hope that any gaurantees will be given making it safe for the American vessels to proceed through the mined and patrolled waters to their destination.

Turkey some time ago consented to give such a guarantee for herself, but Germany and Austria apparently have been procrastinating while their differences with the United States were solving themselves.

What the Americans at Beirut may be suffering meantime is unknown here though it is hoped the British advance soon may extend far enough to free some of them.

BOY STOLE $5 IN A DARING SCHEME

An East City boy called at a certain residence across the river on Tuesday stating that he called for a parcel from a George street drug store that had been delivered to that house by mistake. The lady replied that she had not received any parcel, but the boy's seeming certainty prompted her to go through the house to the back door. While she was searching on the verandah, the boy quietly followed her into the living room, and opening a drawer found a purse, from which he took five dollars. He pleaded guilty this morning in police court after the police had quickly apprehended him, and was remanded for a week.

Finds Home Ablaze And 31 Stark-Naked Persons Gazing On

Doukhobor Band Claims God Ordered Them to Burn "Rich Residences".

SASKATOON, March 23.—Charged with setting fire to the $15,000 home of Peter Veregin, near the village of Dundnoe, during a "naked pilgrimage," last July, five Doukhobors arrested by the provincial police, have been committed for trial at Kamsack. Paul Strypnick, W. Resanoff S. Kalesnekoff, A. Mahortoff and P. Vorkin insisted that God had told them to destroy the house.

Veregin told the court that when he heard of the crime he drove out to his farm and found eleven men, ten women, two girls and eight children, all naked, standing around the conflagration. One man had told him that God had ordered them to fire the building, and that they were going to burn down all the "rich residences."

The men were arrested last July while on a nude pilgrimage.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

A matter-of-fact mind like Mrs. Moody's is a comfort to the person who has it, and a never-ending delight to the person's friends, observes Harper's. "I suppose you went to bed with the chickens while you were staying on the farm this summer," said one of the neighbours. "No, indeed!" replied Mrs. Moody, with much dignity. "They were very neat, quiet people, and the chickens slept somewhere at the back of the house."

Big Battle In Progress On The West

Men Fit To Fight Being Weeded Out From Offices Now

LONDON, March 23.— The Canadian Associated Press learns that the employment of civilians in the Canadian Military Offices in London is being officially discouraged. Before any such are so employed for the future, full particulars must be sent to headquarters giving reasons for such employment and stating the special qualifications and nature of the work the employee intended to undertake.

This is a further development in the coming out and general classification process which has been proceeding among the Canadians for some time. Men fit for full service in France are being sought out of offices in England and replaced wherever practicable by others of inferior physical standards. The new arangements will also result in many men who are sick or partly disabled, replacing women stenographers who hitherto have been pretty extensively employed in the administrative offices. A Canadian military school of stenography has been established for the benefit of sick and others physically unfit for the trenches.

Court Clique In Russia Simply Nest of German Spies Late Events Show

Rasputin, the Drunken Monk, is Reported to Have Given Out Military Secrets to Hun Agents--Offer of Half Million Rifles By Britain Was Refused By Members of Old Ministry.

RUSSIAN PAPER FEARS THAT DEPOSED EMPEROR MAY TRY TO RE-ESTABLISH THE ROMANOFFS

PETROGRAD, March 23.—Correspondence between the Czarina and and Former Minister Propopotoff has been discovered, the Bourse Gazette asserted to-day, proving that Propopotoff and others in the former Royalist Government attempted to conclude a separate peace with Germany.

PETROGRAD, March 21, via London, March 22.—The Russkia Volia, in a long unsigned article, exposes what it terms the treason of the court clique and alleges that Tsarskoe-Selo was a "nest of German spies." The paper says that a special committee has been appointed to investigate the "crimes of former Ministers during the last Bacchanalian nightmare, years of the dynasty, on which Rasputin put the final touch." The article says in part:

"The first crime of treason and espionage had its nest in the palace The court was partly and chiefly German and the pitiful role of Sturmer in his efforts to drag Russia toward a separate peace was known everywhere. The press of our allies accused Russia of giving Germany Russian military secrets.

RASPUTIN WAS SURROUNDED BY GERMAN SPIES.

"Alexei Khvostoff, who was dismissed as Minister of the Interior because he aimed to divorce Nicholas and Alexandra and kill Rasputin, declared to friends that he has documents showing the connection between the court and Berlin and Rasputin was surrounded by German spies, who were sending out military secrets easily learned from the drunken monk. Khvostoff, himself one of the band of dark forces, did nothing to hinder the treason at Tsarskoe-Selo.

REFUSED OFFER OF HALF MILLION RIFLES.

"We know from the letter of General Guchkoff, Minister of War, to General Alexieff, that Sturmer and Belaieff refused England's offer to give half a million rifles to the Russian army. Similar facts have been collected by the defense committee of the Imperial Duma. We know the consequence of General Soukhomlinoff's doings when he was only governor of Kiev and when he surrounded himself with spies. His nearest friend was the commander of the Austrian spy organization. Our military secret service knew but could do nothing. The result of his treason was a Russian defeat, costing millions of lives. What are we to do now? Allow Nicholas to live in beautiful Livadia, among the flowers he was so fond of and among the conditions of freedom he always denied to others? Allow him to do this so that he may organize other dark forces for the re-establishment of the Romanoffs?"

PATENAUDE LIKELY TO ACT AS POSTMASTER-GENERAL

DEPARTMENT HAPPILY SO SITUATED IT CAN RUN ITSELF.

OTTAWA, March 23.—Hon. E. L. Patenaude, secretary of state, will be the actin gpostmaster-general during the sbsence on active service of Hon. P. E. Blondin. This was intimated by Sir George Foster at the conclusion of the cabinet meeting this afternoon.

It is not anticipated here that Mr. Blondin's resignation will be accepted. One of the other ministers will probably be acting postmaster-general until the conclusion of the war or until Mr. Blondin returns. The post-office department is particularly fortunate in having as deputy minister Dr. Coulter, ex-M.P., one of the most capable officers in the public service, so that the administration of the department is rendered the easier.

ECZEMA ON FACE

WAS SO BAD HAD TO STAY IN HOUSE

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, eruptions, ulcers, boils, pimples, etc., are all caused by bad blood, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and well-known remedy, will cleanse the blood of all its impurities, and by this means cure all skin diseases and other blood troubles.

Mrs. Ernest Andrews, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "My face was covered with eczema and was so terribly bad I had to stay in the house. I had ten different doctors but got so tired of their treatment that I went and bought a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it helped me, so I kept on taking it. Now I am cured, and have a lovely skin.

"People who used to see me when I was so bad and see me now will not believe it, but I always tell them that nothing cured me but Burdock Blood Bitters."

CANADIANS FIND FOUR HUNS DEAD AT TABLE

Quartet of Officers Asphyxiated in Their Dugout, as They Sat in a Group

Canadian Headquarters in France, March 23.—(By Stewart Lyon, Canadian Press correspondent).—The civilian population behind the Canadian front is jubilant over the display of "voluntary elasticity" by the enemy.

On that part of the western battle line between Noyon and Arras, the enemy still holds his trenches here and there. The raid on Tuesday morning by the Canadians proved that. It resulted in the capture of a number of prisoners with a minimum of losses.

A dramatic incident is reported from a part of our front on which, early in the war, stubborn battles took place between the French and the Germans. Some Canadian soldiers searching the field quarters noticed a grass-grown mound of curious shape. On penetrating the mount they discovered the entrance to a dugout in which were four German officers seated at a table, where sudden death had overtaken them. Their equipment was still hanging on a wall. The cause of their death was asphyxiation either from gas entering the dugout or from the closing of its entrance by shell fire. If the latter, knowing there was no hope to escape, the officers must have sat down around the table waiting the end. Many other like tragedies may be discovered later.

A SOLDIER

Another of our soldiers brave
Is called from earth away,
His spirit's gone to meet his God,
His body turn to clay.

Long years of service he has seen
On life's great battlefield,
And now at length has come the call
To which we all must yield.

No more the bugle call he'll hear,
His spirit has ascended;
His final battle he has fought,
His weary march is ended.

All honor to the parted dead,
From earth and friends he's riven;
His body here lies cold in death,
His soul, we trust, in heaven.

To those his comrades who remain,
The blessed hope is given,
That when your journey here is o'er
You may meet him in heaven.

A word to those who mourn the loss
And fainting 'neath the rod—
Look up above the things of time;
Your comfort is in God.

Your father is not dead, dear souls,
He's only gone before;
And you may meet him over there
On that celestial shore.

HOW TO USE PRUNING SHEARS

Double cutter shears used by orchard pruning give good satisfaction when used upon limbs smaller than three inches in diameter. When care is taken to cut through the bark all around the branches to be removed, the wounds heal over much better than when the growing layer of bark and young wood is crushed by being squeezed from opposite sides without being cut around first. One caution is necessary in using this implement. When making cuts of forking limbs, it is necessary to avoid bearing down because the main branch to be left is likely to split and a heavy load of fruit the following summer is almost sure to break the limb at this point. Effort should always be made to lift when making such cuts. Indeed, it is a good plan always to cut off the branch one foot or so beyond the point where the crotch is, and then to remove the stub with a second cut.

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessings to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness! others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

PRESS COMMENT ON RUSSIAN REVOLUTION.

FAITHFUL TO DUTY

A machine gun was stationed at an angle of the trench when the German rush near Ypres took place and one man after another was shot. The gun continued action though five bodies lay around it when the sixth man took the place of his fallen comrades, one of whom was his brother. The Germans still pressed on. He waited until they were but a few yards away and then poured a stream of bullets into their advancing ranks, which broke and fell backward leaving rows of dead. He was then wounded himself.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

He Considered Himself Smart

By BARBARA PHIPPS

I was talkin' with Mandy Simmons t'other day. I was tellin' her about my crops, just how much wheat I'd put in, how much corn and produce and sundries I'd put up by comin' to her that I'd put in the bank more'n $900 over and above expenses, livin' and all that. Mandy's a nice gal. I wouldn't 'a' told anybody else what I told her. It seemed like I was talkin' it to myself.

"Land sakes, Mr. Barnickel," said Mandy, "how tight you do stick to yer farm and yer crops and the money yer puttin' in the bank! Ain't y' ever goin' to think about gettin' married and havin' some one to leave all yer fortune to when y' die?"

Somehow I'd never thought o' that. I'd felt lonesome-like even'n now and then, and when I'd had a stroke o' luck I felt kind a-like tellin' some un about it. That's the reason why I told Mandy how much profit I'd made durin' last season. I says to Mandy when she talked about my gettin' some un to leave my earnin's to, says I:

"I dunno, spy gal as would have me, and a man can't marry unless he's got a gal."

"Why, Mr. Barnickel," says Mandy, "I don't reckon you'd have any trouble on that score. I was standin' lookin' at a gal t'other day, and she said somepin to me. I couldn't hear what it was, but somehow I reckoned it was about you. I asked her to write it down, and she did. What do you s'pose it was?"

"I dunno."

"It was 'I wish Job Barnickel would propose to me.'"

I was tuk flat aback. I didn't know any gal that had even looked at me that a-way. I asked Mandy who the gal was, but she wouldn't tell me. She chuckled and said I might ask her three questions, to which she would answer truthfully, provided I didn't ask the gal's name. I began by askin' her where she was when she was talkin' to the gal, and she said she was in the livin' room at home. Then I asked her why she couldn't hear what the gal said, and she answered that there was glass between her and the other gal.

"Oh," I says, "she was standin' out on the porch or in the yard, and the winder was shut down."

Mandy didn't say nothin' to this, but she tarfed fit to kill herself. I'd asked her two questions and had one more to ask. The only thing I could think of for this last question was, "Where was the gal when she writ down what you said she did?" I asked her this, and she said the gal was in the same room with her.

"I don't want her," says I.

"Why not?" asked Mandy, serious like.

"'Cause she must be deaf and dumb."

With that, Mandy like to split her sides larfin'. I didn't like bein' made fun of that a-way, and I looked it. With that, Mandy looked sorry and sidled up to me and cuddled me a little, and she says, says she:

"Mr. Barnickel, it wouldn't be right for me to give a gal away like that. But I'll tell you what I'll do. She often comes to see me Saturday evenin's. If you'd care to drop in some Saturday evenin' if she comes in, you'll see her."

"That's fa'r," says I. "I'll come next Saturday. How will I know when a gal comes in she's the gal that was talkin' to you?"

"Oh, I'll put you on," says Mandy, and with that she went away, with a spark in her eye and a smile on her lips. She looked so pretty that I kinda wished she and I was keepin' house together and there wasn't any other gal had anything to do with it.

Saturday night I put on my store clothes and a boiled shirt and went round to Mandy's. She seemed glad to see me, but she said she didn't reckon the gal I wanted to see would drop in. She sat by me on the sofy and tole me that if I had anything on my mind I felt like gittin' off I was welcome to do it.

Facin' the sofy was an old fashioned desk or library or suthin with a lookin' glass on it. We could see ourselves in the glass. I asked Mandy what part o' the room she was in when the gal said what she did to her. Mandy said she was sittin' on the sofy.

"I thort the gal was outside," says I. "If you was sittin' on the sofy you couldn't see any one outside."

Mandy chuckled.

Mandy didn't say nothin' to this; she looked down at her knees and smoothed her dress with her hands.

"Do y' think the gal'll drop in tonight?" says I.

"I dunno," says Mandy.

"Well," I says, "I don't keer whether she does or not. I'm mighty well satisfied to be with you, Mandy. If you say so I won't wait for t'other gal. Any time you want to marry me and come and take keer o' my house you kin do it."

"Oh, Mr. Barnickel," she says, "you have spoke too late. The other gal's here."

"Where is she?" says I.

"Look in the glass."

I reckon it was downright smart o' me to see what she meant. It don't rile me a bit. Why should it? I'll tell y'. It was 'cause she and the other was one and the same gal. I wonder if she hadn't been talkin' to herself in the glass.

WONDERFUL TALE OF AN ACTRESS

Struggled with Sickness and Discouragement; How Relieved.

Dayville, Killingly, Conn.—"I shall be glad to have every woman know what I know now, after using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Although I am only 24 years old, I have suffered for the past eight years. I hated the doctors, for a doctor told me to give up the stage where I was playing with my husband.

I had bearing down pains, my health failed me, and I could not work on the stage, and wasn't able to tend my baby or even get around myself. I was always downhearted and discontented with the world, and only lived for the sake of my little girl. The doctor said to move to some quiet little town away from the noisy city, and I might be able to live and feel well, so I went to Dayville in November. At that time I was so sick I could not walk around, and my husband kept house and I stayed in bed. One day in January I read your advertisement in a newspaper, and I sent for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and started taking it. Within two weeks time I was a different woman, could get around, and felt so good that it was a pleasure to do my housework. I felt contented and happy, and now am the picture of health, and am tempted to return to the stage. We appreciate my health as the most precious thing on earth."—Mrs. H. L. KLEWETT, Box 85, Killingly, Conn.

Art of Eating.

Eating is not merely an enjoyment. It is a science that must be learned, an art that must be acquired by intelligent patience. The man who at middle age has not discovered what and how much is suitable for him has not finished his education.

The Reason.

Patience—There was a time in her life she could have married nearly anybody she pleased.

Patrice—And yet she has never married?

"Never. You see, she couldn't please anybody."—Yonkers Statesman.

GRAIN VERSUS STOCK

Test on Two Farms Showed Grain Land More Fertile

If the fertility of the soil on the stock farm is to be increased or even maintained, wise management in connection with the rotation of crops, the care and use of the manure, and the tillage operations must accompany the keeping of the stock. Meat and the various dairy products cannot be made from nothing any more than can grain and hay, and, if these are sold from the farm, the fertility taken from the soil in their production must be restored.

A test conducted on two farms, one a grain farm and the other a stock farm, where pure-bred stock was kept, showed that the soil on the grain farm was more fertile than on the stock farm. This was largely due to the rotation followed and judicious management by the grain farmer. The live stock farmer, however, made $799 over the five per cent. interest on his investment, while the grain farmer lacked $380 of even making interest on his investment. It must be remembered, also, that the stock farmer had a larger investment upon which to allow interest.

These men were both good farmers and it was not poor management that led to the difference in profits. The man who made the greater profits could afford to invest a part of same in purchasing and applying to his soil what is required to maintain fertility and still be ahead, or he could arrange his rotation in such a way that his soil would not become impoverished.

FEEDING YOUNG CHICKENS

First Stage of Existence Needs Warmth and Rest

A mistake that even a great many experienced poultrymen make, is in the feeding of the chicks too soon. When the chick leaves the shell it comes into the world with a sufficient supply of nourishment, in the form of the egg yolk, to last it for several days. Therefore, what a chick requires at that stage of its existence is not feed but warmth and rest. It is not wise to be dogmatic about feeding, as, given strong, healthy chicks many systems will prove successful, but the following may be used as a guide. When the chicks are removed to their brooding quarters there should be some coarse sand or fine chick grit scattered where they can have free access to it. They should then be left until they show positive signs of hunger, which would be between two and three days after hatching. They may then be given some bread crumbs that have been very slightly moistened with milk; this may be scattered on clean sand or chick grit. If being brooded by a hen she will see that no food is allowed to lie around, but if in a brooder, feed which the chicks do not pick up in a few minutes should be removed, as nothing in feeding causes so much trouble as leaving food of that nature around until it is sour. The chicks should be fed five times a day. The following system may be adopted or altered to suit conditions: First feed, bread crumbs moistened with milk; second, finely cracked mixed grains; third, rolled oats; fourth, moistened bread crumbs; fifth, finely cracked grains. If too early to get the chicks out onto the grass at once, green food should be supplied in the form of young lettuce, sprouted grains, or any other tender succulent food that is acceptable. After the chicks are ten days to two weeks old, coarser foods may be introduced; all changes should be made gradually.

KILLING QUACK GRASS

Thorough Tillage is Needed Commencing Right After Haying

All methods of eradicating the troublesome weed, are based on thorough tillage. The implements found on any well equipped farm are sufficient to eradicate quack grass. As the quack roots are found closer to the surface in sod and pasture fields than in cultivated fields, it is often advisable to utilize a field for pasture or meadow, keeping the grass cut closely or grazed before attempting to kill it. The work should start immediately after haying by ploughing the infested land only deep enough to turn over a furrow containing most of the grass roots. From three to four inches will be deep enough on sod or pasture land. Disk the land thoroughly every ten or twelve days until autumn, when the quack grass will be killed. Plough the land to a good depth the following spring to bury the dead roots which will supply food to the succeeding crop. Plant corn or potatoes and cultivate thoroughly, or sow a smother crop as millet or buckwheat. The process of killing quack grass is not complicated, but one thing must always be borne in mind, the work must be done conscientiously and thoroughly. A half-hearted effort is useless.

WISE POULTRY TALK

Many Hints That Are Always Seasonable and Sound

Health depends much on the care given the fowls. They need close attention daily.

Low vitality should be guarded against by using only strong birds as breeders. Never use a male that is unsound.

If we want chickens with life enough to chase a grasshopper we must avoid inbreeding.

It is difficult to fatten stunted chickens. In feeding market poultry an important point is feeding regularly.

Don't sell all the strong, sturdy birds. The farmer must have that kind to pay him a good profit.

The muslin front house is a necessity for the health of fowls in almost any climate where it doesn't get too cold.

The chicken stunted in growth never becomes what it might have been had the development been continuous.

Perches nailed down tightly are not the right kind if you want to substitute the tricky hen house.

GETTING FARM LABOR

Ontario Makes Way Easy From Town to Country

A phase of the labor problem in Ontario is being handled by the Government to secure co-operation between the Labor Bureaux in cities and towns, established by the Department of Labor, and the District Representatives of the Department of Agriculture as a means of meeting to some extent the scarcity of farm help. For years it has been recognized that among the numbers of unskilled laborers in the cities there are men who have drifted in from the farms. In many cases these could be induced to go back to farm work if the opportunity was presented to them. While the Labor Bureaux have not been particularly concerned or sufficiently well posted to deal with this problem under the system now being established the officer in charge of one of these branches will be in close touch with the District Representatives of the Department of Agriculture, with detailed data available he will be in a position to offer an applicant who has had farm experience a choice of positions in the country.

Carried Six Million Safely

From 1905 to 1916 the Provincial Government's line through the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, carried more than six millions of passengers, without one killed or seriously injured.

"I miss," said the political orator. "I miss"—here he brushed away a not unmanly tear—"many of the old faces I used to shake hands with."

Twitching of the Nerves, Headache and Indigestion

Would Lie Awake For Hours Unable to Sleep—Cure Came With the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Peterborough, Ont., March 7.—These are trying times on people who are naturally nervous and easily worried and excited. On every hand you hear of nervous prostration and nervous collapse. Sometimes the result of overwork and the worry of business cares and again on account of the depressing influence of war news and the anxiety for those who are in danger.

Never has there been so great demand for treatment to restore the exhausted nerves and never has Dr. Chase's Nerve Food so thoroughly proven its efficiency in this regard.

Mrs. C. French, 104 Lansdowne street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness, frequent headaches, and indigestion. For many years I was troubled with a twitching or fidgety feeling about my limbs after retiring, causing me much loss of sleep. If wakened up out of my first sleep, even had I been asleep only five minutes, I would lie awake for hours and could not get to sleep again. Any sudden noise or a door slamming would set my nerves going and I would fear that something dreadful was going to happen. I had tried different remedies for this trouble, but without success. A friend asked me one day why I didn't try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I thought I could at least give it a trial. I secured some and commenced using them, and found they benefited me so much that I have taken fully a dozen boxes. My nervousness or fidgety feeling in the limbs is entirely cured. I can now eat and sleep well. I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food strongly, and would advise any one suffering from nervous trouble of any kind to use them according to directions."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

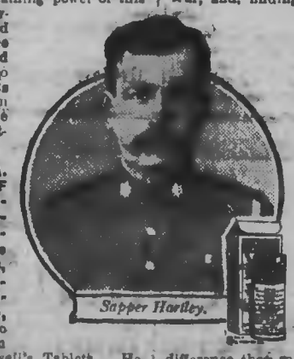
Kept Fit Through Two Wars

Ontario Sapper Praises Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

That a soldier should use and praise Dr. Cassell's Tablets is clear proof of the wonderful sustaining power of this great strength-giving medicine. And thousands of service men on land and sea are trusting to Dr. Cassell's Tablets to sustain them through all the hardships of relentless war.



Sapper Hartley.

SAPPER A. HARTLEY, OF THE A. COMPANY, CANADIAN ENGINEERS, whose home address is 205, TRAFALGAR STREET, LONDON, ONTARIO, is one of many who have written in praise of Dr. Cassell's Tablets. He says:—"As a constant user of Dr. Cassell's Tablets I would like to add my testimony to their value. I used them when I was in the South African War, and, finding the benefit of them there, have taken them since whenever I felt run down. I always recommend them, for I know they do all that is claimed for them. In my opinion they are the best tonic anyone can take for loss of appetite, poorness of the blood, or general weakness of the system. We have had a lot of hard training here, and some time ago I began to feel the strain, but I got some Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and the boys are surprised at what a difference they made in me. I mean to have some with me always on active service."

Dr. Cassell's Tablets put new life and vigour into weak, overstrained people. They nourish the nerves, enrich the blood, strengthen the general system, and create that snap and fitness which make life a joy. Take a course of them, and health and vital energy will soon be yours.

WAR BRINGS JAPAN GREAT PROSPERITY

According to the Herald of Asia, Japan had wonderful prosperity in 1916. The exports exceeded the imports by 368,000,000 yen ($184,000,000), and the actual balance of Japan's foreign trade was more than 600,000,000 yen ($80,000,000). These are the official figures, but the Herald of Asia states that the real figures for exports must be increased by twenty per cent. With this correction the balance in Japan's favour is 625,000,000 yen, or $312,500,000.

This prosperity was the result, in a great measure, of the European war. Japan is manufacturing numerous articles which heretofore Germany exported to the world. This is particularly the case with toys. Germany practically had a monopoly of that line before the war, but Japan quickly took advantage of the German manufacturers' inability to send their goods across the seas.

One of the most interesting features of the activities developed by the war has been scientific research. Japan's chemists have cut loose from Western investigators, and are invading new fields for themselves.

Buckles will be used in the spring. They will fasten the belts of many suits and be used as trimming on hats.

Miners Making $100 A Week

CARDIFF, Wales, March 22. — Cardiff has become known as the Pittsburg of the British Isles. Like the American city the coal mines are largely responsible for its boom, although shipping has played no small part. Some men who were shipping clerks two years ago now own a string of ships and coal miners are making $100 a week.

Just to show that it has made a lot of money Cardiff invested $150,000,000 in the last British war loan. This works out at the rate of more than $750 a head of the population, and is the most remarkable of all the contributions that came from any one city in the British Isles.

MAYOR OF CHATHAM ACCUSES ALDERMEN OF ATTEMPTED GRAFT

CHATHAM, March 21. — Sensational graft charges were made against Ald. G. S. Coatesworth, Frank Baxter and Fred H. Briscoe by Mayor Kerr at the opening of the city council here, when the sworn statements of P. S. Coate, manager of the Chatham Gas Company, Archibald Park, director of the company, and A. Falls, auditor of the company, were read, alleging that the three aldermen, who have been strenuously opposing a proposed deal whereby the city agreed to purchase the electrical equipment of the Chatham Gas Company, to cost $500,000, had approached the three officials of the company, and entered into negotiations by which they stated that if the officials would give them $5,000 to be split among the three aldermen, they would favour the proposal and burn up the petitions, signed by 800 ratepayers, asking that it be referred to the electors to indorse.

The startling evidence read by Mayor Kerr was followed by two resolutions, which carried—first, that until the charges were cleared up the three accused aldermen relinquish their seats on all standing committees, and, secondly, that the city solicitor, G. L. Lewis, K.C., be instructed to take up the charges before the county judge.

Aldermen Deny Charges.

The three councillors emphatically denied the charges preferred, Ald. Briscoe taking the opportunity of seconding the motions, and stating that he would in every way possible assist in the inquiry in the county court. Ald. Briscoe, Baxter and Coatsworth immediately left their seats after they had denied the charges, stating that all negotiations had been as a result of their having been approached by directors of the gas company.

The petitions signed by upwards of 800 were held by the trio until Monday, when they were forwarded to the municipal board, with a request that the proposed deal be submitted to the ratepayers of the city.

Put Over Similar Deals.

The statements, as read in open council, specified that Ald. Coatsworth, a local lawyer, had stated he had put over similar deals in Chicago, and that as the city was paying $200,000 too much for the electrical equipment, he did not see any reason why they should not get a piece of the difference.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

"I visited the office of the Highbrow Magazine the other day," said the poet, "and I never saw such beautiful waste paper baskets, all decorated with pink ribbons."

"So that your lines may be cast in pleasant places, eh?" said the mean man.—Exchange.

Would Have Lost War Under The Old Government

PETROGRAD, March 23. — "We would have lost the war under the old Government," declared the former Grand Duke Cyril of Russia—now simple Admiral Romanoff, under the democratic regime.

"Just now," he said, "my house porter and myself see alike.

"It was useless," he continued, describing attempts to ameliorate conditions of the old autocratic regime, "to discuss the matter with the Czar. We simply could not break down the wall interposed by Sturmer, Protopopoff, Scheglovitoff, and others."

It was learned that the Grand Duke Cyril, foreseeing an uprising, had deputized his wife, the Grand Duchess Victoria, to attempt to influence the Czarina, hoping thus to reach the Czar and persuade him to adopt wider reform measures. To all of the duchess' pleadings that certain noble-born Russians should be granted power to institute reform the German-born Czarina replied:

"But those people are enemies of our dynasties. There is only a handful of ignorant bridge-playing aristocrats against us. I know Russia and know the people of Russia love our family."

From the front to-day the Grand Duke Nicholas telegraphed to the Premier expressing his firm determination to maintain discipline in the ranks, and urging the Premier to restore order in the country, especially in those industries whose product is essential to the success of the army.

Another peaceful demonstration occurred outside the Duma building Wednesday. A great crowd of people collected, waving red flags and shouting "Long live the revolution—Death to those arrested."

A proclamation issued to-day by Minister of Justice Kerensky pointed out that none of the revolutionary or Socialist parties urged violence against leaders of the former bureaucratic regime or their conviction without adequate trial.

Czar Signed Abdiction In Railway Train

LONDON, March 21.—What most perturbed Emperor Nicholas, says the Petrograd correspondent of the Times, was that sufficient guarantees should be given that his life and those of his family be spared. It is said he was reassured by Gen. Ruzsky, who vouched in the name of the whole army under his command that no harm would befall any member of the family. The first request made by the Emperor was that he be allowed to see his wife, but this was refused point blank. There are reports that he even contemplated suicide, but eventually was induced by his confessor to accept his fortunes calmly and submit to the inevitable. His last words as Emperor are said to have been that he had been betrayed by those he trusted most.

Signed on Train.

The abdication of Emperor Nicholas was signed at the town of Pskoff, where the train on which he was travelling toward Petrograd was halted early in the week. The Times' correspondent says: "One thing is certain: the ex-Czar did not abdicate absolutely voluntarily in order to spare his country further trouble. Even the telegrams from the Grand Duke Nicholas (his uncle) and Gen. Alexieff (Chief of Staff) failed to produce any effect on him. It was only when he realized on his way to Petrograd that while seemingly be in advance was landed to the emactually under guard and unable to communicate with anybody except his closest entourage that he consented to enter into negotiations with the representatives of the Provisional Government."

Breaking the News.

It is related that a member of the Duma Committee and one of the Ministers of the new Cabinet proceeded to Pskoff and had an interview with Nicholas, in the presence of General Russky, a member of the Council of Empire and the supreme military council; Baron Fredericks, Minister of the court, and others. After relating to Nicholas the latest developments in the revolution, the emissaries advised him not to send any troops from the front to Petrograd since all the troops were going over to the revolutionists as fast as they arrived.

"What is it desired that I should do?" Nicholas inquired.

"Abdicate the throne," was the reply.

Disliked Separation.

After devoting some time to deliberation Emperor Nicholas said: "It would be very hard to be separated from my son. Therefore, I will abdicate in favor of my brother, in behalf of myself and my son." The document, which had been prepared previously, he signed it.

The Times correspondent says he has been told the former ruler will have to reside in the Taurus Palace in the Crimea with his family, but eventually will be allowed to go abroad to some allied country, probably Italy.

Carries Dead Babe 24 Hours To Guard It From Trainman

Virginia Mother Holds Little Lifeless Bundle on Long Trip to Save Dreaded Stoppage.

DETROIT, March 23.—Clasping to her breast the lifeless body of her 3-year-old son, who had died on the train while she was en route from Charleston, W. Va., to Detroit, to join her husband, Mrs. Eva Fiol guarded the dead babe from the prying eyes of the train crew, her fellow passngers and the police for 24 hours. Only when her husband stepped forward to embrace her did the mother unwrap the blanket which formed the baby's shroud.

Then, as she looked again at the tiny waxen features, the strain of her terrible experince took its toll, and in a drumb agony she fainted.

Haunting fear that the disclosure of the death of her little son might halt the trip of herself and her other three children, and that the body might be taken from her, sealed the moher's lips during the long course of travel. The boy died early Sunday morning, and Coroner Rotheracre, who investigated the circumstances, decided that death was due to natural causes.

BRITAIN TO TEST DIPLOMATS.

LONDON, March 22. — A sensation has been caused by the announcement at the Foreign Office that regulations will be drawn up soon opening the highest honours in the diplomatic service to merit and competition. In the past for many generations these places have been reserved for the members of the "first" families. Social importance counted for much and except in the rarest instances it was useless for outsiders to apply.

A notable exception was made in the case of Viscount Bryce, whose special qualifications gained for him appointment to the British Embassy in Washington.

WOMEN'S AILMENTS

Come From the Heart and Nerves

Young girls budding into womanhood, who suffer with pains and headaches and whose face is pale and their blood watery, will find Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills build them up.

Women between the ages of 40 and 50, who are nervous, subject to hot flushes, feeling of pins and needles, smothering feeling, shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, etc., are tided over this trying time of life by the use of this remedy.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have a wonderful effect on a woman's system, making pains and aches vanish, bringing color to the pale cheeks and sparkle to the eye.

The old, worn out, tired out, languid feelings give place to strength and vitality, and life again seems like living.

Mrs. Alfred Winter, Castor, Alta., writes: "I would like every woman who is suffering from nerves or heart trouble to know how much Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have helped me. For two years I kept a hired girl and was doctoring all the time. After having taken four boxes of your pills I am able to do all my own work. I would especially recommend them to women between 40 and 50, as at that time they are more liable to be far from well. One of my neighbors knows how they helped me, and she is now using them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or sent direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Officer: "Hello, what's that man making that peculiar whistling sound for? Has he been gassed?"

The French Defeat Germans On The Ailette And Near St. Simon

Fresh French Forces Press Steadily Forward North of Soissons While Other Masses of General Nevelle's Army Inflict Bad Defeat on Huns North of St. Simon, Driving Them Back With Heavy Losses to Grand Seraucourt---Germany Announces Blockade of Arctic Ocean.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official Communique), March 23.—While fresh French troops pressed steadily forward at the Aillette and north of Soissons, other masses of General Nivelle's forces inflicted a stinging defeat on the Germans north of St. Simon, driving them back with heavy losses to Grand Seraucourt.

French victories at Aillette and St. Simon indicate that the Allies have broken two or three very important German defensive salients and occupied much more territory.

Fresh detachments of French troops succeeded in crossing the Aillette and made further progress north of Solssons, declared to-day's French official communique.

The Germans attacked and were defeated with heavy losses north of St. Simon. They were driven back to Grand Seraucourt.

It is confirmed that the Germans' defeat on the front from Vregny to Chiares was very costly for them. An entire regiment was sent against one point without success.

CHRISTIANA, March 23.—The Foreign Office received official notification to-day that Germany had instituted a blockade of the Arctic Ocean between Norway and Spitzbergen.

The new blockade is manifestly aimed to prevent shipments to the Russian port of Archangel.

(By Robert J. Bender, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Germany's latest affront in the torpedoing without warning of the American tanker Healdton will be answered by continued speeding up of all preparations for actual hostilities which are now regarded as inevitable.

President Wilson and Secretary Lansing are convinced that Germany's present course is merely hastening a clash. The President and his premier are known from the highest and most authoritative sources to have held the firm conviction that the Kaiser's government is determined on forcing a declaration of war from this country.

President Wilson met with the Cabinet to-day to consider developments in the international situation and to discuss the progress made by all departments in preparation for hostilities.

There are indications to-day that the President, after Congress has defined the status between Germany and the United States, will augment his Cabinet by one or more posts to cover the work of transportation and possibly a portfolio to handle the work of munitions making.

BERLIN, March 23.—There is no "revolution" in Germany.

London, Holland and New York rumours that trouble has been brewing in Germany are incorrect.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES AFIELD, March 23.—Not only did the Germans sweep that part of France they are relinquishing clear of homes, supplies and roads — but in many cases they swept it clear of its womanhood.

Women between fifteen and fifty were forced to go back into the interior of Germany. At Rouy Le Grand over four hundred women and girls between those ages had thus been driven to the interior for work.

PETROGRAD, March 23.—The condition of the children of the former Czar took a turn for the worse to-day. Four of his daughters are reported suffering from scarlet fever, and the eldest of these, the Grand Duchess Olga, was said to-day to be delirious. The Czarevitch is also very ill.

THE HAGUE, March 23.—The Kaiser Wilhelm is on the verge of a nervous breakdown and has departed for Hamburg, a health resort, according to private messages received here to-day. He will receive Chancellor Bethmann-Hollwegg there instead of at German headquarters.

PETROGRAD, March 23.—When the train bearing the former Czar arrived at the Imperial Pavilion at Tsarkoe-Selo, he stepped out calmly. He looked haggard and tired. He wore a Cossack uniform on purple, his only decoration being the Order of St. George. He has now rejoined his family.

PETROGRAD, March 23. — Ambassadors of England, France and Italy to-day followed the example of American Ambassador Francis and formally conveyed to Foreign Minister Ivoff the recognition by their respective nations of the new Russian Government.

After sixteen hours of desperate fighting Russian forces dislodged the Turks occupying Aliabad, near Kerinza, and forced them to retreat, to-day's official statement declared.

OTTAWA, Ont., March 23.—It was semi-officially announced to-day that Canada's Victory War Loan, lists for which close to-night, has been an unprecedented success. Exact figures will not be available for some days, but without doubt it has been largely oversubscribed. No more Canadian war loans are likely to be offered to the public till next autumn at least.

NEW YORK, March 23.—The White Star liner Baltic arrived safely at Liverpool to-day, the International Mercantile Marine announced here. The Baltic sailed March 13, with many passengers.

LAUSANNE, Swiss., March 23.—The International Red Cross Society is authority for the statement that the Germans on the French front are putting their prisoners at work on front-line trenches as reprisals, and to stay the Allied advance. Officials of the Red Cross are attempting to dissuade German headquarters from permitting this.

MANY MORE LOTS AVAILABLE FOR THE PRODUCTION SCHEME

226 Lots Found on Eighteen Streets in the South Ward and These Are Being Sorted Out Ready For Selection

WOMEN TAKING HOLD

The Greater Production Movement is spreading. Women, who are the factors in determining household economies, have many of them, made up such minds as they have that never again will they pay the grocer or dealer $1.00 per peck for potatoes. And that there be no scarcity, barring weather conditions, they will see that the plot is tilled.

Two women came yesterday to entreat the use of a lot next door. To go shares in its use and tillage. A letter was written to the owner and no doubt assent will be given. The women expressed the determination to work early and late, and to get a crop. That is the sort of state of mind that will bring results.

The sorting out of lots, in the south ward, such as will be suitable for cultivation, is going on. Mr. Henry, the assessor, supplies information and Mr. Ingram of the City Clerk's office, is tabulating and arranging the record. It is positively surprising the amount of really tillable land that is vacant. And most of it within easy reach.

On eighteen of the streets in the south ward, on which area the inquest is now being held are found 226 lots, of course of varying sizes, ranging from 32 ft. frontage to 52 ft. and in depth 90 ft. to 160 ft. These are, for instance, all below Prince street, except a few on Albert and Patterson streets. So that the man living in the south, and who can secure one of these will not have to go far to get at it. It is expected that following the movement that several men will get ready to do ploughing and the committee will take steps to try and provide facilities for the purpose, that is arrange with men for a reasonable fee to do the work. To be paid for by the user of the lot.

It is surprising that there are so few non-resident owners. Scrutiny shows that even these are men who formerly lived in the city and who have moved away. The roll gives the address and all will be communicated with in good time for beginning work.

It is a little early to announce that selections may be made, as the listing is not completed. Due notice will be given and then we shall see how far the movement has taken hold in a public way. Numbers of arrangements have been made privately and these will not be recorded. The whole thing is being placed on paper so that a record may be kept and if in another year lots are to be used the work will not have to be done over again.

Advertiser has three lots on Charles St., Ashburnham (adjoining his own residence) on which he wishes to build residences of a character and style compatible with the surrounding neighbourhood.

Arrangements would be entered into with any responsible persons whereby advertiser would build to suit intending purchaser's wishes. Terms of payment would be a secondary matter and should be made to suit any reasonable circumstances.

To the Teacher and pupils of the Auburn school.

Having received a letter from Helen Spencely in regard to a parcel having been sent by the pupils of the school, and now that I have received it, it is my duty to write a line thanking you for it.

Well, of course, there is no need of me stating how much the boys enjoy a parcel out here, so I thank you, one and all and assure you that you will all be in my mind especially, when my Tommy cooker is in use and that will be often.

Now as things for writing are not as convenient out here as in school, you cannot expect too much from me. So I will close with best of luck to all. I remain.

SERGT. HERBERT O'HEARN

At a largely attended meeting of the Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club, held last night in the club rooms in the Barrie Building, it was decided to affiliate with the Great War Veterans' Association of Canada, and in future the club will be known as the Peterborough branch, Great War Veterans' Association. As the latter organization is composed only of men who have left Canada on active service, and who have been honourably discharged, the affiliation will mean that a number of local men who had enlisted for overseas service, but who had been discharged before leaving Canada, will not be eligible and will have to be dropped from the membership of the organization. The Great War Veterans' Association is organizing branches throughout the Dominion.

At last night's meeting it was decided to apply to the Police Commission for permission to hold a tag day on the Saturday nearest to the aninversary of the immortal second battle of Ypres. The funds will be used to carry on the work of the club and to look after the welfare of the men who have come back after doing their bit. On the Sunday following all the war veterans in the city will participate in a church parade.

No definite word has been received here yet in regard to the officers who will command the battalion to be raised by the 57th Regiment for Canada's Home Defence Forces. An official communication showing the establishment of a battalion under the new scheme has been received. The 57th Regiment is to be assisted in raising a battalion by the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons and by the 40th Regiment of Cobourg, the 45th Regiment of Lindsay and the 46th Regiment of Port Hope. The orders are that the organization is to be commenced in March night drills will be held in April, and the battalions are to go to camp in May.

Mr. J. L. Wyatt, East City, received a letter from his son Harry, who was in England, to the effect that he was well and expected to participate in the big drive that is now taking place. He said by the time the letter reached Peterborough he would be back in France again.

Sergt. Wm. Hill, of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, with headquarters at Kingston, is here on recruiting duty. He hopes to bring the advantages of "C" Battery before those who wish to join the famous mounted unit. Sergt. Hill served with the Imperial Forces in France and the Dardanelles and knows fully just what the artillery branch of the service requires and hopes to get that material in Peterborough. There are 150 horses, and 18 18-inch guns and sufficient equipment to give an artillery recruit the finest preliminary training in Canada. All the instructors are fully qualified Imperial soldiers and have all seen service in this war. The officers conducting the drafts overseas are men who have risen from the ranks, in some cases after 20 to 30 years' service, serving in many engagements previous to this war. All those wishing to join this famous Battery, a battery with a record, can do so at once by applying to O. C. "C" Battery, R.C.F.A., Fete Tu Pont Barracks, Kingston, Ont., or Sergeant W. M. Hill, R.C.F.A., Oriental Hotel, Peterborough.

Mrs. W. J. Kearns has received a letter from her son, Pte. W. D. Kearns, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and is now in France, in which he acknowledges the receipt of a number of parcels from home. He adds "All the boys from Peterborough are ever grateful to the ladies of the Kitchener League for sending the socks and other articles to the boys and also to St. Peter's Patriotic Club, and I am sure they can send as many pairs of socks as possible, as we are sure in need of them.

SHOT A SOLDIER AND HE MAY DIE

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PORTLAND, Maine, March 23.—Two men supposedly trying to disable one or more of Fort William's 12-inch guns, shot Private John Poor early to-day and he will likely die.

He attempted to capture them and grappled with the intruders. One drew a revolver and shot him in the groin. They escaped.

Police Will Begin To Prosecute Now

Chief Thompson stated this morning that automobile owners who have neglected to secure the 1917 license will be prosecuted henceforth. The Chief is of the opinion that car drivers have had sufficient time to obtain the new license, and any excuse that might have been advanced up to the present will no longer recognized.

From the Region of St. Quentin to the Oise French Are Able to Push Forward Only After Spirited Engagements—German War Lords Confer.

SNOWSTORMS REPORTED

LONDON, March 23. — While the French and the British forces in France made considerable progress to-day along the front from Arras to the Aisne (about 100 miles), it is evident from all reports that the Germans are now standing on the Hindenburg line with every intention of holding it. From the region of St. Quentin to the Oise the French encountered marked resistance and were able to press forward only after spirited engagements.

North of Tergnier Nivelle's forces enlarged their positions east of the St. Quentin Canal, driving the enemy from several important defensive positions. North of Soissons they occupied several villages in the face of strong opposition.

Snow Hampers British.

General Haig reports that "the enemy's resistance is increasing along our whole front from west of St. Quentin to south of Arras," adding that heavy snowstorms were hampering the British advance.

The German official reports are significant. There is no mention of further retirement in either of them. The early statement speaks of "clashes between advanced detachments," while the night report states that "only minor engagements between the Somme and the Aisne" took place.

German War Lords Confer.

The German Imperial Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam, left Berlin on Wednesday for General Headquarters to confer with Emperor William and Field Marshal von Hindenburg, Chief of Staff. In Parliamentary circles it is considered that at this conference important questions relative to foreign politics will be discussed.

Wireless reports from Berlin by way of Amsterdam state that some critics in Germany believe trench warfare is over on this section of the West front, indicating that the Germans have no intention of settling down behind the Hindenburg line. The fact that German cavalry are now in touch with British and French mounted troops is taken as indicating that "great events are taking place and that a real battle is in prospect." This despatch concludes with the statement that the use of cavalry at the present time on the scene of the German withdrawal will be extensive, "because neither side is now protected by trenches."

French Can Shell St. Quentin.

The French on their present line are within artillery range of St. Quentin and La Fere both of which strongholds will soon be under bombardment of the French guns.

A REMARKABLE ACHIEVEMENT

Elsewhere in to-day's issue will be found a reproduction of the new building of the "SALADA" Tea Company now nearing completion in Boston, Mass. Every modern convenience for the cleanly and speedy packing of tea is being installed.

It speaks eloquently for the popularity of "SALADA" Tea in the United States, when it is claimed that this new SALADA building will be the largest in the world devoted entirely to product of the Ceylon and India tea-gardens. Those interested in the romantic history of the tea-trade, should write to SALADA TEA CO., TORONTO, for their little book entitled "The Story of the Tea Plant" for which there is no charge.

NOT "STREET" OPINION.

Those interested in the provision of supervised bathing facilities are naturally not any more pleased than the popular sentiments and interests they represent, at the summary quietus, administered by the City Council. Particular objection is made to the inference in a press report that "the opinion of the street has disapproved of action" in regard to "a movement of a decidedly formidable and serious nature." It is held that the anti-popular deputation of three did not, any more than the three Tooley street tailors, represent "the people of England," represent the opinion of the street, unless "the street" in the Wall street sense, of class interests against the interests of the masses. The petitions and deputations in favour of supervised bathing conveniences far more emphatically and comprehensively represented popular desire and popular benefit. Their influence is not at all lessened by the fact that the ladies, always foremost in good works, had a large part in them; and the City Fathers should remember that the ladies are no longer cyphers on the left-hand side of a digit, but a real, live, lawful voting influence.

The objection of one of the deputation, that it was unadvisable to erect buildings in connection with bathing places on account of scarcity of materials, is regarded as querile. The Quaker Oats people are to put up new buildings, and they will be able to scrape together a few thousand feet of lumber for their purposes. But they are a business corporation and not daunted by a trifing difficulty.

The friends of bathing places have the consolation of knowing that even the opponents of immediate action concede the principle of the great desirability of these bathing places. If, however, they had wished to act consistently in opposing immediate expenditure they might have protested against the absolutely unnecessary action of the City Council in voting $1,000—depleting an almost empty city treasury to the relief of the Dominion treasury, overflowing with millions, to help recruiting. In the first place it is inadequate and will only serve present purposes, and will have to be repeated if any considerable help to recruiting is to come from money expenditure. In the second place it was an ill-timed liberality; for it encouraged the Government to shirk its share in recruiting work. The Government has millions at its disposal for war purposes, and it seems a shame that a city corporation should be forced to deprive the ratepayers of the benefits of expenditure of their taxes for an admittedly necessary purpose in conformity with the people's interests and wishes.

Whatever other opinion the Council represents it does not represent the mass of public opinion in "turning down" the bathing business. Its action, coming on the heels of its splendid, public-spirited and enterprising attitude to Quaker Oats reconstruction, does not loom very large.

NONE TOO SOON.

The resignation of Hon. P. E. Blondin, Nationalist Postmaster-General in the Borden Government, to leave him free to recruit a regiment of Canadian soldiers for overseas service, is an encouraging, if belated, exhibition of patriotism. His action has double merit—it is a patriotic one and an act of reparation. Mr. Blondin as a Nationalist, a steady and rather aggressive and outspoken opponent of Canada taking any part in the war in British interests, is responsible to the extent of his personal influence for defeating the success of recruiting in the province of Quebec.

He might be held responsible also for his official influence in checking recruiting if Sir Robert Borden were not more responsibly guilty for placing in high office, as one of His Majesty's advisers, an avowed enemy of Canadian participation in the war, and a leader in the disloyal cult of ians had no duty in the regard of "owe nothing to England and the English." The simple habitants of Quebec, who for years have been "fed up" with the doctrine of Nationalism, who had been taught that they owed no military service, no patriotic duty to the Empire, could not be blamed for thinking that the Nationalist doctrine was right, and govern their attitude towards recruiting accordingly, when they saw one of the prophets of the disloyal gospel of Nationalism—and not only one but three—elevated to the highest place of honour in the councils of the nation that was being called upon to make every sacrifice in arms and means to serve the Empire's needs.

The Nationalist ministers cannot be blamed—it was only human to accept the emoluments attached to a fat portfolio; but the blame rests upon Sir Robert Borden who, in a position of supreme responsibility, highly answerable for Canada's highest fulfilment of her duty of helping the Empire in this war, retained—after he had appointed—in his Cabinet, three disloyal ministers whose disloyal preaching of the doctrine that Canadians had no duty in the regard of imperial service, had an influence where their influence was greatest, in killing recruiting—in Quebec.

Hon. Mr. Blondin, even at this late hour, is to be credited with a heroic attempt to make reparation. However, his late antagonism to recruiting becomes more serious when we consider how much his interest in recruiting if exercised in the recent past would have accomplished. Mr. Blondin said yesterday, as reported in despatches, that he was making arrangements to raise a battalion in his own native province, Quebec; and "hoped to be able to recruit it to strength in the next sixty days."

If Mr. Blondin is such a "whirlwind" at recruiting, it is a great pity that he had not abjured his anti-British heresy a couple of years ago. However, loyal Canadians will wish him luck and hope that he will succeed in enrolling a new regiment of Canadians to take their places alongside of the gallant Canadians who have done such heady, hearty and heroic fighting in France and Flanders. We shall overlook everything and be additionally grateful, if Mr. Blondin can persuade the other two Nationalists remaining in the Borden cabinet, to resign and take the King's shilling, and even much more grateful if he can get Bourassa to enlist in the humble capacity of un petit caporal.

Sanitary Inspector First Cleans Up His Official Quarters

One of Sanitary Inspector Stapleton's first attentions has been directed toward the conditions of his office at the city hall, which he told the Property Committee was quite unsanitary and needed a clean-up. Ald. Duncan was instructed to go over the office with the Inspector and ask the City Trust to make the necessary improvements. The office was without pens, ink, and stationery, which Ald. Duncan was authorized to procure. Since assuming the position, Mr. Stapleton has been busy with details of the department. Mr. F. W. Miller has been following up, and within a short time it is expected that the office will be working smoothly and efficiently.

CHOICE GARDEN LOTS CLOSE SUBURBAN

Every family should have a garden this year and every year. Most of my lots in South End were gardened last year and several are ploughed and manured, all of this coupled with low prices and easy reasonable terms desired should enable a sensible man to decide quickly. Every lot I own being so close outside the city must grow in value as the city grows in population. Hence a wise man will buy the lot he is going to garden because every hour's work helps to increase its value, best of all it compels a man to save a little of what he earns and enables him to own his home. Buy my lots now. Special terms $5.00 deposit and $5.00 monthly.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Peterborough, March 23, 1917.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,— As mentioned in your valued paper of yesterday, a sub committee of the Council met a committee of the Playgrounds Association and citizens interested in bathing beaches. We find on meeting the Council committee a last minute dark horse in the shape of a counter deputation, composed of Messrs. W. H. Bradburn, V. Eastwood and Denne, who state they represented a section of the people who do not desire bathing beaches at the present time, but did not say what section.

Now it appears to me that if these gentlemen are really representative of the section before mentioned, and their views are allowed to rule, we shall never have bathing beaches in Peterborough, because they will never have the need for them. People who can keep automobiles, build cottages on the lakes and have their own private bathing houses, do not need bathing beaches, and will never feel the necessity of them.

We are appealing for the common people, who compose the majority of the citizens, and who are not able to afford such luxuries.

It is hordly necessary for me to enumerate all the advantages to be derived from public bathing beaches, as the citizens are by now fully acquainted with them. The very fact that such a representative body as the Trades and Labour Council have petitioned the City Council to grant the appropriation for these beaches shows that the very people who will use them are the ones who are asking for them.

I understand that the question of public bathing beaches is to be brought, by the sub-committee, before the committee of the Whole Council this evening, and I would therefore respectfully beg the aldermen not to allow themselves to be influenced by the views of a deputation, who seem to represent the section of the public who do not NEED bathing beaches.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,

Yours very truly,

J. W. WORTH.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Dear Sir,—The Examiner, in reporting the meeting yesterday afternoon of representatives of the Playgrounds Association with the special committee of the Council, to consider the question of public bathing places, refers to a deputation which appeared in opposition to the proposed plan.

This deputation consisted of Mr. V. Eastwood, Mr. W. H. Bradburn, and Mr. T. H. G. Denne.

The Examiner states: "Mr. Bradburn and Mr. Eastwood expressed sympathy with the idea of public bathing places, but felt that the time was inopportune and moreover that the great body of ratepayers did not welcome unnecessary expenditure this year."

The closing paragraph does a grave injustice to Mr. V. Eastwood, who stated that he was not there to object to the proposed expenditure of $2,000; that the small percentage of a mill which this represented, meant nothing as compared with the advantages to be derived from its expenditure—nor had he heard a single man question the money end of it. He was there to protest against public bathing places for other reasons. That labour and lumber would be diverted from strictly war work. This explanation is due Mr. Eastwood who, as chairman of the Board of Education, is naturally interested in all that concerns the welfare of the children, for whom, primarily, the Playgrounds Association Committee is working.

Yours, etc.,

(MRS. W. R.) K. MORRIS.

The Examiner Have Been Asked To Announce

That the "Redfern Store" is completey under the management of the Cressman Co., Ltd., also, that the stock of Ready-to-Wears is entirely separate and different in both establishments. If any have been uncertain as to the ownership of the Cressman Co.'s branch, we trust this will leave no doubt as to the indentity.

We might also add that the recent acquisition of these premises has enabled them to enlarge their Victrola department on the third floor, giving this section the increased floor space that its rapid and continuing growth demands.

More Complaints Against The Work Of Garbage Collector

The Property Committee's written order despatched in a registered letter to Garbage Contractor Graham, demands that he report to the Sanitary Inspector on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. This action last night, followed Mr. Stapleton's statement that he had been unable to get in touch with Mr. Graham to discuss certain complaints and other business of the Sanitary Inspector's department. The contractor resides in Monaghan on the old Leary homestead, has no telephone and has apparently been altogether too elusive to promote the efficiency of the garbage collection.

Mr. C. C. Parsons, 162 McDonnel street, has filed a complaint with the committee that he had arranged with the Collector to drive into a lane for the garbage from his house. There was room for the horses to turn and for a time the work was done satisfactorily. Mr. Parsons had tipped the collector for the service, but following a period during which he had not seen the man the collections stopped. On enquiry he was told that he would have to pay $5.20 a year for the work. Mr. Parsons now asks to have the work carried out as provided by the by-law.

A barrel of ashes or more has accumulated because the collector refused to remove hem regularly.

Ald. Duncan deprecated the tipping idea, and Ald. Saunders remarked that the Collector was not giving satisfaction. This was somewhat explained by Mr. F. W. Miller, who has been acting Sanitary Inspector. He stated that Mr. Graham did not want the contract next year.

"If we fine him once or twice," said Ald. Duncan, "we may overcome some of these difficulties."

Mr. Miller stated that there had been no collection from W. A. Logan's house, No. 14 Murray street, practically since Jan. 9th.

Mr. Stapleton was informed that the collector was expected to drive into the yard behind the Crown building to collect the garbage from the apartments.

It was finally decided that Mr. Graham be asked to meet the new inspector to discuss these complaints and arrange details of the work.

Offered To Buy A Plot From City

Mr. Jas. Palmer, Westcott street, has offered to buy the little trianzular plot of land behind the Chicle Company factory, Ald. Saunders told the Pprpoperty Committee last night. He would agree to resell to the city if the land were needed at any time.

"If he wants to plant it, by all means let him have it," said Ald. Smith; but Ald. Duncan advised that an investization be made first. The Chicle Co. might need it. Ald. Saunders will get the information.

THE GENTLEMEN WERE "THE HOSTESSES" OF THE I. O. D. E. TEA

The gentlemen of Peterborough" were the "hostesses" yesterday afternoon at the Masonic Hall of a "high tea" which will long be remembered by the scores who attended.

The hall was completely transformed into the most attractive dining-room imaginable. The walls were hung with Union Jacks and an enormous Scotch flag. The tables in which the colour scheme of yellow and white was carried out by the runners of yellow paper down the centre, yellow candles and daffodils were perfection.

On entering, the guests were warned by placards at intervals on the walls 'not to tip' the waiters, they're all married, that there were two doctors in attendance 'for ambulance calls ring 80 or 157.

The waiters were a great success both in ability in their new calling and the costumes they wore. Each was trim and chic in a well starched apron and becoming boudoir cap. Dr. Eastwood presided with grace at the tea table and was ably assisted by Mr. John Crane (head waiter). Dr. Greer, Mr. Fred Roy, Mr. Harry Thompson, Mr. Rollie Denne, Mr. G. O. Cameron, Mr. H. O. Fisk, Mr. G. H. Logie, Mr. A. H. Stratton and Mr. Reid Munro. Mr. W. H. Hill acting as cashier. No one found any fault with the waiters outside of their penchant 'to enter into the guests' conversation,' in fact Mr. Crane was the recipient of six lead tips, which he gratefully pocketed in the hopes of not being noticed. One of the big surprises of the evening was as advertised "hot air on the half shell." This item proved a big attraction until on opening the most toothsome appearing patties they were found to contain cotton wool.

The menu was as follows:

MEE-NOO.

The ladies of the 57th desire to express their thanks to Mr. John Crane and his committee who, contributed so largely to the general success to Mr. R. Deane for pairs and forms lent for the occasion, and to all who attended and in any way contributed to making the evening the complete success it proved to be. The financial part of the evening was most gratifying over $75.00 being received.

'PRINCE RUPERT" RUNS AGROUND

Special to The Examiner:

VANCOUVER, B.C., March 23. — The Grand Trunk Pacific steamer Prince Rupert, Captain McKenny, which left Prince Rupert, B.C., at midnight for Vancouver, is ashore on Genn Island, one mile east of Lawyer's Island Light, and is reported to be extensively damaged.

Munition Workers Coming Here

Closing of Ross Rifle Plant Will Release 2000 Men

A number of munition workers employed by the Ross Rifle factory in Quebec, are on their way to Peterborough, where they have secured employment in local industries. The closing of the Ross Rifle plant means the release of about two thousand men. Several have already secured employment in this city and others will likely follow.

Ottawa, March 23.—According to a telegram received at the Capital from Sir Charles Ross, the proprietor of the Ross Rifle factory, 2,000 employees were thrown out of work by the closing of the factory on Monday and 700 more will be out of employment when the British contract for rifles comes to a finish on March 31.

In order to deal with the situation at Quebec the Government has put itself in touch with munition factories throughout the Dominion advising them that a large number of skilled labourers are available at Quebec and the belief is expressed in official circles that employment will be found for the majority of them.

The service of a considerable number of the officials and employees of the company will be retained by the Government in connection with the valuation to be made of the factory before it is taken over. It will probably be several months and perhaps a year before the factory an be equipped to make the improved Lee-Enfield rifles and in the meantime it is explained it would be possible for the Government to engage the whole Ross rifle staff. More particularly as it will be possible to find employment for the skilled men.

Highest Tender For Market Tolls $70 More Than Last Year

Three tenders were received for the market tolls, the term for which begins on April 1st, as follows:

Benj. Johnston, Fraserville, $687.

D. G. Maloney, $700.

Walter Fisher, $720.

Mr. Maloney secured the tolls a year ago for $650. Apparently the market is regaining some of its former attractiveness to the farmer, or the aspiring clerks fancy that the greater production movement will increase the quantity of goods brought in from the country.

Ald. Duncan moved, seconded by Ald. Taylor, that Mr. Fisher's tender be accepted. The market question will probably be disposed of at tonight's meeting of the Council.

DYE STOCK RISES 150 TIMES.

LONDON, March 21. — The few firms of British dye manufacturers have made enormous profits since the beginning of the war. The report of one of them shows that the value of its shares has risen from $2 to $300.

The value of the stock held by one stockholder who was declared bankrupt before the war jumped to $425,000. Before the war the stock was worth about $3,500.

Pleasing Prices and Pleasing Footwear Models on 3rd Floor

Knowing that Easter is but a few short weeks away, and mindful of all former seasons, we bought liberally, but discreetly, of footwear from manufacturers both Canadian and American. The models that we selected have the double qualifications of style and service. Style and service "which of course includes comfort" think of what a rare combination it is in footwear. Yet here it is in bountiful array.

Please remember that we are the sole agents in this city for the widely known and greatly favored "J. & K. Footwear."

Luxurious Materials for the New Garb at the Easter Season

Will Easter Morn find you in the rear of the procession or will you be fittingly attired for the occasion? We urge you to make haste and especially so if your suit or cloak is to be fashioned from some yard material that requires attention from the dressmaker.

The markets are skimped and buyers encounter many difficulties, "this we cannot deny," nevertheless, we have secured a bountiful supply of beautiful materials. The colors are manifold, likewise the weaves. Navy, of course, cannot be ousted from its stronghold; greens, browns, fawns, etc., are equally as much in favor—it would be unfair to discriminate. Crepe de chenes, georgette, poplins, and all manner of soft supple materials so delightful for airy spring dresses. We must also mention taffeta which combines so splendidly with georgette, and its merit in this direction has not been forgotten—it is widely employed. Our stock of taffetas and georgettes is comprehensive.

Free Market Urged As An Inducement To Farmers To Sell Produce Here

Deputation From Labour Council, Board of Trade and Merchants' Association Present Strong Petition to Property Committee--Some Grocers Disagree.

As an inducement to the farmers of this district to attend the Peterborough market in larger numbers, a deputation representing the Trades and Labour Council asked the Property Committee last night to suspend the tolls on the sale of farm produce for a year or two. If this innovation did not realize the expectation of its advocates the city could easily revert to the present system. The deputation was composed of Messrs. T. C. Elliott, J. J. Hartley, B. D. Hall, H. R. Munro, Jos. Crowe S. H. Mitchell, Fred Browne, J. Arthur Sharpe, Wm. Stevens, A. W. Paskins, A. L. Bolwell, O. S. Matchett, G. L. Myland and D. Wires.

The committee mustered a bare quorum with Ald. Saunders presiding, and Aldermen Duncan, Smith, and Taylor present.

Mr. T. C. Elliott stated that, after carefully considering the local conditions, the Trades and Labour Council, Retail Merchants' Association, and Board of Trade had decided to ask the Council to remove the selling tolls on farm produce, to appoint a caretaker, in plain clothes, in charge of the market, and to supply an adequate number of weigh scales in the market hall for the convenience of purchasers and sellers who might desire to assure themselves that articles were of the required or affirmed weights.

Mr. J. J. Hartley explained that the request referred only to the suspension of tolls on the sale of produce. It did not apply to the revenue from the public weigh scales. Hence it did not cut off all the market revenue now received. It was desirable also that only an ununiformed caretaker supervise the sales since the farmers' wives were afraid of the police. Mr. Hartley felt that the farmers should be encouraged to attend the market. Peddling from door to door might be prevented. If the farmers could be induced to bring in more produce the increased supply should affect prices. The proposal was an experiment, but it should be given a trial. "Nothing ventured, nothing won," quoted Mr. Hartley, who added that if the change did not prove satisfactory it would be an easy matter to return to the old system.

Ald. Smith asked by what means, if the market were free, could farmers be compelled to discontinue peddling.

Mr. Hartley replied that a by-law might secure that result, but City Clerk Armstrong afterwards explained that a charge cannot be exacted from a man for selling produce he has grown.

MR. S. H. MITCHELL.

The city would lose the market revenue of $700 or more, and have to pay about that sum to a caretaker, Mr. S. H. Mitchell, a Reid Street grocer pointed out. Besides, an assistant would be required for Wednesdays and Saturdays. Altogether the change would mean a loss of about $2,000 to the city. And Mr. Mitchell couldn't see what advantage would be derived from the abolition of the tolls. He presented bills indicating his recent purchases of 110 dozens of eggs, and 100 pounds of butter from outside points. The grocers bought butter in Toronto, paid the freight on it and undersold the farmers on the Peterborough market, or sold the produce just as cheaply. The grocers were not antagonistic to the farmers, but Mr. Mitchell did not accept the promise that the removal of the tolls would induce more farmers to sell on the market. As a ratepayer he failed to see how the city would be compensated for the loss of revenue and the extra cost that would be entailed.

MR. B. D. HALL.

Mr. Hall, President of the Board of Trade, said that it was realized that any farmers sell their goods to Toronto wholesalers from whom the local grocers buy much of their supplies. A direct trade between the farmers and the local consumers was desired, and it was believed that a free market would help to establish that system more generally than it obtains at present. "Farmers have told us that they remain away on account of the police," Mr. Hall added. The decline in the value of the market tolls, from $2,000 to $600, indicated that something was wrong.

Ald. Taylor—Farmers are not producing as much as they used to.

Ald. Saunders—I don't think the tolls have anything to do with the conditions.

Mr. G. L. Myland observed that the public scales revenue would not be lost. The Trades and Labour Council also stood for a returned soldier to be appointed as caretaker of the market.

IMPORT DAIRY PRODUCE.

Mr. Oscar Matchett of the grocery firm of Gobeen and Matchett stated that they brought in 90 per cent. of their dairy butter, buying it from dealers in Hastings, Norwood, Lakefield and other nearby points. This is retailed at a small profit, and at prices as low or lower than what the farmers charge on the local market. This proved that the farmers' market here was better (for the farmers) than outside markets. "They will come here whether there are tolls or not," Mr. Matchett continued. "so why sacrifice the market revenue? We have a big bridge to build this year," he added, indicating an assurance that the Hunter Street bridge is an accepted fact.

POTATO PRICES.

"Three weeks ago" said Mr. Matchett," when we were selling potatoes at $3.60 a bag a farmer offered us a load at $3.75 a bag, saying that he had got that price on the market."

Mr. A. W. Paskins, who conducts a grocery store at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets, stated that he had bought dairy butter for 37c in Toronto when it was selling for 42 cents on the Peterborough market. A farmer recently refused his offer of 40 cents a pound for 49 pounds of butter. He went away with it, Mr. Paskins stated, but where he did not know. A free market would be in the interests of the city if it would benefit the consumer.

Ald. Smith—"How is it that Mason, Hamilton and Connell favour a free market? Where does the difference of opinion come in?

SHOULD TRY IT OUT.

Mr. Hartley remarked that the grocers appeared to be afraid of a free market. They advocated buying in Peterborough, yet they themselves bought in Toronto. "I would rather pay a little more and buy my goods right here. The question is, are we willing to try a free market? What signifies the few dollars we may lose. The more farmers that come to Peterborough the more money will be spent here. If they don't spend it here they will spend it some where else.

OLD SYSTEM SMALL BUSINESS.

Mr. Joseph Crowe was in favour of giving the free market idea a trial. The collector exacts the last cent from the farmer, a method Mr. Crowe regarded as a small piece of business. The more farmers on the market the cheaper the produce should be to the citizens. He did not think the suspicions of the police was entirely to the credit of the market and understood why the farmers' wives resented their baskets being pulled around.

CONSIDERING THE CITIZENS.

"We are not considering the farm-

Monk Rasputin Buried In Silver Casket, Czar And Empress Mourners

PETROGRAD, via London, March 23.—The Petrograd press, no longer under the strict censorship of the old regime, is taking advantage of its new liberty to publish facts hitherto suppressed in regard to the assassination of Gregory Rasputin, the mystic whose influence in court circles stirred the country. While the whole nation was breathing a sigh of relief at deliverance from Rasputin's malign influence, the imperial family was laying away his remains, with great reverance and pomp, at Tsarskoe-Selo.

After the body was found in the Neva it was taken to Tsarskoe-Selo in the imperial car, in which rode the then minister of the interior, M. Protopopoff, and General Voyekoff. The body was taken direct to the imperial palace. The funeral ceremony was held in the imperial church. A silver coffin, containing the body, was carried to its resting-place by the emperor, M. Protopopoff, Gen. Voyekoff and others, followed by the empress in deep mourning. The affair caused a scandal at the time and further inflamed the people against the empress.

BOWLING

Last night, in the City Bowling League, the West End team took three straights from the Grocers. The Grocers had a night off. Gillespie was badly handicapped with a bad finger. Fitzpatrick had the high count for the Grocers, and Thomas for the West End, and was the only one to top the 500 mark.

The scores:

FROZEN MEAT FOR ARMIES.

LONDON, March 21. —It was stated in the House of Commons that the Canadian Government have not found themselves in a position to buy meat for the home government, but have helped in various other ways. Canadian firms have sent ten thousand tons of frozen meat for the armies since November and the government are buying more as fast as possible.

FREE MARKET URGED

ers, but the city at large," said Mr. Elliott. "We want the farmers to come here. If the prices go up the grocers' profits should be all the larger if he sells at the market prices. But we believe the prices on the market will come down if we get more farmers coming here." Mr. Elliott recalled the old toll-gate system that obstructed progress until enlightened legislation abolished them. The removal of the market tolls was a step in the same direction. He made a nice point when remarking that the citizens had chosen intelligent and capable men for the Council, he said that the Council must admit that some ability is left and is to be found in the Trades and Labour Council, the Board of Trade and the Retail Merchants' Association. These bodies had unanimously decided in favour of the removal of the market tolls, and Mr. Elliott hoped that this fact would bring some influence to bear upon the opinion of the Property Committee.

Mr. Dan Wires said he supported the appeal, which had been strongly presented.

The Committee did not take any action last night, preferring to wait until the Council was more largely represented. Ald. Saunders said he had sought the opinions of working men and handn't found one man in favour of a free market. Ald. Duncan suggested that some of the market restrictions might be lifted.

A FAREWELL TO REV. T. H. MITCHELL

Last evening St. Andrew's Lecture Hall was crowded to capacity when a large number of friends foregathered to bid farewell to the Rev. T. H. Mitchell and Miss Mitchell. The chairman was Mr. A. McFarlane. The choir gave a very excellent selection, while Miss McLaren and Mr. Treneer sang. Mrs. P. Kerr was accompanist.

The speakers were Mr. G. W. Green, who spoke on behalf of the managers, Mr. John Allan, representing the Session, Mr. A. McNabb, representing the Sunday school, and Mr. Chisholm and Mr. Richardson.

Refreshments were served by the Ladies' Aid Society.

Mr. Mitchell made a very appropriate reply, in which he referred to the many pleasant associations that had been created during his stay in the city.

The Folly Of Taking Digestive Pills

A Warning to Dyspeptics.

The habit of taking digestive pills after meals makes chronic dyspeptics of many thousands of men and women because artificial digestants, drugs and medicines have practically no influence upon the excessively acid condition of the stomach contents which is the cause of most forms of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The after dinner pill merely lessens the sensitiveness of the stomach nerves and thus gives a false sense of freedom from pain. If those who are subject to indigestion, gas, flatulence, belching, bloating, heartburn, etc., after eating would get about an ounce of pure, bisulphated magnesia from their druggist and take a teaspoonful in a little water after meals, there would be no further necessity for drugs or medicines because bisulphated magnesia instantly neutralizes stomach acidity, stops food fermentation and thus insures normal, painless digestion by enabling the stomach to do its work without hindrance.

TO-NIGHT'S ADDRESS ON PROPHECY

A desire having been expressed that an announcement be made concerning the subject of the public address on Prophecy to be given to-night in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church by Rev. J. Turnbull, of Beverley St. Baptist Church, Toronto, it is stated that Mr. Turnbull will speak on "The God of This Age." This is the title that is givevn to Satan in the New Testament. So little is known about Satan and what prophesy says about him that this address should be one of unusual interest.

A young man who worked in Peterborough before the outbreak of the war and who took part in various church activities, enlisted on the outbreak of the war and was severely wounded and has since returned to Canada. He has returned an atheist. His explanation of his change in views is that he does not believe that a God of love would permit such things as he say while at the front. Had this young man known more about prophetic truth the probabilities are that he would not have changed his views.

Those interested might find it profitable before attending to-night's meeting to read what is said about Satan in the 2st and 2nd chapter of Job, and in the first 13 verses of the 4th chapter of St. Luke, and to note that it shows that Satan is willing, when it suits his purposes even, to quote scripture.

The public is cordially invited to attend to-night's meeting which is undenominational and open to the public.

NIGHTSOIL PROBLEM BEFORE HEALTH BOARD

The problem of night soil collection has again attracted the attention of the Property committee, which appointed last night Ald. Saunders and Ald. Taylor to go over the situation with Ald. Duncan and other members of the Board of Health. It is likely that the Council will not attempt any ambitious system this year, but simply return to the former method of licensing scavengers. At any rate the by-law as it stands will be considered at the conference of the Board of Health and aldermen.

French Take Two Thousand Prisoners On Monastir Front

THE BRITISH AND FRENCH ADVANCE AT MANY POINTS

More Men In The Jails When War Is Over

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, Ont., March 23.— 'The percentage of men who will be in jail after the war will be one hundred per cent. more than at the present time,' was the startling statement made by W. W. Dunlop, inspector of public charities and public institutions, before the Public Accounts committee of the Legislature to-day.

'What I mean is that there are many men that are now working and who, under ordinary circumstances, would be idle and get into jail.

Mr. Dunlop's explanation showed that he did not mean that the jails would be accommodating one hundred per cent. more military men, but that there would be more men in the jails by the return of the soldiers.

Mr. Dunlop said that the middle of 1913, when it was hardest to get a job, was the time when there were the most prisoners.

There were one thousand to be accommodated at that time. The accommodation for prisoners at the Guelph Farm is limited to five hundred. At present there are about 273 there.

Destruction Closing On Foe Efforts To Dodge It Futile

Treachery in Petrograd, His Great Ally, Now No More--Turks Are Face to Face With Disaster—Inexorable Power Closing In From France—Submarines Fail.

NO MORE LITTLE VICTIMS

That Russian failures in the war have been due to deliberate treachery on the part of the Government is charged by the New York Times in a lucid review of the war situation. The article, which is headed "The Last Card," is reproduced herewith:

Germany proposed a cessation of the war; the allies refused; Germany inaugurated unrestricted submarine war; the Turks were routed in Mesopotamia; the allies forced a German withdrawal in France; Russia overturned her faithless Government. These events seem unrelated, but they are related.

By the middle of 1916 Germany was at the end of her victories. Brusiloff's advance had stopped; it stopped soon after Protopopoff became Minister of the Interior and master of the Government, and it is likely that it stopped for that reason. The year before the Grand Duke Nicholas, like Brusiloff, swept all before him, only to find, when he got into the enemy's country, that Sukhomlinoff had deprived him of ammunition, and the best he could do was to get back again without destruction—a marvelous feat, in the circumstances, and one to which history will do justice. Brusiloff, seeing another Sukhomlinoff take up the reins, stopped just in time. But, though he stopped, Germany could not drive him back; neither could she advance in France. Instead the French and British began pushing her labouriously and slowly back.

The end of victories had come, when something happened to enable her to keep the illusion of victory for a while longer. Roumania dashed gayly and light-headedly into the eagle's talons. It had become impossible for Germany to defeat her real adversaries, but it was easy to grasp this little kingdom by the throat—easy, with the aid of Bulgaria, Austria, and Turkey; and for a little the people at home were still entertained with the fiction of an irresistible and all-conquering imperialism, from which the reality had departed.

New Prussian "Peace" Trick In Guise Of Mediation Offer Forestalled By The President

Warned That a Neutral Power Intends to Transmit a Proposal the Administration Announces That It Will Refuse to Negotiate Unless the Revocation of the Submarine is Germany's First Step.

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 24.—On the eve of the extra session of Congress, called by President Wilson to provide means to meet the warlike operations of Prussian submarines against American commerce, the administration made it emphatically clear that no offer of mediation between the United States and Germany with a view to averting war will be welcomed by this country so long as the Prussian campaign of ruthless marine warfare continues.

To forestall offers of mediation which, it is believed here, Germany intends to inspire through pressure brought upon some neutral European government the State Department made it known Thursday that the United States could not consider any effort at restoration of friendly relations with Germany unless negotiations were contingent upon an unequivocal revocation of the submarine blockade order.

A warning has reached the State Department, it was learned, that a neutral Power intends to propose mediation between Germany and the United States. However sincere the motive of that neutral Power may be in seeking to prevent war between the United States and Germany, there is no thought here that Germany will view the mediation offer otherwise than as a vehicle for the false peace propaganda with which she repeatedly has sought to delay action by this country and to divide counsel here.

RECENT TRICK A LESSON FOR ADMINISTRATION.

It is not intended by the administration that Germany shall have a chance to do that. A lesson was learned from the false peace proposal which Berlin induced the Swiss government to lay before the State Department just after Count von Bernstorff was dismissed. The Germans employed that proposal as a vehicle for propaganda, and subsequently after the United States had rejected it and sought to overcome the evil effects of it Berlin utterly repudiated the proposal. Yet in that instance the German agents gained such a handicap over the administration that the pacifists in this country were rallied, and serious trouble was made for the administration before the falseness of the peace proposal could be exposed.

This time administration officials are determined to head off any such trick by the Germans, and they are seeking to do that by announcing in advance that Germany first must renounce and end her submarine campaign and talk afterward. Empty German promises will not be tolerated here. Any one seeking to lay them before the United States will not gain in the esteem of the administration by so doing.

"If a suggestion comes from Germany to discuss restoration of relations before the submarine blockade order is revoked it will not be received," said a high official. "If the suggestion is in the form of an offer of mediation by some neutral government I suppose we will have to give polite answer. Our policy has not changed. Negotiations for the restoration of friendly relations must be contingent upon revocation of the blockade order."

FEAR A NEW OUTRAGE BY GERMANY.

At the same time that the warnings of a Prussian plot to divide sentiment in this country through peace propaganda were received the attention of officials was directed to the statement from Europe that Germany expects war with the United States within forty-eight hours.

It is feared here that Germany contemplates some overt act within that period, which if successfully accomplished will force war immediately.

Meanwhile, preparations are being pushed forward as rapidly as possible. "Man power!" is the cry raised both with the army and navy. The army's hands are tied for lack of appropriations, but the navy is immediately to expand its forces to 74,500 from its present strength of 61,000, and to go ahead to an enlisted strength of 87,000 as soon as that can be done. Mr. Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, made an appeal to the press to lend its support in any way possible to the navy in encouraging recruiting.

In that connection the Navy League announced its intention to build up a special fund from private contributions to be used to pay regular allowances to the families of men desiring to enlist in the navy who are deterred because of the persons dependent upon them. It is especially desired to employ such a fund to attract back to the service men who were trained as gun pointers and in other skilled naval work and who left the navy and incurred responsibilities which make it difficult for them to answer their country's call.

Mr. Daniels approveyd the scheme, although he said that he intended to devote his efforts toward having Congress increase the pay of enlisted men in the navy, as he urged it to do at the last session.

Germans Strive To Check The Allied Advance

Fierce Fighting Is Developing Out of the Gradual Converging of Fighting Forces

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, March 24.—Having themselves slowed up, the Germans to-day are striving by every act known to warfar to check the movement of their pursuers on the western front as the Franco-British approached the 'Hindenburg line.'

Fierce fighting is developing out of this gradual converging of masses of men by both sides. Front dispatches to-day reporting continued fighting despite stiff resistance, indicated the bitterness with which the Germans now contest every yard of the way. North-east of Tergnier, where General Nivelle's French troops are nearest to the allied forces to the Hindenburg line, the enemy inundated the ground by opening canal sluices. The city of La Fere was flooded.

On the longer British front Field-Marshal Haig's men still pressed forward to-day, rebuilding the country as they progressed. German counter attacks developed in force at half a dozen points along this line but all were beaten back. The weather was described as wintry with storms of snow and sleet.

☞ To City, Town and Village Dwellers in Ontario

"Many mickles make a muckle"

All our public men and leaders agree with increasing strength of conviction that, in the fateful days which lie before us in this sternest year of the war, the food supply is going to be a vital factor in the final decision.

The hour has arrived when the efforts of every man, woman and boy who can help to increase production will count in the scale of victory. The helpful possibilities of back yard gardening are immense. For instance, the Medical Health Officer of Toronto states that there are 2000 acres of available back yard garden space in that city. This space would be sufficient to grow enough vegetables to supply the whole community.

Towns and villages have, as a rule, much larger garden spaces than the crowded and congested large city. Think of the effect upon the high cost of living if every one would grow vegetables! Think of the money saved that would otherwise be spent for vegetables, the labor that would be released for vital war work and the increase of the urgently needed surplus of food for export. Let the slogan for 1917 be,

"A vegetable garden for every home"

The Ontario Department of Agriculture emphasizes the importance of vegetable growing to every one who has even a few square feet of ground. Do not think that your small effort will not be worth while. Every garden, however small, is worth while and will count in this critical year of world wide shortage of food.

The Department invites Horticultural Societies, lodges, school boards, labor unions, etc., to encourage vegetable growing by every one. Parents and guardians are requested to encourage boys and girls to grow vegetables and to give them co-operation.

It is suggested that organizations arrange for addresses on vegetable growing by local expert gardeners. If these be not available, the Department of Agriculture will endeavor to send a speaker. It is urgently requested that applications for speakers be made promptly as the demand for them will be great and the number of available experts is limited.

The Department suggests stimulating interest by forming organizations to offer prizes for best vegetable gardens. Every possible assistance will be given any organization encouraging vegetable production on vacant lots.

Write for free literature giving instructions about implements necessary and methods of preparing the ground and cultivating the crop. A plan of a vegetable garden indicating suitable crop to grow, best varieties and their arrangement in the garden will be sent free of charge to any address.

Write for Poultry Bulletin which tells how to keep hens—the waste from the table in an average home is sufficient to feed them. They are not expensive to keep and you will be highly repaid in fresh eggs.

Connected History Of Events Leading To The Revolution

For Several Days Long-Suffering Russians Went Hungry but Still Had Faith.

Troops Were Also Hungry and Said They Would Not Fire—Killed Their Unpopular Officers.

PETROGRAD, March 21.—As a narrative of the events leading up to last Monday could not be correctly transmitted owing to the censorship of the old regime, I am sending a summary of the dramatic occurrences which resulted in the startling success of the Russian revolution. There have been repeated references in earlier messages to the growth of discontent among th people owing to the disorganization of food supplies. The working classes have been earning enormous wages in all the mills, particularly in munition works. The wives and families have bought expensive clothing, but found it difficult to procure bread. The reserves of grain and flour available in the city were insufficient to continue the full rations of the troops. Instead of the regulation quantity of three pounds of rye bread per soldier, the ration was reduced to one and three-quarter pounds. This reduction was destined to play a large part in what followed.

I remember a scene on the Nevsky when a crowd shouted to the soldiers. "You are not going to fire on us, brothers; we only want bread." The men replied. "No, we are hungry like yourselves."

Not only was the quantity of breadstuffs in the capital insufficient, but the distribution was extremely defective owing to lack of proper organization of the bakeries and bread shops. Exorbitant prices were charged, but the people had the money. They waited in endless queues on a chance of buying a loaf, towards the beginning of last week the queues becoming longer and longer and the discontent more and more pronounced.

Here is a characteristic episode related by men of the Publoff works. This enormous concern employs 50,000 hands (and its output of guns and munitions is so great that in one month it can produce more armaments than we could send from England in a whole year. Early in the war the management decided to transfer the plant to South Russia, where coal, steel and food is close at hand. The late Government interfered with the plan and it had to be dropped. The inevitable result followed. The works ran short of fuel, steel and bread. The co-operative stores were unable to sell bread in sufficient quantities at the proper hours. The men on leaving work for dinner found no bread in their homes because their wives and daughters had been standing since early morning in the bitter cold waiting vainly for the stores to open.

NICHOLAS WAS MISLEAD

Ex-Minister of the Interior Protopopoff and his crew of incompetents were aware of the trouble brewing. They expected it would come to a head when the Duma opened at the end of February, but everything remained quiet. The long suffering Russians still hoped that something would be done to remedy the bread crisis. Protopopoff, however, misrepresented the case entirely to the Czar, claiming that the police and military measures that had been taken, including the arrest of labor delegates on Gouch off's war industries committee, had saved the situation. The Czar left for the front with the firm conviction that all anxiety had been removed.

This, I may add, was the impression everywhere I went. For a few days in Moscow there was a bread crisis even more acute than in Petrograd, but nobody anticipated an immediate revolution.

On Wednesday, March 7, there were signs of incipient unrest. A few Cossacks and patrols appeared on the streets, but people remained quiet. The following day large crowds appeared on the thoroughfares. The Government became anxious and announced urgent measures would be immediately taken in conjunction with representatives of the Zjestvos and Presidents of both Houses of Parliament for bringing in food supplies.

Cavalry patrols were moving in every direction. Many bread shops were wrecked and some firing occurred. General Khabaloff, commanding the troops, issued a notice saying that the bakeries were receiving the usual quantity of flour and that supplies were arriving regularly.

SOME TROOPS MUTINIED.

Friday the Duma engaged in debates on the food crisis. All the speakers declared the situation critical. Minister of Agriculture Rittich complained that he had been unjustly accused of the misdeeds of his predecessors. Meanwhile the police tried to confine the workmen to their own quarters. The city soldiers remained in barracks. The same morning the crowds at the Nevsky and other thoroughfares were as numerous as ever, but were quiet, and even sang patriotic songs. The situation remained unchanged Saturday except that the police in some instances used rifles and machine guns. Cossacks and some infantry which had for the first time been brought out of barracks, were obviously disinclined to be rough with the people. Later in the day, however, some of the troops fired a few rounds, while other mutinied and killed their officers. The police were ill-treated by the crowds and some killed.

Sunday morning Khabatoff issued a notice that all gatherings in the streets would be dispersed by force of arms. The situation became distinctly ugly. The people, still unable to obtain bread had lost faith in the Government. Moreover, the newspapers did not appear Sunday morning. Few people knew what had happened to the Duma. Protopopoff feigning illness, remained in the Ministry of the Interior.

Sunday was the first day of the revolution properly speaking. Several guard regiments whose barracks adjoin the Tauris Palace mutinied, killed the most unpopular of their officers and proclaimed themselves for the people. The Duma was called and a provisional committee of deputies elected. The Government, however, still controlled a large number of troops, but everywhere the friendliest attitude was noticeable between the soldiers and people who continuously cheered them. Trams stopped running and all vehicular traffic ceased.

The Pavlavsky guards fired on crowds in the Nevsky, killing and wounding 100 people, but the same company afterwards mutinied. The Preobrajensky regiment, with its officers went over to the Duma. The police, secreted in garrets and on roofs of public and private edifices and churches, began firing wildly. The deputies, who had assembled at the Duma the previous night remained in the Tauris Palace under the protection of troops. There was no evidence of concerted organization on the part of revolutionaries, military.

Monday was the second decisive day of revolution, nearly all the troops joining in the revolution. Next day witnessed the surrender and capture of all government offices, buildings and palaces.

Monday morning Rodzianko, president of the Duma, who had telegraphed to the Czar the day before, telling him that the situation was desperate, sent him a last appeal to give way to the demands of the people for reform, but the events of the day precluded any hope of salvation. With what happened afterwards you are already familiar.

Amazing Power of Bon-Opto To Make Weak Eyes Strong

Doctor Says It Strengthens Eyesight 50 per cent in One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses, and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes, which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription at home. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start, and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is sold in this city by Warne Drug Co. and Other Druggists.

Suffered With Heart For Ten Years

Would Nearly Smother

There is nothing that brings with it such fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The uncertain and irregular heart action causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, so that it beats strong and regular, and tone up the nervous system so that the cause of so much anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. M. O. McCready, Wapella, Sask., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I feel that it is only right for me to let you know what your wonderful remedy has done for me, and in a very short time, too. I had suffered terribly with my heart for nearly ten years, could scarcely do any work, and would nearly smother at times. I had many remedies, some only relieving me for a time. I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and felt so much better that I kept on using them, and can truthfully say I feel like a new woman.

"I would advise anyone with heart trouble to use them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

POLICE CHIEF KILLED IN BATTLE WITH NEGRO

VANCOUVER, B.C., March 22.—Chief McLennan of the Police Department and a small boy named George Robb were killed, Police Detective John Cameron was seriously wounded, and a negro, Bob Tait, with whom the police were battling Tuesday night, killed himself after being wounded by a bullet fired by police officers, who bombarded the building where he was. In all more than a hundred shots were exchanged between the police and the desperado, who was armed with two rifles, a shotgun and two revolvers.

Detective Cameron is recovering and will not be permanently disabled. He was struck in the face by the first shot fired by Tait.

Frankie Russell, the white woman living with Tait, is held at police headquarters. She may be charged with murder, for the police believe she assisted Tait in firing and reloading.

The city is sincerely mourning Chief McLennan's death. He was only forty-four years of age, and had been advanced to his late position from patrolman.

Tait was well known to the police as a "dope" fiend. The police were called to the house at the corner of Jackson avenue and Harris street by the landlord, whom Tait had assaulted. When Tait saw the police approaching the house he opened fire with a shotgun, the first shot hitting young Rolph, who lived half an hour. Chief of Police McLennan joined the attacking force, and in a rush on the house was brought down, and when the body was recovered it was found his head had been half shot off. Detective Cameron received two wounds in the head, and Constable Johnson was wounded in the face.

At 11 o'clock last night the police rushed the house and gained entrance only to find that Tait was dead, but the woman, Frankie Russell, was uninjured.

SKETCH OF DECEASED CHIEF

The late Chief McLennan was a native of Prince Edward Island, born forty-four years ago on a farm at Montique, where his mother and his brother, Alexander, still live, and where his father died three months ago. He came to Vancouver twenty years ago, and joined the police force in 1991, rose rapidly through all grades by sheer merit, and was made Chief on the death of Chief Mulhern in 1914.

He was a man of huge stature, and generous as he was big. He sympathised always with the under dog; and was a constant advocate of the "second chance." He had been agitating of late for a Government hospital to cure just such drug fiends as the one who shot him. He leaves a wife, who is an invalid, and two sons, aged nine and eleven. Two brothers, John and Alexander, reside in Prince Edward Island; another, Bruce, is with a Prince Edward Island unit at the front. Murdoch is Police Sergeant in Vancouver, David lives in Rossland, and Duncan in New Westminster. Of his three sisters, Mrs. Dr. Garder resides in Vancouver and Mrs. A. S. Hayes and Miss Mary McLennan are in Boston.

When Sir Edward Grey, the great English statesman, suffered a nervous break-down not long ago, the medical specialists who attended him ordered him to ride a bicycle several hours each day for his health. This exercise benefitted him so much, it is declared, that he has continued to use his wheel regularly.

Skirts For Spring To Be Narrower

New Sports Clothes Show Indian Colorings

Voile a Leading Spring Fabric

NEW YORK, March 31.—Whatever the forecasts of spring styles may disagree about, on one point they are more or less agreed, and that is that skirts will be narrower at the hem. There will be no flare whatever, and even if some skirts are not actually narrower they will at least appear so from the absence of the flare. Many skirts, however, are appreciably narrower. They measure from two to two and quarter yards at the lower edge. When we compare these measurements with the three and four-yard skirts that were worn last spring, it leaves no doubt as to the change. From the Parisian openings, which are now being held, we hear that the narrow skirt is no longer a rumour, but a fact.

A NEW WAIST AND SKIRT

Separate skirts and blouses take on quite a good deal of importance this spring. The fact that separate skirts are in demand for sports wear will bring them very much into prominence. There are more skirts of sports silks and satins than of any other skirting materials. The sports silks in one-colour effects, or in two shades with large spots or stripes on a neutral back-ground, seem to be the most popular.

As for the blouses, we may witness a revival of the garden smock, which took so strong a hold a summer or so ago. One of these recently seen was quite different from the smock as we knew it last summer. It was of tango-red crepe, long and loose, and slipped on over the head. It was shirred at the neck and at the shoulders along an oval line, which was emphasized by a piping of yellow crepe trimmed with wool embroidery. The smock hung unbelted over the skirt to the knees, after the manner of most garden smocks. The red and yellow combination in this smock showed the influence of the Indian colorings, one of the new notes in sports clothes.

Indian embroideries on sports coats of heavy cream-coloured silk make very attractive trimmings, and they are also effective on coats of dark blue serge. These embroideries are worked in silks or heavy mercerized cottons in very bright colorings wih a number of colours mixed together. As this is to be a spring and summer of high colours, these embroideries will, in all probability, take very well. Parasols and bags to match the costumes showing such embroideries are also to be had to complete the finishing touches.

VOILE A LEADING FABRIC.

A great deal of voile and muslins will be used this spring. The counters of the stores are already overflowing with voiles of all descriptions; plain, sprigged, figured, striped and checked. Bordered materials, too, will have a place among the fashionable fabrics, whether printed or embroidered and whether of cotton or silk.

Plain voile combined with linen in a matching color has been used in the fashioning of some of the advance spring dresses, and, though unusual, the combination is entirely pleasing.

LA GRIPPE. And now comes the old familiar enemy stirring up old difficulties and creating new troubles. To those who are unprepared no quarter is given, the attack is not without warning, but the slaying is ruthless. The only friends recognized by this ruthless enemy are those that are fortified with absolute faith in their own ability to resist disease, and a positive knowledge of the fact that they live in accordance with the laws of nature, and therefore disease has no chance to get a foothold in their system.

Like other deadly enemies the grip of this season appears to be attacking people in a different way than ever before. First, appears a cold, which suddenly develops a chill followed by very high temperature. In many cases vomiting occurs and with the sore throat scarlet fever is suspected. As a rule a terrific headache is the next symptom, and then pain in the back of the head at the base of the brain. The ears and eyes suffer and many cases of partial or complete deafness in one ear results.

Vigorous and prompt should be the treatment at the first symptoms of cold. A thorough physic should be given but don't wait for it to act. Cleanse the colon of fecal matter by a thorough enema and tepid water, about two quarts, in which has been dissolved a tablespoonful of salt. Follow this with a full warm bath and then put the patient to bed. Keep the room comfortably warm and the patient quiet. Don't allow him to read.

The home remedies indicated are, during the first stages and while the chilly sensations continue, and the temperature is above normal. Nat. Mur. 6x, four tablets alternated every half hour or hour with Ferrum Phos. put up in the same way. After this stage Kali. Mur. and Nat. Sulph. are usually of importance and clear up the mucous surfaces and leave the ears, nose and throat in good health.

More and more physicians are recognising the importance of preventive measures and if the people would join more heartily in helping to prevent disease there would be less suffering.

Constipation is the most important of the predisposing causes of the grip. improper diet and inactivity the cause of constipation; therefore eat right, and exercise, if you want to be free. Next in importance is another thing which the physicians are beginning to recognise of the most vital importance, and that is the mental attitude. Fear kills more people than disease; I include in fear all kinds of worry, anger, hate and tantrums of various kinds. A serene even temper with a heart full and overflowing with love is a powerful shield against disease and enables many to live and work that would long ago have succumbed to disease if they were not so fortified.

DISTRESS GRAVE IN POLAND

Dr. Bernard Kahn of the Joint Distribution Committee for Jewish War Relief Funds, who has just returned from a tour of Germany and the German occupied parts of Poland, has made a report to the committee which, in a statement issued yesterday, says it gives striking confirmation of reports of shortage of food in Germany brought by members of former Ambassador Gerard's party.

"The plight of the civilian population of the Central Empires," the statement says, "is reflected in the increasing scarcity of supplies sent from them to the 'occupied districts' of Poland." Dr. Kahn reports that where hitherto, large quantities of foodstuffs have gone forward for the relief of the population of Poland, this supply is either cut off entirely, or is so diminished in quantity as to be negligible. Furthermore, the prices of such meagre amounts of food, as well as clothing, as can be sent from Germany are so high as to be practically prohibitive as applied to relief work.

"The distress in general is much greater this Winter than formerly, and now that prices have increased immensely, certain articles cannot be bought at all. The want of shoes and clothing especially has brought about a deplorable condition. In the city of Warsaw, as well as in the province of that name, adults are many of them unable to venture on the streets, because of the lack of covering their bodies, and cannot, therefore, avail themselves even of the free soup which is dispensed by the relief kitchens. Hundreds of children are for the same reason prevented from going to school, and are thus deprived not only of instruction and a warm place in which to stay, but also must go without food, as meals are furnished in the school buildings."

Another report just received from the committee that is attempting to aid the Russian Jewish soldiers, who are German prisoners of war, declares that these unfortunates are deprived of all means of receiving help They receive just enough food to keep body and soul together. They cannot communicate in any way with their families, who in many instances have lost their homes.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Judging by the little imported models one would suppose that the "long lines" are as much a feature of the juvenile styles as of the adult fashions. Even the panel front is brought out in children's dresses with the same care and precision that brings mother's dress up to the minute.

The tucked dress—always pretty for toddlers and kindergartners—is extremely popular right now and will continue in favor indefinitely. The frock pictured shows the latest achievements of the designers in this direction. The model is cut in one piece with five tucks in each half of the front and back, turned toward the armhole; this scheme makes for the straight panel front and back. The sleeve may be long or short. Nothing prettier than scalloping could be chosen to finish the collar of contrasting goods and for the cuffs when the long sleeve is preferred. A hem finishes the lower edge and the fastening is at the back.

Linen, gingham, St. Nicholas cloth, also lightweight woollen materials may be selected for a dress for practical wear. Dimity, batiste, silk mull, &c., are better for an afternoon frock. There is really no work connected with copying the design.

The dress pattern, No. 8,155, cuts in sizes 2 to 8 years. Size 4 requires 2 yards of 36 inch material; ⅝ yard contrasting goods.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.
Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Now It's Belleville

"The Beautiful City on the Bay" which comes forward with its burden of testimony for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Astonishing cures of nervous prostration and exhaustion, of weak heart action, nervousness and sleeplessness are being reported. Nearly everybody who feels the need of restorative treatment, is now trying out this great food cure. These letters give you some idea of the splendid results obtained.

Exhausted Nerves

Mrs. Geo. Williams, 8 Centre Street, Belleville, Ont., writes: "About ten years ago I was on the verge of nervous prostration and had not had a good nights' rest for two years. From reading some of the advertising in your pamphlets I was induced to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was very much run down but after taking several boxes I found I could sleep well, and had my nerves under control. Although I am now strong and healthy, I always keep a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the house, and take great pleasure in recommending it to all my friends."

Heart Trouble

Mr. James Richards, 73 Dundas St., Belleville, Ont., writes: "I was suffering from a weakness of the heart, shortness of breath and frequent dizzy spells that used to force me to go and lie down for a time. I secured a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and received such splendid results that I got another box and have it nearly all taken. I am now feeling fine and not troubled with dizziness any more."

Sleeplessness

Mrs. Joseph Champaigne 36 Cedar St., Belleville, Ont., writes: "I suffered for years from nervousness, sleeplessness and weak spells. I had pains through the back, indigestion, and sometimes a buzzing sensation in my ears. I blame hard work and worry for placing me in that condition. I commenced the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and at the end of two weeks I noticed a difference. I continued the treatment and found that they cured sleeplessness, soothed my nerves and eased the neuralgic pains. I am going to keep on taking them, because they have been of such benefit to me."

Baby Took Convulsions

Mrs. Capt. Smith, 99 John St., South Belleville, Ont., writes: "From the age of one month my little son used to take convulsions, and would sometimes have as many as three or four convulsions, but they could give us no hope of the boy's complete recovery. I saw in the newspapers that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food had helped many growing children who were effected with nervousness so I commenced using it with him. From the time I started giving him the Nerve Food Croft has had only two convulsions and it is now six years since he has had any trouble at all. He has been going to school for three years, and is growing quite strong. I would most highly recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to all people having children affected as was my son."

Paralysis

Mrs. C. Sinfield 236 Moire W., Belleville, Ont., writes: "About fifteen years ago I was suffering from paralysis, and through the advice of a friend I was induced to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I took a treatment, and found my condition greatly improved. I found that they also benefited me greatly for sleeplessness and nervousness. Now any time I am run down or not feeling 'up to the mark' I use some Nerve Food, and have recommended it to many of my friends. Many people, hearing of the benefit I have received from it, come to me to make inquiries, and I always cheerfully recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

Nervousness-Result of Accident

Mr. Louisa Bell, South John St., Belleville, writes: "I had a compound fracture of the thigh, and spent over nine weeks in the hospital so that when I came home I was in a very nervous state. Having read of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the newspapers, I secured a box and took it. It helped me greatly, so I got another and have derived great benefit from the treatment — am now able to get around and do my work. I would recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to all people suffering from nervousness."

Run Down System

Mrs. J. Frawley, 100 Cedar St., Belleville, Ont., writes: "About five years ago, while living in Cheboygan, Michigan, I was just recovering from an attack of diphtheria, and found myself terribly run down and suffering from nervousness. After reading the advertisements, and knowing that it was greatly used in Cheboygan, I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I took a treatment, and soon found myself stronger and sleeping better. I have not used any since, but can cheerfully recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to all suffering from nervousness and run-down system."

Now Sleeps Well

Mrs. G. W. Bennett, 182½ Front St., Belleville, Ont., writes: "Six years ago, I was suffering so badly from nervousness and general run-down system that I would have to get up at night and walk around the room. I was advised by my sister to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I decided to give them a trial. After taking four and a half boxes I found myself greatly improved and sleeping well at night. Since then, if occasionally I do not feel just up to the mark, I use a few pills, giving me good results. I am pleased to recommend the treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to all suffering from nervousness and run-down system."

DESTRUCTION CLOSING ON FOE

NO MORE LITTLE VICTIMS.

But the supply of Roumanias, Serbias, Montenegros, and Belgiums was exhausted, and Germany saw all around her the real adversaries, growling continually, now stronger than she was. The winter gave her a respite, because of the weather, but she knew that when the spring opened her armies must give way. She knew that the Turks could not resist the Russians and the British; she knew that she must give up her foremost line in France, if no more; she undoubtedly knew that her allies in Petrograd would not last much longer, and that when their grip was taken off the arms of Brusiloff, Nicholas, and Russky she would have to meet real war from Russia.

So she made one last effort to win victory from defeat. She proposed peace, to be arranged in secret around a council table at which the shrewdest manipulator would come off best, as has so often happened at such councils. "In agreement with the sovereigns of my allies, and with the consciousness of victory," announced the Kaiser grandly, "I have made an offer of peace to the enemy." "Our aims are not to shatter or annihilate our adversaries," said the Chancellor in the same tone.

The allies refused to be drawn into the trap. They announced their peace terms openly. It was a complete discomfiture for the German plan; gone was all hope of wresting a victor's terms from coming defeat by backstairs intrigue while a council was going on. That was the only kind of peace that could be a victorious peace for Germany. In the event of such a failure as had now come, Germany had a second plan ready; to cut loose from the restrictions of civilization and declare a war on the world, in the hope that by starving England she could halt the allies' military operations before the spring was far advanced.

DEFEAT FOR TURKS CERTAIN.

She has not yet starved England, and her submarine war is becoming less terrible as it goes on, though still terrible enough. Meanwhile, the military operations she hoped to check have been begun ahead of time. The events she foresaw when she adopted her double-headed plan of a peace offer and a war on the world are coming to pass. The British have Bagdad and are pursuing the demoralized Turks into the jaws of Nicholas' army, which is coming swiftly on from Persia without serious opposition and driving another Turkish army before it. Defeat for the Turks is certain; the only question is whether it will involve capture as well. In the west the Germans have already retired to the Aisne, giving up before the spring drive is commenced more than Joffre and Haig aimed at in their last campaign. On the 1,800-mile Russian front the weather still holds the armies bound; but the commanders of those armies are Brusiloff, no longer with the fear of a traitor in his rear to hamper him, and Russky whose answer to the Duma's announcement of the success of the revolution was, "Commission executed." That commission was to take the Czar in custody and invite him to abdicate.

The events which Germany foresaw in December, the events which prompted her haughty but anxious offer of peace, and her desperate swing loose from the bonds of civilization on the sea, are moving more swiftly even that her statesmen expected.

OTTAWA

To Exempt Standard Hotels Until The End of 1919

Government Amendments to the O. T. A. Includes One on Business Assessment—Express Companies to Exhibit Books—Indian List for Protection of Those Addicted to Excessive Use of Liquor.

DELIVERIES IN ONTARIO

TORONTO, March 24.—Hon. W. D. McPherson, Provincial Secretary, brought down in the Legislature yesterday afternoon proposed amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act. He declared they in no manner affected the principles of the Act, but mostly concerned its operation. The most important is to extend the exemption from business assessment until the end of 1919 to all holders of standard hotel licenses.

TO SEE EXPRESS BOOKS.

Express companies will be required to permit officers of the License Board to examine their books with the view of ascertaining to whom shipments of liquor are consigned, but the information thus obtained will be used to no other purpose than to assist the board in the enforcement of the Act. There will be incorporated in the Act an Indian list for protection of those addicted to the excessive use of liquor.

DELIVERIES IN ONTARIO.

Mr. Rowell asked if the Government had considered the question of deliveries in Ontario, and if any action was contemplated on that point. Premier Hearst replied that no change in the legislation was contemplated.

Mr. Rowell: "Have you considered the question of soliciting orders for liquor in Ontario?"

Sir William Hearst: "It is under consideration."

Mr. Rowell: "May we expect some legislation dealing with it before the House adjourns?"

The Premier: "I would not say so."

G. C. Hurdman, East Ottawa, inquired if there was any legislation proposed to restrict the sale of malt liquor to standard hotels.

The Premier: "It is receiving consideration."

Hartley Dewart: "Do the amendments provide for the abolition of the Ontario License Board?"

Sir William: "No."

Hon. Finlay MacDiarmid assured Mr. Mageau, Sturgeon Falls, that no licenses would be issued to fish in Lake Nipissing during the present year. In consequence, Mr. Mageau withdrew his motion for a return of copies of correspondence in the matter.

Mr. Gooderham introduced an act in behalf of the city of Toronto to amend the Assessment Act to make the decision of county judge final in assessment appeals.

Hon. I. B. Lucas said the bill was in his judgment, wrong in principle and asked Mr. Gooderham to withdraw it. To this Mr. Gooderham consented.

CATTLE MARKETS.

The moderate supplies of all classes of live stock on the market last Monday set the pace for the rest of the week. Receipts day after day were of a gradually diminishing order, while prices were increasingly firm with a steadily higher tendency. The advances for the week on the best classes of cattle were from 35c to 45c over the previous week. A few lots of extra fancy Easter cattle were, of course, in a class by themselves, selling at top record prices.

Choice heavy bulls and fat cows were in very good demand at slightly enhanced prices, while the medium and common held about steady.

Stockers and feeders continue in good demand at high prices.

Choice milkers and springers in good demand.

The hog situation steadily stiffened during the week, with light receipts. Closing prices were again up to previous top level.

CATTLE RECEIPTS.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts for the week—331 cars, 2,718 cattle, 908 calves, 8,423 hogs, 153 sheep and lambs, and 782 horses.

City Cattle Market—42 cars, with 640 cattle, 137 sheep and lambs, 277 hogs, 58 calves, and 75 horses.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The HOWLAND ESTATE

How the Owner Acquired a Piece of Property Needed to Complete It

By F. A. MITCHEL

The shortest day in the year had been passed, and the sun started on her northward journey. Winslow Howland had come into the enormous fortune that had been accumulating for him for years, and he was laying his plans for his future. He took no thought as to a career. His mind was bent upon how he should enjoy life. His city residence was an accomplished fact. His father had made it as elaborate and beautiful and luxurious as could be desired. But no country place had been prepared for him, and this was the problem that occupied his mind when the sun started back to warm the earth and bring forth a new season.

For two months Howland devoted himself to the house he would build in the country. Then in the early spring he started on a tour to find a location. He preferred his country place should be within a short distance of his city home. There was one district and one alone to the northwest where a succession of hills formed beautiful views. Howland looked over this region and selected an eminence on which he decided to build his house.

He did not own this site nor any of the surrounding acres which he intended should form his estate. He was so rich that he believed he could buy any property he wished. But he had enough business sense to realize that it would be unwise to let the owners know of his intention. While he was ready to pay any price he did not care to pay three or four times the intrinsic value of the property purchased.

Howland determined to buy up the land he wanted himself, not that he wished to save the expense of having it done by an agent, but he thought the diplomacy required would interest him. He would not enter the field as the multimillionaire Howland, but as an unknown person of limited means. He managed the matter very well. He first bought a few acres at the base of the eminence on which he would build, through which ran a brook, and gave out that he intended to dam the stream for water power to run a glue factory. This enabled him to purchase the site above at a fair price, for a glue factory has not an agreeable odor and the value of the hill would be greatly reduced.

Having made this beginning, Howland, who by this time had come to be known as Mr. Jernegan and wore the plain clothes of a small manufacturer, met with excellent success in picking up all the different properties that he wished, except a few acres which would lie within the very heart of his estate. He was irritated to learn that this bit of ground had changed hands since he began to make his purchases. The owner, a small farmer, had sold his land for double its value to some one living in the city. An examination of the county records revealed the fact that the purchaser was one Samuel Jones. Howland at once started an employee on a hunt for Mr. Jones and for information as to what he intended to do with the land, if he would sell and, if so, at what price.

The person employed to obtain this information reported that he had been unable to find Mr. Jones, and he had heard that the actual owner of the property was a woman, who intended to use it for some kind of agricultural purposes. Howland directed his emissary to learn the name and residence of this person but after a long search he had not succeeded.

Howland, not doubting that in time he would be able to buy the only property he needed to complete his estate, was on his hilltop one morning directing the marking out the lines of foundation for his residence when he saw wagons carrying building material on to the tract he did not own. This troubled him. Any building put up on the property he would eventually have to pay for. He went to where the unloading was going on and asked questions, but no one there seemed to know what was intended.

During the next three or four months Howland was obliged to look upon a line of glass and iron buildings erected on the property he desired. Every effort to learn who was the owner of the land and was erecting the buildings failed. When the glass houses neared completion the erection of a very pretty bungalow was begun on a site near them, a site which Howland had intended for a purpose of his own. There was also every evidence that the grounds would be laid out in landscape gardening fashion, and the whole, instead of being an eyesore, would be a thing of beauty.

This fact instead of satisfying Howland only irritated him. When the plant was completed he was informed that a woman had moved into the bungalow.

Howland at once sent a person to have a look at the newcomer, find out what he could about her and report. The spy on his return said that the owner of the plant was a graduate of an agricultural college and was preparing to enter upon the cultivation of roses. The lady was about twenty-two years old.

Howland, still deeming it unwise to treat with the party direct, sent for a friend, George Winslow, who had made agriculture a profession, and commissioned him to buy the rose plant ostensibly for himself. Winslow was told to endeavor to persuade the owner to put a price on the property, which he was to agree to pay, no matter how much the amount.

Winslow visited the bungalow and was told that Miss Edgerton, the rose cultivator, was in the office of the conservatory. He went there and found a very different person from what he had expected. He supposed he would see a young woman of plain exterior, serious, businesslike, and whose costume would be suitable for her work. Miss Edgerton was a very pretty woman, dressed in excellent taste and in fashion. Her assistants, who were all of her own sex, were the only indication that the owner was of the new woman order. She received Mr. Winslow with an engaging smile and listened to an introduction to his subject, which was an account of his preparation for the agricultural profession and his having settled upon the branch of rose culture. From this he explained that he desired to purchase a plant ready for production and ended by suggesting that he would like to buy hers.

Miss Edgerton listened to what he had to say, then told him of her own ambition, adding that her property was not for sale. An effort to get her to put a price on it was not successful.

There was nothing left for Howland to do but tackle the lioness in her den himself. Upon Winslow's report of her personality he resolved first to attempt to win her favor, then adopt such a plan as might seem best to buy her property. As to concealing his identity as a multimillionaire, this was now beyond hope.

Howland had by this time got into his country home. He sent her some strawberries from his garden—great, luscious fellows—with a note of welcome to his new neighbor. He received a note of thanks in return and an invitation to call. The call was made in due time, and the visitor devoted himself to pleasing the hostess. He said not a word about buying her plant. On the contrary, he expressed his satisfaction at having so attractive a property near him. He left with the belief that he had made a very agreeable impression.

It was not in Mr. Howland's plan to lead Miss Edgerton to believe that she had made a conquest of him. This would rather hinder than facilitate his purchase of her property. He wished merely to secure her good will, hoping that she would accept two or three times its value, or that he might place her in a position of standing in the way of a friend. While he lavished upon her every favor she would accept, he neither looked, spoke nor hinted love. His aim was merely to play the good neighbor.

When he had fully established a kindly entente he one day told her that he wondered that she had not selected a site for her rose plant where she would have had better facilities for transporting her goods to market. To this she expressed herself well satisfied where she was. Later he informed her that he owned a splendid site for her plant nearer the city and on a railroad by which she could ship her goods. If she wanted it he would exchange it for her property, build new conservatories for her and give her triple the value of her present property to boot.

She appeared to take the matter into consideration. But she never came to a decision—at any rate, no decision that she revealed to the would be purchaser of her property.

Disappointed in this move, Howland resolved to try what virtue there would be in lovemaking. He would try to win the property through the heart. If he must wound the heart he would heal the wound with gold, for he had no doubt that if there was enough gold bestowed any such breach would be stopped by it. But Howland had been so beset by women to marry him for his fortune that his ideas on this point had been somewhat warped.

So he began by first looking a little love, then acting a little love and finally speaking a little love. A beginning having been made, he doubled the quantities. Miss Edgerton received his attentions coyly. She was always a trifle behind him in this lovemaking. Nevertheless the affair developed.

Then one day Miss Edgerton told Howland that she was thinking of taking a partner in her business. Howland took fright at once, and when a swell from the city came to the rose factory and hobnobbed with the owner Howland discovered that the factory had become of small importance to him in comparison with the owner. The moment the swell departed Howland went to Miss Edgerton and told her that if she would not marry him he would commit suicide.

That's the end of my story. The two were married, the conservatories were taken down, and the land on which they stood was made a part of Howland park. But there is an explanation as to how all this came about.

Miss Edgerton was one of those brilliant women who from modest beginnings climb to the top of the social ladder. Getting wind of Howland's plan for a large country estate, she bought in the name of another a bit of property he must have. She had never studied agriculture and knew nothing about it. Her object from the first was to marry the immense fortune owned by Howland. How she succeeded has been told in the body of the story. She is now one of the principal leaders of the fashionable world.

Howland was satisfied with the way the matter turned out. Having no fortune to make, he lived for comfort and social prominence. For this his wife was well fitted.

A military journal relates the story of a Highlander who, on being shown over a man-o'-war for the first time in his life, was keenly interested in all he saw. The marines seemed particularly to impress him, and going up to one, he pointed to the badge on the marine's cap and asked him what it was. The marine, anxious to score off the visitor, looked at him in surprise. "Don't you know what it is?" he asked. "Why that's a turnip, of course."

"Man" replied the Scot impatiently, "I was no' askin' about yer heid."—The Referee.

Good for the whole family

A good cough remedy is one that can be depended upon to cure coughs. Not one that cures some particular cough, but coughs in general.

While the causes of all coughs are primarily the same, yet the condition of the patient is what makes the difference in the nature of the cough itself. Coughs of healthy persons are easier to cure than the coughs of invalids. The more powerful convulsive cough of a big man is harder to cure than the cough of a baby. If you get a remedy that will cure a big man's cough and yet not be too powerful for the baby, you have a good cough remedy.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

"Granny" Chamberlain is just this kind of remedy. It is good for any member of the family. It relieves coughs of all kinds. It is composed of things which cure easily and soothingly without harming the delicate tissues of the throat, and is the ideal remedy for coughs, colds, croup, influenza and whooping cough.

Yours for Health.—Granny Chamberlain

Blinkers was not a beauty either in face or figure. All his pals wondered, therefore, what he would appear as at the Funnyboys' fancy dress ball. The night arrived. Hamlet leaned sadly against a wall while William the Conquerer threw bitter glances at a crowd at the other end of the room.

"What ho, Bill!" cried Oliver Cromwell, arriving late; "feeling seedy, old man?"

"We all are," growled Bill the First; "Blinkers has done us in the eye after all."

A Vegetable Garden for Every Home. Methods of Preparing the Soil for Spring Planting

Coming face to face with a Situation that Necessitates increased Production.

At no time in many years has the necessity and importance of the home vegetable garden been so clearly demonstrated as this year. Our country is face to face with a situation which necessitates the increasing of our food supplies by every means at our command. Vegetables as well as other foodstuffs must be given careful consideration as they form an important part in the every day diet of most individuals. Every city and town dweller has the opportunity to help in this great work, in that there are hundreds of available plots now practically unproductive which could grow vegetables. To be able to secure fresh crisp vegetables should in itself be reason enough to make us help along this movement, but in addition the saving makes it of the greatest importance.

Vegetables should form a more important position in the daily food of the average human being for they possess qualities which should ensure their use in much larger quantities than is the custom at the present time. In these days of stress when the energies of all people are being devoted to further the cause of justice and right, the securing of a supply of vegetables should commend itself to the average householder in our towns and cities. A more instructive pursuit than growing vegetables in the backyard cannot be found, for by commencing with a small plot devoted to their culture a wonderful lesson unfolds itself before our eyes as we watch the vagaries of nature in her work, and a broader and more intelligent view of the simple phases of life appear before us.

SOIL PREPARATION.

City dwellers are not all born vegetable growers and many of the failures in the backyard garden are due to a lack of knowledge as to how to prepare the soil for seeding. The first few bright days in the spring usually drive most people into their gardens and digging the soil is commenced. Oftentimes the digging is done too soon. If after the soil has been turned a handful crumbles readily digging time has arrived. If however the pressure of the hand leaves the soil in a compact sodden mass which will not crumble, digging should be delayed.

When the soil is in good condition for digging a spade or a digging fork may be used. Push either into the soil to its full depth, usually 8 or 12 inches. Lift and turn the soil over so that the soil which comes from the bottom is placed on the top. Dig one row about 8 inches wide the full width of the garden, then place the second 8 inches of undug soil on top of the first. This will leave quite a trench in which manure either well rotted or fresh should be placed. This should be tramped in lightly and two more rows of soil deposited on it. By following this method from 4 to 6 inches of manure may be placed ready for the plants to use. Manure may be secured from livery stables or from firms who deliver it for a small sum. The next operation will be that of the raking. Considerable care must be taken in order that all the lumps are broken up and that a level surface is left to be planted. It is never advisable to dig more of the garden than can be raked the same day. With an ordinary garden rake go over the soil roughly, either breaking up the lumps or dragging them into a furrow or to one side of the garden. By following this with a further raking, which should thoroughly fine the soil, fill in any hollow spots and remove any remaining lumps, the garden should be ready for seed planting.

SOWING OF SEED.

To sow a row of seed quickly, evenly and thinly requires care and practice. The top of the seed packet may be torn off, the packet held between the thumb and forefinger. By gently swaying the packet from one side to another the seeds will drop out. Another method of seeding is to place the seed in a tin dish and gather as many seeds as possible between the thumb and the forefinger. A gentle rubbing motion of the thumb on the forefinger releases a few seeds at a time. Coarse seeds may be placed individually with the fingers. After the garden or the portion that is made ready by raking for planting, a piece of board or a line may be used to make straight even rows. A shallow trench the required depth may be made by using a sharpened piece of lath or even a lead pencil. This should be drawn back and forth close to the line or board until the trench is deep enough. This trench should not be too deep. A good general rule which applies in many cases is to cover the seeds with no more than a quarter of an inch of soil. After the seeds have been dropped, they should be covered with soil of the required thickness and the soil over the row firmed with the foot, a piece of board or the back of the spade.

THINNING.

The backyard gardener must not attempt to grow immense quantities of vegetables from a small plot. Plants require a fair amount of breathing space just as human beings do. As it is almost impossible to plant all seeds thinly enough to secure a good crop more seeds are planted than plants are required, and when the tender seedlings come through the soil it is necessary to thin out some so that the remaining ones will have sufficient space to grow in. In every row of seedlings there are some plants which from the beginning show by their sturdy growth that they are healthier and more vigorous than others. Wherever possible leave these larger seedlings. When the seedlings are large enough to be handled nicely they should be thinned to the proper distance and this is accomplished by simply pulling the superfluous ones out and throwing them away. Thinning should not be left until the plants are becoming long and slender but rather should be practised when the plants are about one-half to an inch in height.

CULTIVATION.

Cultivation should be carried on persistently to kill the weeds and to allow air into the soil, and to keep the surface of the soil in a somewhat rough condition rather than in a solid firm state, as the latter condition allows the evaporation of water from the soil, which is needed by the plant.

The most efficient and handy tool for cultivation is the common hoe. A wide and a narrow bladed hoe will be found the best. The hoeing in the vegetable garden should commence before the vegetables are through the soil. If the rows have been carefully marked the hoe may be used between the rows and many of the weeds destroyed. After the seedlings are through the soil the hoe should be kept in use as much as possible. All the soil between the rows should be stirred at least twice a week and oftener if possible. Never allow a flat smooth surface to be found in the garden. Always stir the soil gently after each watering. The hoe should be held in a slanting position, and the soil cultivated close to the young vegetables, and as the crop becomes more advanced the soil between the rows should be cultivated so that there will be no danger of destroying the young roots. During the summer months the rake may be used for pulverizing the soil between the rows. Too much careful cultivation cannot be given the tender vegetable crops in a backyard garden.

WATERING.

It is possible to water vegetable crops over abundantly. Some soils and some crops require more watering than others so that great care must be used in applying water in the backyard garden. It is not good gardening when one has city water to deluge the garden each evening. If the plants do survive such treatment the resulting crop will be slender and sappy, having very few excellent qualities. As a general rule, the refreshing spring rains supply plenty of moisture in the soil. During the summer months, however, it will be found that an additional supply of moisture will be needed.' This may be applied with a garden hose or a watering can and should be applied from 4 to 8 p.m. It is not good practice to water a city garden in the heat of the sun. Water in any case should be applied in as fine a spray as it is possible to obtain and it must be applied gently. Force will wash out the seeds, flatten the soil, expose the roots to the sun's rays and thus cause wilting or dying of the plant. By watering carefully twice a week sufficient moisture will be obtained to keep the plants growing vigorously. These waterings must, however, be followed with an immediate stirring of the soil and aided by cultivation between the waterings. In any case it is necessary to stir the soil after each rain or watering in order to conserve the moisture. As the season advances waterings may be partially or totally dispensed with.

TRANSPLANTING.

The city dweller will find it a good practice to buy plants of many of the sorts of vegetables and transplant them into the garden. The growing of one's own plants affords considerable pleasure, but it is accompanied by the fact that considerable care and attention must be given. Strong, sturdy plants only should be purchased, not slender unhealthy looking plants. The plants before being transplanted should be watered heavily so that the soil around the roots will become almost muddy. The garden hoe may be used for making the holes for setting these plants out or else a sharpened stick may be used. The hole should be made sufficiently deep to accommodate all the roots and part of the stem up to the first leaf. Do not set the plants too deep or too shallow. The plant should be set perfectly upright and the loose earth brought in around the roots and thoroughly firmed there. Care should always be taken that the hole made is not too deep so that when the roots are set there will be a hole in the earth just below them.

Cabbage, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, celery and tomatoes should be purchased, rather than grown from the start in an amateur garden. When buying plants always make sure that there is plenty of soil in the box and that there is a large root system.

NEW YORK PREPARES FOR THE WORST - SOLVING GERMAN TRACTION PROBLEMS

Cardinal Logue, the venerable Irish prelate, is host to the officers of the Rangers. Colonel Donoghue is behind the Cardinal. This picture reached America coincident with the published estimate by Mr. Redmond that there are 500,000 Irish serving in the British army, but a small percentage of whom are in exclusively Irish regiments.

"A Thousand Went in—and a Few Returned"—That's the Story of the Princess Pats

IT is a long step back to the days of August, 1914, when Britain called on Canada for men, when the Dominion, eager to give its best, formed that regiment of war veterans which went forth under the banner of the Princess Patricia, a standard worked by the hands of a princess of the blood and presented on a bright autumnal day on Parliament Hill, at Ottawa, to 1,100 of the finest men who ever went forth to battle. In that time events of world-wide import have transpired. Kings and princes have come and gone, kingdoms have been trampled under foot, blood has been poured out like water on the fields of Europe, but, amid all the carnage, the devastation and debris of the world's horror, there stands out in letters of flame the name of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

Of this gallant little band of men, of its short but glorious career, Canadians have but little to learn. All the world knows how these 1,100 Canadians, veterans all of former wars, responded to the Empire's first call; how they were equipped and sent out at the expense of Major Hamilton Gault, the Montreal millionaire, one of whose legs is over there where the P. P. C. L. I. fought one of their famous fights; how, in the early part of January, 1915, they took the field, the first Canadians to be so honored: how they fought side by side with the seasoned warriors of France and England until that terrible May Day at St. Eloi, when they made their last glorious stand, and how the pitiful remnant fought on unceasingly until at last, the stalwarts of the original unit being beneath the sod or in hospital, the second call was sent out for university men to carry on the name of the Princess' Immortals.

As long as time lasts the glory of the brave boys of the P. P. C. L. I. will endure. Long after the Kaiser has been beaten, for centuries after civilization has triumphed, will be told how Col. "Fanny" Farquhar, the regiment's first commander, fell, and how his successor, the gallant Buller, died on the parapet waving his cane and cheerfully shouting to his men to press on. For centuries, too, coming generations will be told how Major Stanley Jones, wounded on four occasions, stuck to it until he fell; how little Lance Corporal "Danny" Gardiner, a humble elevator boy, remained by his machine gun at St. Eloi until stricken with wounds from which he never recovered, how Lieut. Hugh Niven, a London man now holding rank as Colonel, won the Military Cross and the D.S.O., and how the intrepid young Papineau, descendant of a man who once rebelled in Canada against the British Crown, was the first to leap into the captured Teuton trenches in the salient where so many of the "Pats" went out.

Books could, and will, be written of the self-sacrificing heroism of the men who made up the unit, but very, very few of the heroes will ever read the historian's tribute. Less than a platoon, perhaps, to-day survives, and of the many whom Toronto cheered away there are at the present time only five back in Toronto: Sergt.-Major Branhall and Ptes. "Jack" Munro, R. Wilkinson, E. W. Stevens and R. Codrisco. It might also be said that there are six, for when "Jack" Munro returned to Canada he had as his companion the collie dog which went into the trenches with the originals as mascot, and lived through bloody months to see a thousand of the Dominion's best shot down.

The above picture, which was taken in Toronto in May, 1914, already has historic interest. It was on the occasion of a garden party given by Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught on the grounds of "Craigleigh," Sir Edmund Osler's home in Rosedale, where their Royal Highnesses were staying at the time. This was before the war, and the function was to have been in the nature of a farewell to the Duke and Duchess. Their Royal Highnesses had anticipated returning that year to England. The war changed their plans, while every one of the aides-de-camp left almost for immediate service. Three of them have paid the supreme sacrifice. Reading from left to right they are (standing): Capt. H. C. Buller, Rifle Brigade, afterwards Lieut.-Col. (D.S.O.) commanding Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, killed in action; Capt. the Hon. G. E. Boscawen, Royal Field Artillery; Mr. Arthur F. Sladden, C.V.O., C.M.G.; Capt. Rivers Bulkeley, C.M.G., killed in action with the Scots Guards; Colonel Sir Edward Worthington, C.M.G., M.V.C.; Hon. Katerine Villiers, Lady-in-waiting to Her Royal Highness Princess Patricia; Her Royal Highness Princess Patricia; H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G.; Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught, who died March 14, 1917, in England of pneumonia; Miss Dorothy Yorke, Lady-in-waiting to H.R.H. the Duchess of Connaught; Lieut.-Col. F. D. Farquhar, D.S.O., commanding Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, killed in action.

BABY TOOK CONVULSIONS.

Toronto, Aug. 16th, 1913.

To whom it may concern: This is to certify that we have used Prof. Mulveney's World Famous Tape Worm Cure with most gratifying results. My baby, two years old, took convulsions, and we discovered she had tape worm. I lost no time in going to Prof. Mulveney to get his cure, which we got and used, and I am pleased to say baby was relieved of a monster tape worm, about 10 feet long, the head and all, in about two hours, without causing her to be sick, and without previous fasting. I have great reason to be thankful, as we realize this remedy has saved baby's life. I am giving Prof. Mulveney ther picture, taken a week after being relieved of this monster, which he will be able to show you. Von Hindenburg To Abandon German Positions At La Fere

Keystone of Famous Hindenburg Line is Under Water and Geveral Nivelle's Forces Hold the High Ground in Vicinity---Heavy Guns Are Being Brought Up---French Positions North of Soissons Are Greatly Improved, the French Official Communique States.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (Special Cable), March 24.—Von Hindenburg has already abandoned LaFere, or will evacuate it within the next few hours. This is the opinion here to-day as despatches come from the front line. With the keystone position of the famous Hindenburg line under water, it is hard to see how the Germans can make a determined stand there. In addition to this General Nivelle's forces are in possession of the high ground in the vicinity, and is fast bringing up his heavy guns.

With these in position, LaFere would be untenable.

LaFere sits in the Oise Valley, skirted by the river and canal, and consequently lends itself to the flooding methods adopted by the Germans.

PARIS (French Official Communique), March 24.—French forces continued their advance to-day. The official statement reported "great improvement of French positions north of Soissons," and progress elsewhere as well as the repulse of German raids.

The improvement of French positions around Soissons was made during the night. French forces progressing "east of the Canal of St. Quentin and on the west bank of the Oise, north of LaFere," the War Office said.

Gains were also made the statement said on the east bank of the Ailette.

A number of German raids near Rheims and around Verdun were repulsed.

PETROGRAD, March 24. — New Russia is likely to bear the name "The United States of Russia," if the temper of the people in Petrograd is an index. At least the form of government will be republican. Whether the unmistakeable feeling on this point noticeable to-day in the capital is shared throughout the country is yet difficult to tell.

PETROGRAD, March 24. — Under enemy pressure we retired two-thirds of a mile between the Rivers Sulcha and Chvanich, declared to-day's official statement.

GUARD AGAINST SPIES.

PETROGRAD, March 24.—Solemn warning to all Russian people to guard against spies was made in a proclamation issued to-day by Minister of War Gutchkoff.

"Soldiers and citizens beware of great danger" is read. "Do not mistake police engaged in counter espionage for the old regime's secret police. Be prudent. Sentinels, be vigilant."

AMSTERDAM, March 24.—The Socialist Member Kunert was the accuser of the Kaiser and his Chief Minister. He arose and characterized them as "originators of the war."

The President of the Reichstag immediately called Kunert to order. Kunert resumed more moderately, but finally alluded unmistakeably to Russia's recent revolution.

"You insult the Fatherland," interjected Vice-Chancellor Helfferich, according to the Berlin information.

PETROGRAD, March 24.—"To-day Russia is no longer a dead weight in the coalition of the Entente Allies," declared Foreign Minister Millukoff, in the press, expressing gratification over the formal recognition accorded the new Russian Government.

"Henceforth all rumours of a separate peace with Germany vanish completely. It would be anti-national for a freed Russia to come to an understanding with reactionary Germany."

(By Robert J. Bender, United Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, March 24.—With characteristic American business instinct, the Administration to-day was busily building up its "war corporation" to turn out a finished product designed to match the best in the world.

The Council of National Defense met here to-day to discuss the practical handling of the measures of war discussed yesterday in the Cabinet meeting. Its experts will constitute the Government's advisory body just as soon as war is announced by Congress.

In the meantime the Administration is sounding a warning to the people of the nation that preparations must be made for the possibility of a long and bitter war. It is part of "a preparedness programme," of the Administration to "prepare" the people to a full realization of what sacrifices they must be ready to make; to displace a careless optimism with a studious knowledge of what is ahead.

Part of this preparation is in advance of the demands which will be made shortly by the Government for men, money, labour and materials on a scale unprecedented in the nation's history. The Administration proposes no half-way measures if it can be avoided.

One thing the Council of National Defense propose to guard against—and that is extortionate war profits by industries affected. The Government will undoubtedly take some special taxing system to cut down any enormous surpluses. However, American business has thus far shown that it is patriotic rather than greedy.

ALD. DOBBIN'S IDEA COLDLY RECEIVED BY THE COUNCIL

Suggested That Effort Be Made to Obtain Expression, If Any, From Opponents to Certain Deputations

WOULD ASSURE COUNCIL

That the Council might be clearly guided in future when deputations ask for grants financial or otherwise within the gift of the Council Ald. Dobbin suggested last night that persons opposing these petitions be invited to express their objections. At present a deputation presents its case and the Council might assume that these citizens represent the opinion of all or a majority of the citizens. The aldermen have no way of discovering whatever opposition there may be and may assume that this silence denotes complete assent. Ald. Dobbin proposed that hereafter deputations be heard, but that no immediate decision be arrived at, but that citizens who may differ with the deputation be invited to come before the Council and state their case. If, then, they do not appear, the Council may conclude that the particular request has the support of the entire city.

The present procedure Ald. Dobbin regarded as dangerous and insidious. If one deputation succeeds in its efforts by force of numbers and argument by holding up the aldermen and writing them personal letters, they will simply advise other bodies to go and do likewise. His suggestion would not apply to requests for patriotic purposes or similar movements, but for more general demands that are made on the Council from time to time.

Ald. Saunders— That's a good suggestion. If we followed that last night we would have no free market.

Ald. Dobbin moved that the Council approve of his suggestion, but none of the aldermen would second his motion.

Ald. Stratton stated that it would tie the hands of the Council. The Council, he said, did not pay any attention to the force of a deputation. With them it was only a question of the welfare of the city.

Mayor Duffus—Ald. Dobbin simply asks us to approve of the idea of obtaining the expression of opposition, if there should be any.

Ald. Stratton said he approved of hearing the opposition.

Aldermen Smith, Duncan and McIntyre failed to see any merit in the suggestion.

"I have every confidence in myself and the Council," was Ald. McIntyre's unblushing assertion.

Without a seconder the motion lapsed.

CALL OF THE EMPIRE FOR MORE PRODUCTION

The following wire has been received by The Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., March 23.—The call of the Empire for more food is urgent, but the Ontario farmer cannot respond unless labour is available for seeding which commences early in April. Immediate action is imperative if assistance is to be given. Will your patriotic committee kindly call an emergency meeting and ascertain whether retired farmers and others in your community are willing to help. Co-operation with boards of trade and other organizations interested is advisable. Your editorial co-operation would be gratefully appreciated.

A SERVICE IN MEMORY OF PTE. FRED WICKER OF 93rd BATTALION

Memorial Service Will Be Held in Mark Street Methodist Church To-morrow Night---More Peterboro' Soldiers Return to the City From Overseas---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

At the Mark street Methodist church to-morrow, Sunday evening, there will be a service to the memory of Pte. Fred Wicker, late of the 93rd Battalion, who was killed in action in France. Major O'Flynn of the 247th Battalion, and Rev. Mr. Whattam, pastor of Mark street church, will give addresses. A number of officers and men of the 247th Battalion will attend.

The Peterborough boys who were overseas with the 2nd Battalion will be interested in the following, from the Cobourg World:

Many men have returned to Canada since the first gallant few left us in 1914 to loyally take their part in the world's war, and sacrifice their all if needs be in the cause of liberty and justice. They are all heroes, no matter of what rank, position, or station in life, in the eyes of the people at home for did not they enlist to fight for us and protect our homes. But never did a hero return fro the bmattlefield who was more gladly and unanimously acclaimed than Pte. Jas. Beatty. It is quite true that Jim stole a march on us. He stole in not like the thief in the night for he arrived on the flyer on Wednesday afernoon in broad daylight, but still he stole in unheralded and unexpected. Why, if this town had known that Jim was coming there would not have been a man, woman, child ort baby that would not if possible have been at the depot to welcome him. The band would have been there, too, and all honour possible would have been shown Pte. Beatty. But Jim did not let us know; he was too modest. However, the news flew like wildfire that Pte. Beatty was here and at the British Hotel, and that afternoon he certainly had a reception of which any statesman might well be proud. We are quite certain that Pte. Beatty's good right arm must have ached before he had given the last handshake Wednesday night, and possibly ached worse last night, for greetings were in order all day yesterday.

At the Princess rink, in London, England, there will be staged a game within the next few days that would be interesting to local hockey fans if they could see the fixture. The 228th battalion with the two McNaamra brothers, Prodgers, Duncan, Arbour, Lockhart and Reynolds, who played with the battalion team in the N. H. A., will oppose a sextet that will include Keats and Briden, of the Torontos; Donald Smith, the ex-Wanderer forward; Nick Bawlf, who played with the Shamrocks, and "Punch" Broadbent of Ottawa. Major Lou Marsh, who was an official referee of the O.H.A. and N.H.A., before he went overseas, will be in charge. Looking them over it looks as if the professional players as well as the amateur boys are ready to do their bit in the big game across the pond.

"The Khaki Call," a bright, sensible, breezy paper, containing many illustrations and special articles, the subscription price of which is $1.00. Three soldier heroes who have been overseas and done their bit, are looking after the canvass in Peterborough, in the persons of Pte. Comiskey of the 2nd Battalion; Sapper Carr of the 2nd Field Company, Canadian Engineers, and Pte. Gibbs of the Royal Sussex, Imperials.

DEEP FEELING OF OPTIMISM THROUGH THE BRITISH EMPIRE

To Those of British Temperment, During the Past Week Things Are Going Right Everywhere Says T. P. O'Connor

THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, March 24.—Throughout the entire British Empire there is a self-controlled but deep founded feeling of optimism. To those of British temperament during the past week things are going right everywhere.

The Russian revolution is apart a thing of universal joy. The addition of that great country to the family of free nations seems to promise to the other Allies a more vigorous prosecution of the war and once and for all averts all danger of the successful conclusion of that plan which Germany has so long attempted through her agents in the weaker countries which are affiliated with the Allies, of making separate peace.

These attempts have long haunted the Allies' leaders when they have thought of all these many secret intrigues which have predominated for so long the inner councils of the Petrograd Government. Now, the German reaction in Russia with its complete overthrow of the Russian beautocracy has once and for all removed all danger of Russia yielding to the many inducements held out by Germany through her agents with in the confines of the country to our east, to conclude separate terms of peace which would release Germany from the necessity of maintaining a huge military organization to protect her own borders from the Cossacks.

Army is Enthusiastic.

The German retreat on the Western front, while fraught with hidden dangers, it is true, has filled our army with the great enthusiasm, comes at the same time as the great Mesopotamian success, though the people here are still guessing what von Hindenburg's next move will be.

The disappearance of the Germans from such long lines which were apparently fortified in an impregnable manner and the relinquishing of powerfully defended villages and towns on the Somme front and the liberation of so many long-imprisoned French people has convinced England that her great offensive, so costly in the loss of men on this bloody front and so often arrested, will bring final success, that they feel that all of these sacrifices have now begun to justify themselves.

Simultaneously come rumours from Holland and Switzerland of unofficial attempts, plainly instigated from high German sources, to discuss new peace terms with Germany, and this time applying not to only one of the allied nations but to all alike.

GERMANS FAIL TO HALT THE ALLIES

Huns Inundate the Country Around Lafere But French Drive For Positions in Hindenburg Line Goes On in Face of Stubborn Resistance.

THE BRITISH PROGRESS

PARIS March 23.—Until yesterday the allies met practically no serious resistance in their advance. Now, however, their progress has been delayed by enemy reaction, which in some cases, notably between Vregny and Chivres and north-east of Soissons, has assumed the proportions of a real battle. The Germans are not content with defending positions, but are anxious at certain points, particularly west of La Fere and north of the Aisne, to regain some ground lost—a loss which perhaps had not entered into the plans of the general staff. Between the Oise and the Somme forcing of the St. Quentin Canal by the French also has been a surprise to the enemy. Hence, too, there have been violent but unsuccessful counter attacks. Everywhere along the line the French infantry is well supported by artillery, a fact which demonstrated the prudence of the command, seeing that the arduous pursuit has not outrun the mobility of the guns. It is also a tribute to the work of the French engineers, who in one instance where the roads to Noyon were destroyed for 1,800 yards only took one night to lay down a plank road capable of supporting all the traffic of the army. Realizing that the La Fere position was seriously imperilled the Germans resorted to inundations, and the town, according to to-night's official report, is under water. Meantime the troops of General Nivelle have continued their crossing of the Ailette River at several points. Further north the French columns streamed toward St. Quentin, where, with the British from Peronne, an attack will be made against this cornerstone pillar of the new German line.

The French forces operating to the north-east of the St. Quentin Canal have pushed back the Germans between one and a quarter and two and a half miles and also have gained additional ground on the heights north-east of Tergnier, overlooking the Oise valley, according to the French official communication issued to-night. The German attacks near Thil, north-west of Rheims, were repulsed.

Interest centres, however, in the French gain toward Laon as this seems to indicate that the Germans have been caught napping and have left a gap through which Nivelle has poured troops and guns and may turn the entire German line through Champagne. The slightest French shift toward the east might endanger the Germans entrenched south of the Aisne.

Encounters between British patrols and German detachments have occurred along the general line from Beaurains to Etreillers, South of Arras and near the centre of the line German counter-attacks, the statement adds, were driven off and the British positions were maintained. British troops made further progress in the region of Croisilles and Ecoust, south-east of Arras.

Krupp Guns in Action.

The big calibre Krupp shells which the advancing French troops have been facing during the last twenty-four hours is another indication that the Germans are reaching the line on which they hope to make a stand.

During the first five days of the retirement the biggest guns used by the Germans were 77-millimetre (3-inch) pieces, as the heavier artillery had all been sent back.

French Stopped at Only Two Points.

The French have been held up at only two places, however —one near

REMEMBER TUESDAY NIGHT'S MEETING IN COUNCIL CHAMBER

Tuesday night's meeting in the City Council Chamber to sustain and promote interest in the greater production movement should be largely attended, particularly by those citizens who are interested in gardening. The address by a representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture will be essentially practical and is intended to help and direct the property holder to obtain from his land this summer the fullest returns. Mayor Duffus' invitation includes the ratepayer with the small back garden, the citizen who plans to work a vacant lot, the novice who needs guidance and the man who prides himself in the knowledge he has gained by long experience.

POTATOES $4 ON MARKET.

Committee Discuss Vacant Lot Scheme

The Finance committee of the City Council met last evening and further discussed the vacant lot production scheme. So far very few lots have been offered for this purpose in comparison with the number available. A letter will be addressed to all owners of vacant lots in the city with a view of ascertaining the amount of land available for the purpose of raising garden produce. Ald. Stratton, chairman of the committee agreed to call a meeting in ten days to receive a report on the efforts put forth by the authorities.

GEORGE STREET EPWORTH LEAGUE

Debate will be Held on Monday Evening

The Epworth League of the George street Methodist church and the Normal school will hold a debate on Monday evening in the Sunday school hall of George street church. The subject of the debate is: "Resolved that the influence of the school has contributed more to civilization than the home."

The Normal school will take the affirmative and the Epworth League the negative side of the debate. An excellent programme has been provided for the occasion.

THE WORLD AND THE WOMAN

The feature at the Strand Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week is the Pathe-old Rooster Play, "The World and the Woman," with Florence La Badie starring. This is a story of exceptional interest and you will be all in sympathy with the pretty heroine, first, as a girl of the street, and then, when she rises above her sordid surroundings and becomes a wonderful power for good in the social sphere in which she has placed herself. Do not fail to see this. Admission only ten cents.

SATURDAY, MARCH 24, 1917

A TRIPARTITE ENTERPRISE.

A high level bridge over the river at Hunter street is a three-fold necessity. It is necessary as a civic connecting link and a medium of extension of radial railways to the very important section east of the river. It is thus necessary to the Hydro-Electric Commission, which owns or controls the radial railway. An overhead bridge is a necessity to the Canals Department as a part of the Trent Canal. The government is interested in an overhead bridge because it would save the government the necessity of building, at considerable expense, a draw bridge, involving in addition to its construction cost, a tidy annual sum for maintenance for all time. There are therefore three interests concerned in constructing an overhead bridge at Hunter street: the city first, because the present bridge must be replaced at a very early date; for almost any time we may see posted by the City Engineer, the warning, "Not safe;; No thoroughfare." Then the Hydro Commision and then the Government. An overhead bridge serving three interests, suggests a three-fold division of the cost of construction. A fourth consideration, and one of primary importance, is that such a bridge is a condition of a far greater advantage to the city than the bridge itself. This and the rebuilding of the Quaker Oats Company's buildings, and the re-establishment of its operation go together. To secure the bridge seems, therefore, to require diplomacy as well as dollars; and the duty naturally falls upon the city council to convince the other two interests of their responsibility in the premises. If they are as successful in this as they are prompt and energetic in preparing to meet the new reponsibility they should succeed.

WHY WE HAVE "SLACKERS."

An intelligent and thinking reader of The Examiner, though from his political associations and sympathies he has no special partiality for French-Canadians, suggests an explanation of the failure of the French-Canadians to respond enthusiastically to recruiting. He is intelligent and fair-thinking enough to see that the habitant is a peaceful, hard-working citizen, content with tilling his ribbon-like arpents stretching back from the St. Lwrence; who has little time for, and less inclination to, read of world doings. He knows little and cares little for European politics, or any other politics than those of his own little parish. He does not know—

All about the war,
And what they kill each other for.

He has nothing to stir his interest or his enthusiasm, and he naturally stays at home doing his work.

And there are reasons for indifference to recruiting in Ontario. We hear rash and reckless and unthinking recruiting orators abuse what they call, with every ill-judged vituperation of epithet, "slackers," young men who at heart may be as loyal and brave as themselves. We hear of and see many youngsters, some of them eligible for enlistment, in our pool rooms and picture theatres. These things are not unaccountable nor to be wondered at, nor, when we think and know, altogether blameable. What is the primary reason of these young men being indifferent? Because they do not know—they do not read and do not appreciate the seriousness of the situation. And why don't they read? Because they have not been taught to read, that is, in the true sense. A great many of them only went to school long enough to learn to read literally, but not long enough to learn or be taught fondness for reading. They leave school and enter, at almost child's age, the drudgery of learning a trade. Long hours bring weariness and the need of other rest than reading or study—physical rest; these boys must have relaxation. That is why these young men grown older and devoted to a daily grind of hard work, demand the evenings to rest, and that explains the pool rooms and the picture shows, the most tempting and elevating form of recreation of easy access we provide. Even in the heat of summer they have no chance for swimming or bathing.

If these so-called "slackers" hadn't been during the nascent stage, of citizenship, the victims of other "slackers" in connection with religious, educational and social responsibility; if they had been practically taught the benefits of the maintenance of institutions that caret for the welfare of growing citizens; if they had been practically taught to take a pride in themselves and their country; if they had been cared for instead of neglected, spiritually, mentally and physically, in the spirit of true altruism, they would have had a different outlook upon their duty, their country and the world; they would have learned to think and know and would not have been "slackers" either in the matter of recruiting or in the discharge of the higher duties of citizenship.

The responsibility for conditions comes back upon our schools and our social conditions. A large class of children do not have a fair chance for education, and they are largely taught things they see little use for. They are not taught, or at least they do not learn, the value of time—how usefully it can be employed in self-improvement. They are not taught the value and right use of money by means of the Penny Bank. Therefore, they both waste time and money, and the pool room gets both the time and the money, which under a proper system of education and the provision of proper means of social and religious oversight, might be thriftily and profitably employed.

We have cause for greater deference to the theory of a "second chance" in the next world, when we see so many thousands of our fellow beings deprived of the "first chance" in this world through failure of religious influences, educational and social influences, reaching the right spot—their hearts and minds.

DEMOCRACY UNDERDONE.

Democracy is making great advances these days. The Entente Allies are waging what now looks like a winning fight in the interests of democracy. In Russia, democracy has pushed from its seat a powerful dynasty that represents four or five hundred years of successfully entrenched autocracy—centuries of holding democracy under its iron heel. In the United States democracy is ranging itself on the side of world-wide democracy to help its triumph.

It is only in Ontario that democratic standards are getting the worst of it. We have always prided ourselves in Ontario on our democratic superiority, upon our democratic simplicity. But the Ontario Government has shown us that we were all wrong; that we were overdoing democratic simplicity, and should ape regal splendours, and even take pointers from the plutocratic vulgarity of display of the money barons of the United States.

We have lieutenant-governors, raised by royal parchment process from the ranks of simple democratic citizenship, to positions of deputy-vice-regal prominence. One would think that modest official residences would comfortably comport with their habits as simple citizens.

But not at all. Our democratic government wouldn't be content with any but a million dollar deputy-vice-regal residence. And, after spending a million dollars, is filling up a hole near the Don brick works, and building a house on it, the government must have its furnishings correspond—in cost anyway. To do the thing right, they sent the provincial architect to "truck and trade with the Yankees" in ideas of magnificence as expressed in the barbaric splendour and opulent bad taste of the mansions of New York millionaires; and even the extravagant decadence of Europe was drawn upon. The government spent $1000 in sending Hon. Dr. Reaume, when he was Minister of Public Works, to visit European castles to get pointers for wasting money on the extravagant interior decorations of government house.

One doesn't have to go through the new gubernatorial residence to get an idea of its glory and its cost. Before the governor can fairly get into his humble home, he has to pass through what we call a "front hall," or vestibule, which, with its marble pilasters and balustrades, cost between $25,000 and $30,000, and is dignified by the architect with the classic title of "atrium"; there's nothing in the name; it cost just as much under the classic name as if he had called it an "entry."

Very consistently, the interior furnishings correspond in extravagance. To give only two examples: The official record of waste of money on democratic simplicity, reads: "Four rugs, $4,964; six pairs curtains, $1,365." Of course it wouldn't do for the deputy-vice-regal foot, after passing through a $30,000 entrance hall, to be set on anything more vulgar than a $1,250-rug, or him be shielded from the public gaze by curtains at less than $230 per pair. The price of one rug, $1,241, would build a very comfortable workman's home, and the price of one pair of $230-curtains would go a long way towards decently furnishing it.

No one objects to the Lieutenant-Governor being decently and even luxuriously housed, in keeping with the dignity of his office, but spending a cool million of dollars on a government house for a province of only two and a half million people, and furnishing it so extravagantly, is a wicked waste of money when there is so much need of its expenditure to benefit hundreds of persons, more consistently with the democratic ideals of a people that have to work for a living.

Salvation Of The United States Depends Upon Defeat Of Germany

By individuals and organizations whose only possible claim to prominence is their ill concealed anti-Americanism the President is being bombarded with appeals and demands that in fighting the war forced upon it by Germany the United States must not enter into any alliance or understanding with other nations whose chief concern also is the defeat of Germany.

For the promotion of its own Prussian purpose one element of that sinister combination of pacifism and Prussianism preaches an "independent" war—as if there were something sacrosanct in a display of independence even thought it opened the way to inglorious invasion. Another element cries out that it would be wrong for American soldiers to fight anywhere else than on American soil—and this in face of the fact that among the criers are some noted for the loudness of their earlier insistence upon an American army being sent into Mexico! A third element laments that co-operation with the Entente Allies might lead us into complications when the time for making peace comes.

President Wilson does not need to be admonished to be on his guard against those evil prophets. Having had ample opportunity to take this measure he knows that in whatsoever guise they now may appear—whether as Emergency Peace Foundations or American Truth Societies or individuals—their Americanism has been tried in the balance and found wanting.

It would be the uttermost folly for the United States to go into war with Germany on any other basis than full understanding that this country's salvation depends upon the defeat of Germany. To the defeat of Germany therefore, all the energies and, all the resources of the United States must be devoted, and there must be co-operation with the other nations that are devoting their energies and their resources to the same end.

What form that co-operation shall take can best be decided by our naval and military experts. Their determination of policy must not be hampered by pacifist or Prussian plotting or by ill judged legislation at Washington.

This is no time for maudlin sentimentality, in legislative halls or on the outside. The possibility of complications growing out of a peace in the making of which the United States would participate with other nations can be dismissed as wholly unimportant in comparison with the menace to his nation of the kind of "independence" that would make possible a peace with the Entente Allies which would leave Germany free to deal with the United States alone.—New York Herald.

A TRIPARTITE ENTERPRISE.

A high level bridge over the river at Hunter street is a three-fold necessity. It is necessary as a civic connecting link and a medium of extension of radial railways to the very important section east of the river. It is thus necessary to the Hydro-Electric Commission, which owns or controls the radial railway. An overhead bridge is a necessity to the Canals Department as a part of the Trent Canal. The government is interested in an overhead bridge because it would save the government the necessity of building, at considerable expense, a draw bridge, involving in addition to its construction cost, a tidy annual sum for maintenance for all time. There are therefore three interests concerned in constructing an overhead bridge at Hunter street: the city first, because the present bridge must be replaced at a very early date; for almost any time we may see posted by the City Engineer, the warning, "Not safe;; No thoroughfare." Then the Hydro Commision and then the Government. An overhead bridge serving three interests, suggests a three-fold division of the cost of construction. A fourth consideration, and one of primary importance, is that such a bridge is a condition of a far greater advantage to the city than the bridge itself. This and the rebuilding of the Quaker Oats Company's buildings, and the re-establishment of its operation go together. To secure the bridge seems, therefore, to require diplomacy as well as dollars; and the duty naturally falls upon the city council to convince the other two interests of their responsibility in the premises. If they are as successful in this as they are prompt and energetic in preparing to meet the new reponsibility they should succeed.

WHY WE HAVE "SLACKERS."

An intelligent and thinking reader of The Examiner, though from his political associations and sympathies he has no special partiality for French-Canadians, suggests an explanation of the failure of the French-Canadians to respond enthusiastically to recruiting. He is intelligent and fair-thinking enough to see that the habitant is a peaceful, hard-working citizen, content with tilling his ribbon-like arpents stretching back from the St. Lwrence; who has little time for, and less inclination to, read of world doings. He knows little and cares little for European politics, or any other politics than those of his own little parish. He does not know—

All about the war,
And what they kill each other for.

He has nothing to stir his interest or his enthusiasm, and he naturally stays at home doing his work.

And there are reasons for indifference to recruiting in Ontario. We hear rash and reckless and unthinking recruiting orators abuse what they call, with every ill-judged vituperation of epithet, "slackers," young men who at heart may be as loyal and brave as themselves. We hear of and see many youngsters, some of them eligible for enlistment, in our pool rooms and picture theatres. These things are not unaccountable nor to be wondered at, nor, when we think and know, altogether blameable. What is the primary reason of these young men being indifferent? Because they do not know—they do not read and do not appreciate the seriousness of the situation. And why don't they read? Because they have not been taught to read, that is, in the true sense. A great many of them only went to school long enough to learn to read literally, but not long enough to learn or be taught fondness for reading. They leave school and enter, at almost child's age, the drudgery of learning a trade. Long hours bring weariness and the need of other rest than reading or study—physical rest; these boys must have relaxation. That is why these young men grown older and devoted to a daily grind of hard work, demand the evenings to rest, and that explains the pool rooms and the picture shows, the most tempting and elevating form of recreation of easy access we provide. Even in the heat of summer they have no chance for swimming or bathing.

If these so-called "slackers" hadn't been during the nascent stage, of citizenship, the victims of other "slackers" in connection with religious, educational and social responsibility; if they had been practically taught the benefits of the maintenance of institutions that cared for the welfare of growing citizens; if they had been practically taught to take a pride in themselves and their country; if they had been cared for instead of neglected, spiritually, mentally and physically, in the spirit of true altruism, they would have had a different outlook upon their duty, their country and the world; they would have learned to think and know and would not have been "slackers" either in the matter of recruiting or in the discharge of the higher duties of citizenship.

The responsibility for conditions comes back upon our schools and our social conditions. A large class of children do not have a fair chance for education, and they are largely taught things they see little use for. They are not taught, or at least they do not learn, the value of time—how usefully it can be employed in self-improvement. They are not taught the value and right use of money by means of the Penny Bank. Therefore, they both waste time and money, and the pool room gets both the time and the money, which under a proper system of education and the provision of proper means of social and religious oversight, might be thriftily and profitably employed.

We have cause for greater deference to the theory of a "second chance" in the next world, when we see so many thousands of our fellow beings deprived of the "first chance" in this world through failure of religious influences, educational and social influences, reaching the right spot—their hearts and minds.

DEMOCRACY UNDERDONE.

Democracy is making great advances these days. The Entente Allies are waging what now looks like a winning fight in the interests of democracy. In Russia, democracy has pushed from its seat a powerful dynasty that represents four or five hundred years of successfully entrenched autocracy—centuries of holding democracy under its iron heel. In the United States democracy is ranging itself on the side of world-wide democracy to help its triumph.

It is only in Ontario that democratic standards are getting the worst of it. We have always prided ourselves in Ontario on our democratic superiority, upon our democratic simplicity. But the Ontario Government has shown us that we were all wrong; that we were overdoing democratic simplicity, and should ape regal splendours, and even take pointers from the plutocratic vulgarity of display of the money barons of the United States.

We have lieutenant-governors, raised by royal parchment process from the ranks of simple democratic citizenship, to positions of deputy-vice-regal prominence. One would think that modest official residences would comfortably comport with their habits as simple citizens.

But not at all. Our democratic government wouldn't be content with any but a million dollar deputy-vice-regal residence. And, after spending a million dollars, is filling up a hole near the Don brick works, and building a house on it, the government must have its furnishings correspond—in cost anyway. To do the thing right, they sent the provincial architect to "truck and trade with the Yankees" in ideas of magnificence as expressed in the barbaric splendour and opulent bad taste of the mansions of New York millionaires; and even the extravagant decadence of Europe has drawn upon. The government spent $1000 in sending Hon. Dr. Reaume, when he was Minister of Public Works, to visit European castles to get pointers for wasting money on the extravagant interior decorations of government house.

One doesn't have to go through the new gubernatorial residence to get an idea of its glory and its cost. Before the governor can fairly get into his humble home, he has to pass through what we call a "front hall," or vestibule, which, with its marble pilasters and balustrades, cost between $25,000 and $30,000, and is dignified by the architect with the classic title of "atrium"; there's nothing in the name; it cost just as much under the classic name as if he had called it an "entry."

Very consistently, the interior furnishings correspond in extravagance. To give only two examples: The official record of waste of money on democratic simplicity, reads: "Four rugs, $4,964; six pairs curtains, $1,365." Of course it wouldn't do for the deputy-vice-regal foot, after passing through a $30,000 entrance hall, to be set on anything more vulgar than a $1,250-rug, or him be shielded from the public gaze by curtains at less than $230 per pair. The price of one rug, $1,241, would build a very comfortable workman's home, and the price of one pair of $230 curtains would go a long way towards decently furnishing it.

No one objects to the Lieutenant-Governor being decently and even luxuriously housed, in keeping with the dignity of his office, but spending a cool million of dollars on a government house for a province of only two and a half million people, and furnishing it so extravagantly, is a wicked waste of money when there is so much need of its expenditure to benefit hundreds of persons, more consistently with the democratic ideals of a people that have to work for a living.

NOTE OUR NEW ADDRESS:

176-178 SIMCOE STREET

Salvation Of The United States Depends Upon Defeat Of Germany

By individuals and organizations whose only possible claim to prominence is their ill concealed anti-Americanism the President is being bombarded with appeals and demands that in fighting the war forced upon it by Germany the United States must not enter into any alliance or understanding with other nations whose chief concern also is the defeat of Germany.

For the promotion of its own Prussian purpose one element of that sinister combination of pacifism and Prussianism preaches an "independent" war—as if there were something sacrosanct in a display of independence even thought it opened the way to inglorious invasion. Another element cries out that it would be wrong for American soldiers to fight anywhere else than on American soil—and this in face of the fact that among the criers are some noted for the loudness of their earlier insistence upon an American army being sent into Mexico! A third element laments that co-operation with the Entente Allies might lead us into complications when the time for making peace comes.

President Wilson does not need to be admonished to be on his guard against those evil prophets. Having had ample opportunity to take this measure he knows that in whatsoever guise they now may appear—whether as Emergency Peace Foundations or American Truth Societies or individuals—their Americanism has been tried in the balance and found wanting.

It would be the uttermost folly for the United States to go into war with Germany on any other basis than full understanding that this country's salvation depends upon the defeat of Germany. To the defeat of Germany therefore, all the energies and, all the resources of the United States must be devoted, and there must be co-operation with the other nations that are devoting their energies and their resources to the same end.

What form that co-operation shall take can best be decided by our naval and military experts. Their determination of policy must not be hampered by pacifist or Prussian plotting or by ill judged legislation at Washington.

This is no time for maudlin sentimentality, in legislative halls or on the outside. The possibility of complications growing out of a peace in the making of which the United States would participate with other nations can be dismissed as wholly unimportant in comparison with the menace to his nation of the kind of "independence" that would make possible a peace with the Entente Allies which would leave Germany free to deal with the United States alone.—New York Herald.

Mr. T. C. Elliot's Address On The Free Market Question

The merchants of Peterborough interested in the management of the market and in the general questions affecting the welfare of the city, by invitation, met the Trades and Labour Council in their hall on Wednesday last.

Mr. T. C. Elliott explained the views of the merchants, which were afterwards endorsed by the merchants present. Among those present were Mr. Boss, representing Messrs. Richard Hall and Son, Mr. Caldwell, manager Messrs. Turnbull Co., Mr. E. F. Mason, Mr. R. J. Kidd, Messrs. R. Neill Co., Mr. R. Fair, Mr. H. Cressman, and Mr. B. D. Hall, President of the Board of Trade.

Mr. T. C. Elliot's address was in part as follows:

Mr. Chairman,— We thank you for your invitation to confer with you on the questions affecting the interests of the city and for the courteous reception you have just accorded us.

Our president, Mr. Barrie, regrets very much that he is unable to be present at this time. This week he is in New York. In coming here to discuss these questions with you we feel that we can stand on common ground. We have no selfish end in view and no axe to grind and together we can work for the general welfare of the city of which we are all so justly proud.

When we advocate the removal of the tolls on the market we feel that we are just trying to remove another stone that has for some time blocked the further progress of our city. Some say that the market in that event would prove altogether too small to accommodate the market business. I may say that that is just the end for which we are working. A greater market would be advantageous to both buyer and seller. The law of supply and demand would work well for the citizen and the farmer would find an inexhaustible outlet for his produce.

The small pin pricks of tolls, the revenue from which are not of great moment to the city but are very annoying to the farmer.

Perhaps the greatest deterrent to the growth of the market is the presence of a uniformed police constable.

The citizens of Peterborough are so accustomed to the police that they do not pay much attention to them not any more than they do to any other man on the street.

Remove Constable.

But to the ladies of the country, who have hazy ideas about the authority of a constable, his presence does not tend toward a more numerous attendance. We would advocate that a market clerk in plain clothes take the place of the constable, and that convenient means be furnished so that both seller and purchaser could quickly ascertain the weight of any article and that only necessary rules be followed with regard to the business of the market, and that these rules be administered with that scarcest of commodities, common sense.

In days gone by there were toll gates on many roads; in some less progressive parts they are yet to be seen. These toll gates were a hindrance to the free movement of the people. Greater experience and a keener intelligence has largely done away with them. And in time hindrances to business on the market will also be removed.

And not only do we wish to have the hindrances removed but we would like to see it made pleasant for the farmer to come here and do business with us. Provide them with outside cover and a ladies' waiting room with accommodations and above all do not meet them with suspicion. There are some, not many I am pleased to say, pessimistic people who seem to think that most people are not honest. On the contrary the great majority of our people are honourable men and women.

We have perhaps about twenty-two thousand people in Peterborough and out of that number only about two hundred know anything about the police court. This is certainly a very small percentage of the whole.

And we know something about the people who live in the country. They are every whit as honest and straightforward as are the people who live in the city. You all know that when a farmer's wife cuts off a lb. of butter she does it in all good faith, it is well known that butter will get lighter after evaporation, and after evaporation there is no less butter there, even though it may weigh a fraction of an ounce less. Let us use common sense in dealing with this matter.

Welfare Committee.

And sir, it is also our hope to form with you and the Board of Trade, a welfare committee, whose duty it will be to exercise a careful scrutiny over the various questions affecting the city. True at the Mayor's meeting a short time ago, some such committee was talked of, But a committee that may be launched by a public meeting and that has no connection with the various bodies in the city, can never be representative of our needs. We would advocate that you appoint a strong representation which with representatives from the Board of Trade and from the Merchants' Association would form an active welfare committee this body would be of great benefit to the city.

When we address you we know that we are addressing men who are well capable of considering and deciding upon these matters. We have only to consider the wonderful machines that are now doing the work with almost human intelligence to look around at the stately edifices that adorn our streets. The men who make these must be men of high standard of intelligence. With confidence we bring these matters for your consideration. More particularly at this time do we need a welfare committee.

Civic Government.

The government of our city is almost in the hands of irresponsible bodies. Should any great question arise it is almost impossible at the present time to reflect the popular desire in the City Council. Only one-half of our aldermen appear for re-election each year. One half of our aldermen are always representative of the opinions of our people of two years ago. No city can progress satisfactorily with this handicap.

Nearly every citizen of Peterborough never fails to marvel why one of the very best locations was given to the railway. The land on the border of the river to the east of Simcoe street would have been an ideal spot for a market square and perhaps also for an exhibition ground and now, owing to the lack of a welfare committee in the past, we can only look at the location and think of what might have been.

And again we are told that the Council was offered the Burleigh Falls power for the sum of $5,000.00. They could not see it, and now to-day if they were to try to purchase it the price would probably be about a hundred thousand dollars.

And too little attention paid to the great spending body of our city—the Board of Education. The Board of Education deserves our gratitude for their very capable work, but why not take an interest and supervision over the body that spends so much of our money. Observe them, criticize and praise them when they deserve it. And our Police Commission, this is purely a beaurocratic body. The citizens seem to have no control over them whatever.

At the present time there is a question of great importance before the city. The merchants have not discussed this question yet. I refer to the overhead bridge on Hunter street.

The Council wishes to build an overhead bridge—a bridge of this description will cost over $300,000.00. Now a bridge about the same length as the present one with adequate room for street car tracks would cost about $60,000.00. The smaller bridge would afford just as much convenience to all the citizens, but not to the Quaker Oats Co.

They want a bridge high enough to allow trains to go under and to allow barges to reach them from the river. Now at the present time we are neither opposing or supporting this measure. But the fact remains that if this by-law goes through the City of Peterborough will in effect pay a bonus of quarter of a million dollars to have the company locate here. This may be a good venture for both city and company. But I think that you will agree with me, when I say, that it is a question that is worthy of grave consideration.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

This trouble is most distressing and is caused by a cold settling in the throat. The hard dry cough causes that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation and keeps you from enjoying your night's rest. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks combined with the lung healing virtues of the world-famous Norway pine tree, will give almost instant relief in all cases of this nature.

Mrs. Alex. Durward, Athelstan, Que., writes: "I have used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for a number of years, and find it the only thing that will help me when I have a severe cold. It helps the soreness, and stops the tickling sensation in my throat, which is so irritating. I always use it for both myself and the children, and would not be without it in the house."

MARCH WEATHER RHEUMATIC WEATHER

Victims Can Cure Themselves With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

With the coming of March people who are afflicted with rheumatism, begin to have unpleasant reminders of their trouble. The weather is changeable—balmy and springlike one day, raw, cold and piercing the next. It is such sudden changes of weather that sets the pangs and tortures of rheumatism, lumbago and sciatica going. But it must be borne in mind that although weather conditions start the pains, the trouble is deeply rooted in the blood, and can only be cured through the blood. All the lotions and liniments in the world can not cure rheumatism. Rubbing may seem to ease the pain while you are rubbing but there its value ends. Only through the blood can you cure rheumatism. That is why Dr. Williams Pink Pills have so many thousands of cures of this trouble to their credit. The new rich blood which they actually make drives out the poisonous acid and rheumatism is vanquished. Among many sufferers from rheumatism, who have been cured by this medicine, is Mr. C. H. McGee, freight shed foreman for the G.T.R. at Peterboro, who says: "In the course of my work I am naturally exposed to all kinds of weather, with the result that about two years ago I contracted rheumatism which settled in my legs. At times I could scarcely walk and often had to quit my day's work owing to the stiffness and the pain. I tried different remedies without getting help until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I used six boxes of these and can say that I am about as well as ever I was. I still take the pills occasionally and I hope that my experience may be of benefit to some other rheumatic sufferer."

If you suffer from rheumatism, or any other disease of the blood, begin to cure yourself to-day with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Billy Sunday Says He Will Help Raise An Army Himself To Beat Down To Dust Devil's Hordes

BUFFALO, March 24.—"Jesus, you are taking a lot of back talk from the Kaiser," remarked William Asher Sunday, as he unfolded his newspaper and sugared his breakfast coffee yesterday morning.

"I wish Lord, you would make America to help wipe Germany off the map, as you commanded Israel to destroy the idolatrous and corrupt Canaanites. Count Billy Sunday in up to his neck when war comes."

Will Raise An Army.

The evangelist who has taken Buffalo and is poised for a spring drive against the New York division of Satan's army, is ready to turn the fight against "Teuton frightfulness" the minute Congress gives the word.

"What'll I do?" he echoed. "Why, I'll turn that New York tabernacle into a recruiting station. I'll call for recruits volunteers for Christ and the United States army. I'll have recruiting officers there to sign them up. I'll raise enough of an army myself to beat down to the dust the devil's hordes that are murdering our women folk.

Jesus Our Commander.

"Jesus will be our commander-in-chief and he has Von Hindenburg beaten to a frazzle. And maybe he hasn't it in for Germany for the miserable heresy that crawled out of Leipsic and Heidelberg."

Billy Sunday believes the United States will be at war with Germany before he opens his Gotham revival campaign in the tabernacle at Broadway and 168th street on Easter Sunday. If there is a call to arms he believes his first duty is to the nation rather than to New York. In the summer of 1862 when Abraham Lincoln called for volunteers, Billy Sunday's father left his log cabin at Ames, Iowa, to become a private in company E, of the 23rd Iowa volunteers. One month afterwards he contracted measles and died and four months later little Billy was born.

Not a Spineless Pacifist.

"I'd be a poor mutt of a spineless pacifist," said Billy, recounting the story, "if I didn't show up in the front rank now, wouldn't I?"

Sunday believes he can do New Yorkers as much good by recruiting them for terrestrial war as for spiritual action.

"It's the same thing," he explained "when the earthly war is against evils such as those perpetrated in Belgium. Signing up with God means signing up against such horrors as those."

God Will Find Time.

Anyway, he figures, God will find time to deal with Gotham.

"After the war is over and the swords are beaten into ploughshares," he predicts, "God may say: 'Now Billy, go and reign over New York State,' and then maybe there won't be something doing!"

ADVANCES IN PRICES NUMEROUS

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:

The Markets at a Glance.

Flour has been in a fluctuating mood during the week under the stress of the same sort of condition in the wheat market. There was a decline in flour registered when wheat slumped and with a recovery in the price of the latter the market for flour is again in a firm position if the price of wheat holds. Potatoes also glided to lower levels during the week. But the foregoing are the exc'ent of the declines during the week while the advances have been numerous. Sugar held in firm market, with the demand tending to the quiet side. Both live and dressed hogs were easier in price during the week, but under the influence of good demand, cooked meats held firm. Butter was steady, while eggs were firmer, due to the big increase in consumption and higher prices in the Chicago market.

There is very little improvement in the tea situation as importers they had small success in getting supplies started from Ceylon and India. There is strong probability that an acute shortage will develop in the Canadian market before sufficient additional supplies can be obtained. Prunes are in firm market, with advances announced by importers for spot stocks. New prices on English candied peels have been announced, which are in the neighbourhood of 20 per cent. higher than the opening prices last year. Some wholesalers have already advanced prices on their stocks. The first Porto Rican pineapples of the season arrived during the week. Bananas are high in price, owing to the scarcity occasioned through shortage of tonnage to bring the fruit to the United States. Shipments of goods were further restricted during the week by the announcement by one of the railroads of an embargo on all perishable goods out of Toronto. This embargo was in effect three days. Trade has kept up well during the week.

the suggested new terms is the alleged proposition to abandon any claim which Germany might have on those portions of Lithuania, Poland or any other portion of Russian territory, rendered impossible now for retention by Germany because of the evident determination of free Russia to do justice to all nationalities within her Empire, including even the Hebrew race, by liberal concessions of home rule.

Further proof of the dawning of reason in the Central Powers is the suggestion emanating from Austria to attempt to settle the question put by the Slav of southern and northern origin for such home rule concessions as would make it unnecessary for the breakup of Austria Hungary into independent kingdoms.

In England, on the other hand, the determination to go on with the war and to reject all attempts made through Teutonic agencies to make peace on unsatisfactory terms, was strikingly demonstrated during the past week by the overwhelming defeat of the pacifists' condidate in the recent bye-election at Stockton, where the ministerial candidate received the tremendous majority of 7,641 votes against 596 cast for the pacifist domestic politics candidate.

However, there is a good deal of superficial unrest throughout the Kingdom. The publication of the Dardanelles report gave full opportunity for the enemies of ex-Premier Asquith and the late ministry to Blaspheme. With bitter denunciation and invective the names of Lord Kitchener and ex-Premier Asquith were held up to scorn by those who had cause, real or imaginary, to feel embittered against these former leaders.

One yellow paper even went so far as to ask for "twenty-three ropes for twenty-three criminals" exposed by the report of the War Bureau on the failure of the British troops on the Dardanelles.

This mood has passed rapidly away, because nobody relishes washing dirty linen in public at this critical moment and because faith in Lord Kitchener still remains strong enough to produce a violent reaction against the attacks on his memory.

The process of wiping out the Dardanelles report from further discussion until the end of the war was completed by two successful speeches made by Mr. Asquith and Mr. Churchill.

The absence of Lloyd-George from the House of Commons and the palpable inferiority intellectually of Bonar Law to Asquith, have thrown Asquith again to the top of the Parliamentarp tree and rehabilitated him with an extraordinary rapidity, so that he has now become the real leader of the House of Commons.

The Home Rule Question.

The most surprising development is the rapid strides with which the Home Rule question has advanced towards settlement. The movement, started after Lloyd George's tactless speech of last week, has gained volume every day, so that now the Tories are working more vigorously even than the Liberals in pressing upon Lloyd-George the urgent necessity of an Irish settlement with Lord Northcliffe's powerful assistance.

Both by the medium of speeches and articles in many papers, an enormous addition to the above forces, pressure has been brought to bear, one of the results of which is that the Orange extremists find themselves isolated, commanding no longer that support of the entire English Tory party which formerly was their chief strength.

All of the Tory newspapers, with the exception of the Morning Post, have at last become reconciled that home rule is the only thing left for England. This has produced the most satisfactory result by inducing them to make larger approaches on the Nationalist demands than at any moment during the whole struggle for Irish liberty.

Nationalist leaders still remain reserved and reticent and are still unapproachable. They seemingly await further offers from the Liberal party, but decline to accept the invitation after the discussion with the emissaries of the new ministry.

The whole thing, it is believed, will end in the deciding as to what shape the proposed settlement will ake, and what body will carry out that settlement is "undecided, but two things are now certain, the assent of all parties that the unity of the Irish nation will be symbolized in an unquestionable shape and that no partition of any but the emallest and most transient character will be suggested even by the Orange leaders."

It is certain to me that the Irish home rule act now before Parliament will obtain a considerable increase of powers amounting to a large reduction in existing taxation and practically fiscal autonomy.

Although everything seems uncertain amid the eddies and currents of the movements in Parliament this week, and this is apparently a particularly thorny question, to me it is clear that there is but one obstacle to the satisfactory settlement of the Irish question and that is such insanity as still exists in Ireland.

Whether this insanity can be exploited by the lip service adherence to home rule who now are making a last attempt to destroy home rule is the real question.

Council Washed Its Hands of Bathing Place Petition

Public bathing places joined the ranks of deferred hopes last night. A persistent agitation by advocates of the idea, and the "serious consideration" of the Council during weeks and months past failed to produce the desired result of action. The following report whose adoption was moved by Alderman Stratton, seconded by Alderman Dobbin, was passed in silence by the Council last night:

Your special committee appointed in regard to bathing places beg leave to report we had a conference with representatives of the Playgrounds' Association and discussed the matter fully with them and also at the same meeting heard citizens who opposed the Council taking action in the matter at this time.

Your committee did not decide to make any recommendation in regard to the matter.

The Council had apparently "come to bury Caesar not to praise him," but they may have been thinking of the "resurrection morn."

DOCTORS ADVISE IRON FOR THE BLOOD

Anaemia, pale faces, nervousness, stomach troubles, watery blood, etc., are sure signs of thin blood. Dr. Mainprize says he can take any of these cases and cure any one of them in ten days by giving Iron for the blood, and Phosphorus for the nerves. "called Bonised Phosphorus with Iron." I have found that 99 per cent. of all stomach, liver, kidney, bowel, nerve, etc., troubles are traced right back to the blood. Just as soon as Bonised Phosphorus with Iron is given it is almost immediately absorbed by the system the blood taking the iron while the nerves are soothed by the phosphorus, making you eat better, feel better, look better, digest better, and finally you will be made 100 per cent. stronger. Do not be taking all sorts of patent medicines and laxatives which only ruin your system; go to the root of the trouble and start taking Iron and strengthen your blood, restore your nerves, and your digestion and will recharge your whole system with new life Bonised Phosphorus with Iron is dispensed by one druggist in each city. F. C. Weber dispenses it for Peterboro.

AUTOINTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

The Dangerous Condition Which Produces Many Well Known Diseases.

HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THIS TROUBLE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" — The Wonderful Fruit Medicine — will Protect You

Autointoxication means self-poisoning, caused by continuous or partial constipation, or insufficient action of the bowels.

Instead of the refuse matter passing daily from the body, it is absorbed by the blood. As a result, the Kidneys and Skin are overworked, in their efforts to rid the blood of this poisoning.

Poisoning of the blood in this way often causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Disturbed Stomach. It may produce Headaches and Sleeplessness. It may irritate the Kidneys and bring on Pain in the Back, Rheumatism, Gout, and Rheumatic Pains. It is the chief cause of Eczema — and keeps the whole system unhealthy by the constant absorption into the blood of this refuse matter.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Autointoxication or self-poisoning — as "Fruit-a-tives" acts gently on bowels, kidneys and skin, strengthens the bowels and tones up the nervous system.

COUNCIL DECIDES FOR FREE MARKET AS AN EXPERIMENT

No Tolls on Sale of Farm Produce During Coming Year—Ald. Weir Holds the Market in Light Opinion—Farmers Don't Object to Tolls, Ald. Duncan Said.

VOTE WAS 5 TO 3

For good or ill the market will be free to farmers this year. "It's no use anyway," said Ald. Weir last night, "and if it isn't a success this year it might as well be closed up. We could lease the property and get more money out of it than at present."

In removing the tolls from the sale of farm produce, the Council was really actuated by the spirit of taking a chance. "Try it for one year," was the attitude of most of them, and those who supported the change asserted that the city could not suffer a serious financial loss. Moreover there was the prospect based on the logic of the majority that if the market were free, more farmers would bring their produce to it. Consequently the prices should be lower for the consumer.

Those who supported the change were Aldermen Dobbin, Stratton, McIntyre, Weir and Smith. The opposition was presented by Aldermen Saunders, Taylor and Duncan. Aldermen Worth and Langford were absent.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

Ald. Saunder's introduced the subject in his Property Committee report that recommended the acceptance of Mr. Walter Fisher's tender of $750 for the market tolls for the coming year. It was embodied in one of the clauses of the report the adoption of which he moved seconded by Ald. Taylor.

Ald. Smith asked for a discussion of the free market proposal, and Ald. Saunders referred to Thursday night's deputation and its request for the removal of the tolls. The visitors had not been unanimous and he did not believe the change would increase the attendance of farmers. He believed the decline of the market was due to the fact that purchasers go around the country buying up produce. Hence the diminished supply for the Peterborough market.

"I can't see my way clear to vote away $9,000 for a free market," Ald. Saunders stated. "I could have had fifty or seventy-five men here last night who are opposed to it."

SHOULD BE TRIED OUT.

"I believe that it is the consensus of opinion that a free market should be tried out," said Ald. Stratton. "The ladies who attend it state that it can't be worse than it is. Ald. Saunders says that it will cost $2,000 to make the experiment. The present clerk is prepared to act as caretaker for the tolls from the weigh scales, from hucksters and for other revenue he can collect." Ald. Stratton moved an amendment that the clause be struck out of the Property Committee's report.

Ald. Weir expressed a poor opinion of the market, but he favoured the removal of the tolls for a year as an experiment. "If it can attract more farmers their goods should be sold cheaper."

Mayor Duffus—Then if the produce sells cheaper do you think the farmers will be more numerous?

Ald. Weir—They've got to sell somewhere.

The Mayor remarked that he had been out of town and had not heard the views of the deputation.

Ald. Smith stated that since prohibition had come into force the farmers had to pay higher stable charges in the city. The removal of the ten cents for selling on the market would help to pay that extra amount. Besides the leading merchants favoured the change.

Mayor Duffus asked Ald. Stratton if he was sure of his figures and of his statement that the present market clerk would look after the market for the remaining tolls. "We should get all the details before we take any action," said His Worship.

Ald. Stratton said he had obtained the information secondhand and could not speak with certainty, but it would be only a few hunderd dollars either way.

FARMERS WILLING TO PAY

Ald. Duncan expressed his opposition to the idea. "There is not a farmer who is unwilling to pay the tolls. They are not that stingy," he said, and questioned the assertion that the present clerk would take care of the market for what he could get out of it.

Ald. Taylor who can recall his farmers days when he sold hay in Peterborough also opposed the change. Conditions of supply and demand, he said regulated prices. The outside market was short of goods, causing a big demand generally. With Ald. Duncan he favoured the withdrawal of certain restrictions which had proved irksome to the farmers.

ALTER THE BY-LAW

After the vote had been taken, Ald. Duncan asked for particulars of the innovation. What goods could be sold free, how would the caretaker be engaged, these and other details, he said, should be elucidated. "I can't see how you can move for a free market without knowing how it is to be carried out."

Mayor Duffus—That's my idea.

Ald. Stratton—It will be free to farmers who sell their own produce as I understand it. Hucksters, those who sell fruit, fish and similar goods they have bought will pay a fee. There will also be a charge for the use of the weigh scales. Auctioneers will pay a fee. The market should be self-supporting if we haven't to pay a caretaker.

The revision of the market by-law to cover the new condition was provided in a motion by Ald. Smith, seconded by Ald. Weir.

It was also decided to advertise for a caretaker for the market which will be free after March 31.

Germans Fail To Halt the Allies

La Fere ,where the Germans are tenaciously barring them from the Forest of St. Gobain position, and the other at Versouy, where the French menace again Laon was most dangerous.

Elsewhere, at a dozen places, the French stormed the German positions, scattering the defenders and achieving every objective. Nearly the entire line north of the canal from St. Simon to Tergnier (north-west of La Fere) has been gained by the French, despite stubborn resistance.

Light infantry and cavalry are pushing forward fast from Clastres and Monescourt (north of the Somme Canal, east of St. Simon), already within sight of St. Quentin, and heavier forces and infantry are already moving up, protecting the artillery — chiefly 75-millimeter guns, mounted on motor trucks, the same as anti-aircraft cannon.

From Montescourt the French are within striking distance of Moy, possession of which cuts the St. Quentin La Fere road. From Coucy (west Laon, south of the Oises) cuirassiers, operating against Uhlans have inflicted a smart defeat on them and are pushing on toward the cutting of the La Fere Amixy railroad which is the outer defensive line from Laon.

Drive on Calais Planned?

Captured German soldiers and officers assert that the reason given them for the withdrawal was that the line had to be shortened to provide troops for a concentration in the northernmost sector for a final drive against Calais.

The views of Swiss military critics seem to suport this contention as the closing of the Holland-Belgian and German frontier recently was synchronous with the rumoured concentration of enormous reserves of troops opposite the Belgian and northern British front.

Gustav Herve, writing in Victoire, however, takes a different view, asserting that the loss of Laon means that the Germans must retire to the line of the Meuse, and that it behooves the British to be on the alert for a withdrawal between Arras and Nieuport, and for the French to watch closely for the evacuation of Champagne.

"If the Germans give up St. Quentin and Laon —particularly Laon — without defending it to the last man it signifies that they must fall back to the Meuse and must soon begin a retreat in the northern sector and evacuate Champagne also" says Herve

The young doctor and his friend, the drug clerk, were sitting at the club window, when a richly dressed woman passed.

"There goes the only woman I ever loved," sighed the young M.D.

"So?" queried the other. "Then why don't you marry her?"

"Can't afford to; she's my best patient."—Mule.

PLANS FOR HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

Tentative Agreement Submitted to the Committee of the Whole Council

A meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council was held last evening when a tentative agreement between the city and the Quaker Oats Company was considered. The Company was represented at the meeting by Mr. Robert Gordon, Vice-President of the Company, Mr. W. H. Denham, manager of the Peterborough plant, and Mr. McDonald, who is associated with Mr. Denham in the operation of the local plant.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, Solicitor for the city, gave a resume of the negotiations that have taken place between the Company and the City. The Company has practically agreed to erect a plant in Peterborough "substantially in size and employing the same number of hands as the former plant." Arrangements are under way towards the preparation of a by-law authorizing the construction of a overhead bridge on Hunter street and also a traffic bridge connecting London street with East City and crossing the dam of the Hydraulic Power Company.

Mr. R. H. Parsons, City Engineer, submitted a plan showing profile of proposed overhead bridge over the Otonabee river on Hunter street.

Re Subscriptions To Belgian Relief

At a recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Belgian Relief Fund, the Collectors reported that the monthly subscriptions were being well met by the subscribers. However, there are still a number who have not yet paid their subscriptions in full. As the Annual Meeting is to be held early in April, it is desired by the Executive that all pledges should be fully paid before such meeting. In order to allow time for posting the many accounts, subscribers are asked to hand the balance of their subscriptions to their collector or to the Treasurer, Mr. V. Eastwood at the Royal Bank, not later than Thursday, April 5th.

A number of subscribers to this worthy fund have requested that another canvas be undertaken or that the subscribers of the past year be asked to continue their subscriptions. This matter will be decided at the Annual Meeting, the date of which will be announced later.

YES! MAGICALLY! CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You simply say to the drug store man, "Give me a quarter of an ounce of freezone." This will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn from one's feet.

A few drops of this new ether compound applied directly upon a tender or aching corn should relieve the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn, root and all, dries up and can be lifted out with the fingers.

This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that while freezone is sticky, it dries in a moment, and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

Don't let father die of infection or lockjaw from whittling at his corns, but clip this out and make him try it.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Dip the almonds or peanuts in white of egg instead of butter before salting them. The white should be slightly beaten.

Bathe Internally And Keep Well!

Nature has mightily equipped us all old and young, to resist disease—but she requires that we give her a chance.

We give her no chance if we permit the Lower Intestines to be more or less clogged with accumulated waste. Yet that is a universal condition to-day, as is proven by the number of laxative drugs that are consumed.

You can help Nature in Nature's most effectual way by Internal Bathing, and in an easy, non-habit-forming way keep the Intestines as Sweet and clean as Nature demands it to be for perfect health and surer defence against contagion. Over half a million keen, bright, healthy people testify to its results.

Mrs. C. G. M. (name on request) of Strathroy, Ont., writes:

I am pleased to have this opportunity of testifying to the merits of the J. B. L. Cascade. I have been using it now for a year with satisfactory results. I am an old woman, but my health is so improved that I have a renewed lease of life. You are at liberty to give my address to any one privately who may desire to write to me regarding the Cascade.

Just call at Warne Brue Co., Peterborough and request free booklet, "Why Man of To-day is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient." The most efficient device for Internal Bathing. The "J. B. L. Cascade" will also be shown and explained to you if you so desire. If you prefer, write for Booklet to Dr. Chas A. Tyrrell, 153 College street, Toronto.

Convict's Journey Aids Dying Wife

NEW YORK, March 24—Mrs. Matilda Quinn, who it was believed had but a few hours to live, rallied in a remarkable manner in Bellevue Hospital after her husband, John Quinn, released from Sing Sing Prison on a special order from the Governor had seen her.

Suffering from the effects of blood poisoning, Mrs. Quinn was sent to the hospital from her home, at No. 154 West Thirty-fifth street, several days ago, and when she was told she probably would die she said death would be met happily if only she could see her husband for a few minutes. She said he was serving seven years in Sing Sing for burglary.

Dr. Irving Siris and Mr. Fleming and Mr. Walker, assistant superintendent of the hospital, took the matter up with the State officials, with the result that Governor Whitman ordered a prison guard to take Quinn from Sing Sing to see his dying wife.

Screens were placed amout Mrs. Quinn's bed and the greeting between husband and wife was private. For more than four hours Quinn was permitted to remain at his wife's side, and in that time their daughter, six years old, arrived and greeted her father. She was only two years old when he was sent to prison.

Quinn and every one else in the yard were weeping when he said what they believed was his last farewell to his wife and was led away. But the physicians were surprised a little later to note a decided improvement in Mrs. Quinn's condition. The improvement continued and last night it was said at the hospital that Mrs. Quinn's chances for recovery were remarkably good. Quinn was taken back to Sing Sing as soon as the farewell at the hospital was over.

Step by Step

For the first three months baby is a delicate wee appealing mite. Then how noticeably and pleasingly his life unfolds, intensifying the delight of watching him grow. After six months he is mother's "little man," sits up and crawls about.

If baby has to be hand fed the only rational plan is to give foods adapted to his age and growing needs. This is provided by the 'Allenburys' Food, recognised by Doctors, Nurses and Mothers throughout the world as the best alternative to the mother's milk.

Milk Food No. 1. For baby from birth to 3 months of age. So like mother's milk that it can be given alternately with the breast with perfect comfort to the child. Readily digested, completely nourishing.

Milk Food No 2. From the third to the sixth months: to meet the increasing wants of baby, to stimulate and strengthen the digestive organs.

Malted Food No. 3. After the sixth month: a predigested farinaceous food, assuring the formation of firm flesh, sound teeth and strong bone.

Free Market Made Little Impression On Farmers To-day

At least half a dozen farmers selling produce on the outside market this morning showed no enthusiasm over the removal of the tolls.

"Suit yourself," said one man. "What's five or ten cents. It doesn't make any difference to me whether there is a toll or not."

A market gardener spoke in the same strain. "Why it's such a small matter," he said, "that I have never given it a thought. I think you might have kept the police less active."

A Monaghan farmer said: "The city is simply spending money for nothing. The farmers had no objection to paying two, five or ten cents as the case might be."

One lady upstairs said she paid the tolls as a matter of course. She had heard no one objecting to the fee.

It may be that the Council's move will attract other farmers, but the attitude among these farmers this morning was largely of indifference.

"If the police would keep those urchins out of here and away from the upstairs and outside market they would be doing us a real service," said one man. "They are jostling among the people, grabbing things out of baskets, and have absolutely no regard whatever for the warnings we give them."

Just then a reckless youth of 14 or 15 years drove a fish waggon over the sidewalk through the crowd and left it standing on the square.

"Look at that. There's what I mean."

A moment later the boy helped himself to an apple out of the farmer's bag, snatched it despite the man's shout "get out of that."

"There's one way to help the market. Keep those urchins away from us."

EATING MEAT REGULAR CLOGS THE KIDNEYS, THEN YOUR BACK HURTS

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged, and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The agitation of a few busybodies, who are pluming themselves as market experts and asking for the abolition of our revenue derived from the market tolls, is ill-timed and not in accord with the best interests of the city.

Up to the beginning of the present century, when for a number of years the crops had been bad or indifferent and most of the farmers were struggling under heavy mortgages, I advocated the abolition of the tolls, but now, when we have had a series of years of good crops on the whole, that reason no longer exists, and but few mortgages remain undischarged, and our local banks are filled with farmers' deposits.

It is absurd to say that a few paltry cents for the tolls would keep the farmers from offering their produce for sale when there is no other market to compete with our's between Toronto and Ottawa or Montreal for high prices. When a farmer can get $35.00 for five bags of onions and other exorbitant prices for everything he has to sell, a condition brought about by the war, he is not likely to baulk at the price for the accommodation afforded by our market. As I understand the farmers are not complaining, but the kickers are a few shop-keepers, who, under a misconception of the situation, think they can add to their own receipts at the expense of the general ratepayer. The market tolls do not affect the market price of producing and does any one for a moment think that the farmers would sell their produce for that much less if there were no tolls

In these strenuous times, when there are so many demands made upon our treasury, one would suppose that there would be an attempt made by our Council at entrenchment instead of adding to our ever increasing burdens. One stands amazed at the facility afforded every syndicate and others to exploit our city at the expense of the poor ratepayer. Where will it all end

Yours truly,
JOHN GREEN.

March 24th, 1917.

OUR FUTURE.

Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Everything is looking bright for Peterborough. The citizens are beginning to take an interest in the management of public affairs. Some of the shop-keepers suggest that the market be made free, and that no constable with bright brass buttons terrify the women who bring their butter, poultry and eggs to the market, by walking through the market, thus intimating that the dear creatures had a wholesome dread of them. I was expecting that advocate of "No policeman" to advocate the removal of the weighing machines and the removal of weight-ticket from the legs of the fowl.

These weight-tickets are frequently bare-faced lies. A short time ago a gentleman bought in our market a fine, high-priced turkey and brought it home. A little bird whispered to him to weigh it. He did so and found the ticket on which he had paid 30 cents per lb. just two and a half pounds short in weight—just 75 cents worth of turkey gone. He brought the bird back and asked for his change. The good woman said nothing, but quickly handed over the 75 cents. That woman does not approve of big brass-buttoned policemen in the market. "It is no place for them!" By the way, the chief advocate of a free market and "no policeman" has frequently admitted that he loses $1,000 a year from his shop. Perhaps a stuffed policeman in every corner of his shop, with brass buttons, might help him against these losses.

Now, Mr. Editor, the city provides a property worth $50,000 for the market place. The people who use it pay no taxes for it; nor for the "modern improvements," nor keeping the upper market clean and warm; nor for the policeman who keeps the peace amongst so many women, or who weighs the butter, or the turkeys when their services are wanted.

The people who bring their goods to the market pay neither rent, taxes or salaries; they do a cash business, and if they do an honest business they need not fear a policeman, no matter how tall he may be or how many buttons he may have.

These "business" men who are so anxious to save the city from destruction, would be the first to howl if they break up the market and compel all the business to go through the hands of the grocers and jobbers, who, as middle men, will take toll of all that they take from the market by forestalling and selling to the people at a higher price.

Their offer to form themselves into a kind of House of Lords to guide and direct these common councillors with their superior wisdom will be highly appreciated, and under this new form of government surely the town will bust with its new life.

CIVIS.

Editor Examiner.

Dear Sir,—For the information of your readers and to assist in the gardening scheme, will you please publish whether or not a man can work in his own garden on Sunday without violating the law.

It seems to some of us that this, right to work on Sunday, would help a good deal. As it is now, if Saturday afternoon happens to be rainy or otherwise unsuitable, necessary work has to be put off a whole week, which might ruin a garden. A small "dinghy" garden may be worked evenings, but to do any effective work a whole day or more is needed. When help is so scarce and all men working six days on munitions, it would seem as if the addition of another day would be desirable.

It would seem as if the people petitioning for money from the city for swimming pools might "chip in" a dollar or two apiece and get the desired facilities. A good-sized circus tent, which can be hired by the week, is all that is needed; it could be taken down in the fall.

There are several good swimming places where such tents could be erected. This procedure would give fairly good facilities at once. A small charge of a cent or two would probably cover most of the expenses.

Yours truly,
N. C. MILLS.
595 Chamberlen Street.

In regard to our correspondent's inquiry as to liability to the law for Sunday gardening, he is informed that the police consider they have no authority for pulling up a man for pulling up a weed on Sunday if it can be considered a work of necessity by a liberal construction of the Lord's Day Act, which forbids pursuit of one's usual occupation for gain, but permits Sunday works of necessity. If a man, working long hours through the week, without time to do gardening work, sees his crop suffering from lack of attention, a little work upon it on Sunday may reasonably be regarded as a work of necessity, reasonably coming within the exception of the law as to Sunday labour. Sunday gardening may be, rigidly regarded, a technical breach of the law; but on occasion, and under circumstances cited by our correspondent, not of the spirit of the law as interpreted by the great Law Giver, who declared the Sabbath was made for man.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In my letter of yesterday re bathing beaches, I inadvertently left out the initials of Mr. Denne. Several gentlemen who signed the petition have telephoned to ask if I was referring to Mr. Roland Denne. As my omission has probably caused Mr. Roland Denne considerable embarrassment I wish to say how sorry I am for the omission and to say I was not referring to him, as I understand he is heartily in favour of the bathing beaches.

J. W. WORTH.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have been quite interested in following the agitation for a "free market," and as the people who are pushing for this change have only asked for a small part of what we should do to oblige the farmers, I will tell you something now.

First—I quite agree that the charge of two cents a basket now charged a farmer's wife for the convenience of a market building is altogether too much. Even if our citizens are paying taxes to put this building up and keep it in repair, that is only a small part of what the taxpayers ought to do to help the poor farmers' wives. In these times where there is so little demand for everything the farmer has to sell, and when he is selling it so very very cheap, I certainly think we ought to oblige them and throw off that two cents and let them live in our house without paying any rent.

Second—As to the police. They should certainly be called off. What right have they to look on while a farmer's wife is selling her butter. Suppose she does charge the city woman for a pound of butter and only give her half a pound, what business is that of the police. Or suppose the farmer sells a peck of potatoes and charges the man for a bushel, what difference does that make. If any of our storekeepers sell short weight, then call on your police and sock it to 'em for all you are worth, and for all he is worth too, but you must not say anything to the farmer or his wife when he does wrong. Oh no. That would hurt the market.

Third—Having done this much for the farmer, why not go a little farther? I would therefore suggest that every farmer coming to town from any place between Toronto and Montreal, be refunded the price of his railway ticket, and that he be asked to bring along his wife and all the children. No matter how much this amounts to it can be added to our taxes. If the two cents now charged for a free house is objectionable, surely this free railway ticket would be a fine thing, and it would bring a lot more farmers to our market.

Fourth—Having invited the farmer to your town, why not use him white, while he is here. I think we should therefore build a fine new hotel for his special use, furnish him with meats free, and do everything we can to let him down easy. You know the more we do for the farmer, and the less we charge him for it, why the better he likes it.

These changes which I have suggested, would I know cost quite a bit of money, but be sure and don't ask the farmer to pay any part of it. Just add it on to our taxes. It will cost each of us $10.00 a year, but we won't mind that because it will be for the good of the farmer.

It's all right for one or two of our George Street Merchants to try and push this free market through as they expect to increase their business enough to pay their part of the extra taxes, but who is going to help the workingman pay his share. If the farmer does not pay for what he gets, then some one else has to pay it for him.

WANT MORE BRITISH TROOPS.

LONDON, March 21. — In an appeal to employers to amalgamate by pooling their interests so as to release all available labor to fill gaps in the British Army Colonel Sir Neville Chamberlain, the director of National Service, says:

"When the Germans make a stand we will see terrible fighting and heavy casualties, and in order to defeat them and secure a decision this summer we must keep the army reinforced.

"It is a long way from Bapaume to Berlin, or even from Bapaume to the Rhine, and we must prepare for the fierce battles to come. We must not let the army languish for reinforcements, and therefore must rob some trades of their labor in order to fill the places of men who have gone to join the army in other places."

EVERYDAY READING

"If a man die, shall he live again?" In this question two states are brought before us, namely a state of life and a state of death. Outside of man, in the animal kingdom, and in the vegetable kingdom, we also see life and death. We know after all that is said and done, very little of the quintessence of life. But how plain to us is death—a cessation of all vital functions and no susceptibility of renewed action. The question is propounded by Job, shall man, who is mortal, live again after dying? This question cannot be answered in the affirmative, unless the supernatural takes place, even the resurrection. Man is mortal and God is immortal. To be immortal is to be without possibility of dying. The answer to this all important question is found in Jesus. The wages or the result of sin to all mankind is death: but the love of God to all mankind is: the free gift of eternal life, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. By the man, Adam, came death; by the man, Christ Jesus, came life. Jesus said: "I am the resurrection and life." So we see, the resurrection or living again of man, and the eternal or immortal life come through Jesus, and comes to man as a free gift. Why should we be so indolent as not to seek to know the things freely given us by God Some may say I am all confused, and I cannot have any certainty concerning these things. There may be just cause for confusion on your part; but there is no reason why you stay confused; for the very day a man seeks God with all his heart, that very day He shall be found; that is, he shall know God and His will concerning them. God, the Holy Spirit, will make known unto him Jesus, who is "God manifested in the flesh." Having accepted Jesus as your Saviour and Lord, it is then the Spirit's work to guide you into all truth. To you who have no hope beyond this life and have no acquaintance with God, and cannot look up and call Him your Father, I would earnestly and cordially invite you to heed the call of Jesus "Come unto Me all ye that labour and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." And please note that the very present moment is your opportunity, for NOW is the day of salvation. Get a knowledge, an assurance, so you can say with gladness, I speak of that which I do know.

The Tuscania Brings 32 Passengers With Wild Tales From the War Zone

According to a passenger, the Tuscania had a submarine and raider scare: there was also a report of the sinking of a big steamship by a U-boat near Havre, the accidental sinking of a British submarine, with the loss of its crew of eighty in the harbor of Greenock, and finally, an aviation adventure.

When two days out from Glasgow, which the Tuscania left on March 10, and when the vessel was three hundred miles off the Irish coast on the outer fringe of the submarine zone, there were four blasts blown, according to several of the passengers. This was understood to be the signal of submarine danger, and was a call to everybody to go to the station assigned. There was no submarine in sight, but the Tuscania did some swift zig-zagging, which was construed to mean that there was a U-boat nearby. Captain McLean, commander of the Tuscania denied that he had seen any U-boat.

The night before the Tuscania reached New York a large steamship which appeared to be an oil tanker, came in sight and, according to the passengers, followed in their wake. They said that the Tuscania made a semi-circular detour, as if to shake the stranger off. Finally the Tuscania out distanced her. "It must have been a raider," said one of the passengers. His description of the vessel, however, tallied with that of a British patrol steamship which has been seen lately by several other vessels.

Another passenger said he had heard of the accidental destruction of a big British submarine at Greenock three days before the Tuscania steamed from Glasgow. Of the eighty-one in the crew, he said, only the commander escaped alive. The same passenger was authority for the statement about the sinking of a French steamship near Havre.

"Warren Peck, an American aviator who has been very successful in the Royal Flying Corps," said another passenger, "was makin' tests in the Somme region for altitude on February 1. He had reached a height of 14,000 feet when he fainted. When he recovered consciousness his aeroplane was still awhirr. His watch showed him that he had been unconscious an hour and ten minutes. His barograph recorded rising and drops, ranging from four to 5,000 feet.

"He was in a bank of clouds, and when he got out of it he saw far below what seemed to be a flock of sheep. He landed among them. He found himself one hundred miles from the place where he had ascended. He lost consciousness again and was found and taken to a hospital. He had come out of it on! a few days before I saw him in London several weeks ago."

WEDDING BELLS

McDONALD—KENNEDY.

Quietly last night at 8.30 at Trinity Methodist church the wedding was solemnized of Sybil Franc Kennedy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnston Kennedy 503 Bolivar street and Captain Wilbert L. McDonald, 235th Battalion, Ottawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald McDonald, Weston, Ont.

The bride, who was attended by her sister, Miss Enna Kennedy, looked very lovely in an apple green silk poplin suit, grey hat, gloves and shoes, moleskin and battleship grey fox furs and carried a bridal boquet of pink roses. Miss Enna Kennedy was very pretty in a grey silk poplin suit with hat to match and touches of mauve.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the bride's home, after which the happy couple left for a honeymoon in Quebec and Montreal. They will reside in Ottawa until Capt. McDonald leaves for overseas. Mrs. McDonald is a graduate of Civil General Hospital and has nursed in Peterborough for some years.

Lands Home After Ten Years To Find His Brother Frozen

Clarence Stull Had Lived Alone—Not Seen for a Week.

GUELPH, March 23.—When John Stull, who has been making his home in the west for the past ten years or more, arrived at the home of his brother, Clarence Stull at Rockwood, he met with a surprise which was a decided shock. He got off the train which arrived at Rockwood, and went to his brother's house, opened the front door and saw his brother sitting in a chair in front of the stove, and on going up to him found that he was cold in death and the body frozen stiff.

Mr. Stull at once went out to find a physician and Dr. McCullough responded, and Constable Pearen was also notified. An examination of the remains was made and it was the opinion of Dr. McCullough that the unfortunate man had been dead for some time and that he had probably died of heart-disease and had frozen afterwards. After a coroner had considered the matter fully, it was decided that an inquest was unnecessary, as there were no marks of violence on the body and no suspicious circumstances.

The deceased was a man about 50 years of age and had lived in Rockwood many years following the trade of a painter. He was a quiet man, who attended to his own affairs and did not have much to do with anyone else. Some of the neighbours think it must be almost a week since they saw him around. He lived alone, but a sister resided with him up till a short time ago, when failing health prompted her to move to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Cuthbert, 45 King Street, Guelph, where she remains.

Deceased also has a sister, Mrs. Twobey, residing in Buffalo. He was unmarried. The affair has created quite a sensation in Rockwood today.

BIRTH.

TOWNSEND.—In Peterborough at No. 151 Hart Avenue on Monday, March 12th, 1917, to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Townsend, a son.

CITY MAY LOSE $1,200 TAXES FROM HOTELS

If the proposed amendment to the Ontario Temperance Act goes into force suspending business assessment on Standard License hotels for three years, it will mean a loss of $1,200 to Peterborough this year. This is the computations of the business tax on a local assessment of $46,000 at the 1917 rate of 26.8 mills.

INDIVIDUAL PATRIOTISM.

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.—If war comes Philadelphia will do its bit. Wealthy men of this city, according to J. H. R. Cromwell, stepson of E. T. Stotesbury, are ready to spend $50,000,000 to build submarine chasers for the government in the event of hostilities.

Their identity he would not disclose. He contented himself merely by saying that the $50,000,000 would be pledged as soon as war was declared.

"I am willing to contribute my share," he said. It is believed that his stepfather, Mr. Stotesbury, will be one of the heaviest contributors to the immense fund.

Mr. Cromwell was in court to-day to vouch for the character of Captain Charles Thumm, the skipper of his 25 knot Needeva II. Captain Thumm, who came here from Norway, appeared in the naturalization court to apply for his second papers. Mr. Cromwell's speed craft carries a wireless, and is capable of being well armed She is valued at $75,000.

Railway Smash Near Pembroke

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PEMBROKE, March 26.—Thomas Freeland, brakesman was killed, J. McIntyre fatally hurt and other trainmen seriously injured in a C.P.R. wreck at Moore Lake.

The north country policeman is usually not without humor of a kind, although perhaps his answers are occasionally unconsciously amusing. An English tourist was doing the Scottish highlands and, foregathering with the village policeman in an out-of-the-way place he said: "I suppose you have some pretty long tramps in this district, my man?" "Weel, I'm thinking," replied the worthy keeper of the peace, as he surveyed the lengthy stranger with somewhat sarcastic eyes, "you're the longest I've seen yet."—Tit-Bits.

Three Hundred Refugees Succumb To Hardships Inflicted By The Germans

Ill Clad, Ill Nourished Refugees Were Forced to Wait in Freezing Cold Weather For the Arrival of the German Officers—150 Victims Were Buried Coffinless in a Corner of a Village.

IN THE WAKE OF THE RETREAT

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

(By Henry Wood, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE PATHWAY OF THE GERMAN RETREAT, March 26.—More than three hundred women, children and men are known to have succumbed to the hardship, exposure, brutality and the starvation which the Germans imposed upon the French civil population immediately preceding and during the retreat. At Chauny alone I learned officially to-day the victims number one hundred and fifty. They were buried, coffinless, in a corner of the village. Deaths are still occurring daily among the refugees now among French care.

Along the roads leading from Ham, Guiscard, Chauny, Terrigier and LaFere to Noyon, where on Tuesday I personally met only refugees fleeing afoot from the German bombardment, I encountered to-day long automobile convoys. After taking munitions and supplies to front points where fighting is going on, these automobiles were returning laden with refugees too sick or exhausted to proceed afoot. These were mostly the aged. Many were dying from hardship, exposure and starvation—but as they declared, dying happily knowing their villages were redeemed and surviving loved ones free from German domination. Many of these casualties resulted from the Germans' barbarous "inspection" orders immediately before they started retreat. In a temperature ranging from zero up they were gathered in open squares. The sick were carried in on litters by their friends. From six o'clock in the morning, the hour set for the inspection, these ill-clad, ill-nourished refugees were forced to wait in this freezing cold—without shelter, without food—for five or six hours before the German officers arrived.

At Chauny where six thousand women, children and aged men underwent such an ordeal, three died in the open street before the inspection was concluded. Thirty died the following night from pneumonia, lung congestion and pleurisy. This was true not only at Chauny, but of other concentration centres as well. Regular crews of destroyers systematically burned and dynamited houses in other parts of the city. Moving vans carried off to Germany furniture and valuables. Some officers—from General Von Lleick down—carried off furniture from rooms which they personally occupied, burning what remained. Some officers apologized to the people declaring they were forced to carry out the Kaiser's orders.

HOW BIG LEAGUE CLUBS LOOK AS TRAINING CLOSES

NEW YORK, March 21.—With the axes beginning to swing in training camps throughout the country to-day fans are able to get a tiny glimpse at what may be expected when the National and American Leagues plunge into the annual flag chases.

There is little change from the pre-season dope that emanated from the stove league. The National League has its strong teams; the American has its—a matter of careful conditioning, freedom from injuries when the season starts, and the natural things that go to make up a baseball season will settle the issue, as always. In the American League Boston, Chicago, Detroit and New York stand out as the best balanced teams. Many experts are favouring Chicago to win a pennant this year. They bank on the comebacks of the Comiskey hurling corps, at one time as good as they grew. Jim Scott is said to be showing better than he has for several years, and Reb Russell, it is persistently declared, is having success in his efforts to iron the kinks out of his left flipper.

It has been positively stated there will be no experimenting with Chicago's South Side team this year. Veterans, tried and true, will be found filling all the holes wherever possible there apparently are two holes, good sized ones on that club—one at first base and one at shortstop.

Chick Gandil may fool the multitude and prove himself to be just the man the White Sox have been looking for. Anyway it is certain that neither Jack Ness of Fournier is capable of doing a major leagues day's work. Ness will not be among those present when the season opens. There are several recruit first baggers among the Six who may be able to do something. The presence of Terry at shortstop looks rather bad for the Sox, when the trouble is taken to gaze back over the sterling efforts of Buck Weaver. Weaver will be at third base.

Detroit will start the season in the same fix as formerly—a lack of an adequate hurling staff. New ones must be developed or the old one must improve if the rest of the leagues continues at the old gait. Boston's chance lies in Jack Barry and his ability to keep the old machine from rusting. He will get the same start as was given Bill Carrigan, a year ago. The team is a wonderful one, capable of winning any pennant, if it is in the right shape.

New York, a young team, full of pep, punch and speed, may prove the dark horse of the race. Bill Donovan has assembled a fine outlay of men for the Yankees and is bound to cut a big figure in the fighting.

Connie Mack is sending out optimistic signals from his Florida training camp and it may be that the former demon world's series winner will get a running start for more fame and glory. He has some excellent material from which to build.

The National League seems to be all New York, with a remarkable infield defence and a slowish outfield to back it up. McGraw's hurlers are not the best in the league, but his hitters will spoil many a dinner for the other pitchers. The Braves appear to be the most dangerous opponents of the Giants, with the Phillies and Dodgers running in the order named.

So many many pretty combination dresses can be made from remnants that one can have several summer frocks at small expense.

Half the battle in the use of Paisley shawling is the use of some very rich plain colour with it—russet or wine red, for instance.

Allies Continue Advance On Western Front

British Troops Have Occupied the Village of Roisel, Seven Miles East of Peronne—Many German Positions Wiped Out By Canadian Guns.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, March 26.—Allies continue to make big dents in the "Hindenburg line." Germans are fighting hard for every foot of ground. British troops have occupied the Village of Roisel, seven miles east of Peronne. In heavy fighting at Beaumetzler-Cambrai, the Germans gained temporary footing, but were immediately driven out. Stewart Lyon says the Germans' best divisions are fighting against the Canadians, and Canadian guns have wiped out many big German positions.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT.

PARIS, March 26.—The French statement reports further progress towards St. Quentin and on the east bank of the Aillette and north of Soissons. German trenches were captured in the Verdun region. Late Saturday French troops captured two advance forts in the defensive system of LaFere. They also crossed the west bank of the River Oise from the outskirts of LaFere and captured several villages on the east bank of the Aillette River.

Kaiser Obsessed By Awful Fears

Author of "I Accuse," Prophesies German Emperor's Abdication and Paints Grim Picture of Conscience-Stricken, Humiliated Man, Fearful of His Own Son and of His People.

PARIS, March 26.—The abdication of the German Emperor is forecast by the former German magistrate who wrote the celebrated book, 'I Accuse' in an interview published in "Oeuvre". He says:

"The Kaiser is obsessed by the thought that he is responsible for the war, a thought which poisons his whole existence. He feels that he is menaced by three enemies at home, without counting those abroad: First is the Crown Prince, the real author of the war; second, the Junker pan-Germanist—you cannot imagine the smouldering hatred of the Emperor for those whom he believes to be maniacs who are driving him into an abyss——; third are the people, not the Socialist party but the people who are starving and who he feels are growing in number and rising little by little against those who organized the war.

AGAINST VON TIRPITZ.

The other day at the meeting of the parliamentary presidents and the ministers of the federal sovereigns at which the submarine war was decided upon, the struggle between the Kaiser's party and that of von Tirpitz was most bitter. The majority against the Emperor was so great, however, that he was obliged to submit and pretend that he was convinced. In particular he was personally opposed to a break with President Wilson, but he was forced to consent. Documents will be published one day which will prove that secretly he did everything not to bring America down upon him and that he considers that the rupture was an irreparable mistake. The failure of the submarine war will soon show that he was right but it will be too late.

"The people he fears most are the anti-militarist, anti-Prussian Liberal Republicans who want the Reichstag to be based on universal suffrage. That is why Wilhelm is so anxious to convince the nation that he did not want war. All his proclamations are made to applause the Liberals and his famished and ruined subjects, whose murmurings are growing stronger. He wants to continue popular at any price and that is why he spoke the first word of peace. The people were grateful for it but the submarine war came and spoiled everything."

HIS PRIDE IS SCORCHED.

It is hard to realise how this Emperor, who enjoyed a popularity unexampled in our epoch, suffers in his pride. He alone, perhaps, in Germany knows the whole truth, since he alone has in his possession the elements for forming a judgment on the situation as a whole. How can he resist morally and physically under such a strain? Certainly he hopes sometimes, but less and less, for the success of the unrestricted submarine war which he opposed. He sees the isolation of Germany become more and more complete.

"Once he tried to initiate peace negotiations and failed. To try again would be to admit and proclaim to the whole world, but above all to the German people, which he fears most, Germany's real situation. If the Allies solemnly declared, as they did with Napoleon in 1915 that they would refuse to treat for pence with the Hohenzollerns, it would be a knockout blow. Our German people, who still believe in him, would abandon him, for peace at any price will soon be the unanimous and hidden thought of tortured Germany.

"What resource is left to him but a dramatic abdication in order to retain the sympathies of the German people and save the political future of Prussia. He will say: 'I sacrificed myself, to make peace. Without me those only are responsible who desired a savage war and the complete isolation of Germany, those who took at the beginning my son as their party leader and forced me to mobilize.

The Mayor and I in New York

(BY F. H. D.)

The Mayor and I were in New York. No, that is not exactly right. The Mayor was in New York, and I was with him. That's better, and besides shows appreciation of position. We must never forget the amenities of life. Any way, we were there.

We had gone into the big municipal building where the more important activities of the city are housed and had an interesting talk with Superintendent Fire Chief Kenney, and asked his opinion and advice as what best to do in resuscitation of a fire fighting equipment that needed some injection of modern system and machines. He dispensed freely and sensibly. His city pays him $25,000 per year to be sensible. We shared in the general effulgence of his knowledge.

Coming out of the building I lingered a few minutes to ask the floor-walker, who was pacing the rotunda, where one would go to see the ships of the German fleet tied up at the dock. He told me to get up on the Metropolitan Life tower and view the scenery. Coming out I found the Mayor standing at the edge of the sidewalk, with a Canadian eye open to collision with and by the hurrying throng and looking fixedly at the top of the tower.

"Whist, Mayor," I said. "Don't do that. You'll get a crick in the back of your neck. Besides the best families don't do it any longer. It's not good form. It's not done, you know."

"If it isn't," said the Mayor, "just tell me what the best families do and practice?" "They go up on top of the tower," I replied, "and look down." "Look down is right," said the Mayor. "Let's go."

We crossed the street and paddled and bumped through the current around the corner of the block that splits the mass of cars, hacks, trucks, and people into two definite streams. A safety first passage across the street, and we walked into the main hall of the big Metropolitan Life building. Any one with even small appreciation of decorative architecture must stop and look at the wealth of design and execution as displayed. The ceilings are particularly vivid in a wealth of dark blue, crimson and gold. Blazing in panels of ornate tracery and yet with a quiet elegance that marked a repressive hand. The motif is distinctly Moorish, the designs filched, I fancy, from that storehouse of best of Moorish art, the Alhambra. Wonderfully interesting and a fine example of what a diligent and capable insurance company with a treasury of other people's money can accomplish when it really tries.

We found a pirate standing guard at the nearest elevator. It was marked "express." "That," said the Mayor, "expresses my opinion. Likewise my haste." The blue-coated man separated us from fifty cents a piece, propelled us into the cage, where we were packed, with others, as tight as herrings in a barrel, and we began to rise in the world. Fifty-seven stories. Same as the varieties. The usual and decent formality of gentlemen removing hats was dispensed with. One could not get one's arms plucked out and up, so tightly were the inmates wedged. Standing room only, and mighty little of it at that. The trip upwards took a couple of minutes and we were unpacked and distributed along a narrow corridor, and ushered to a second elevator to make the final ascent. The platform reached, the whole of New York was ours.

The first impression is that one has seen it before. That is because the view has been photographed and printed in the illustrated sections of the Sunday papers time after time. So at first glance there was a semblance of familiarity. The salient features of the city, the park, bridges, skyscrapers, the two rivers, girdling the city on either side. To the south the expanse of the bay with the bronze Liberty standing sentinel. Over at a point, to which an advising arm directed attention, was a huddle of red and yellow funnels showing over the roofs of the warehouses that covered the docks and piers. These funnels were of the German passenger and freight fleet tied up and silent, because of Britain's might and control of the seas. Almost so far as vision could discern was a mass of buildings—the hives of the population of the great city.

Presently what appeared like a gigantic centipede came crawling around the corner of a street, winding its sinuous length as it moved along. Only one of the trains on the "L," and of which scores could be picked out in motion. At the height the roar of the traffic was hushed. Down on the pavements toy automobiles moved and crawled about. Figures of what we knew were men and women moved along and across the streets. Here and there a tree showed itself against the openings of the traffic. The whole combination of cars and people looked as if one had lifted the figures and objects out of one of the old familiar Noah's arks, and placed them about and looked at from an elevation, as while standing on a kitchen table. And yet these small mites were the heart and the soul of New York.

The gale of wind blowing in from the sea made it bitterly cold, though of a warm summer's day it would have been interesting enough to beguile a couple of hours. We left it, and came down to the floor of the hall and out on to the sidewalk. Pleased to have seen the sight and willing to remember. The Mayor proposed going back to the hotel for dinner. On reflection the hotel was found to be five miles away and the cars were seen to be crowded. The variety of street car moving up and down Broadway is constructed with the front and rear couples of wheels of standard size. The pairs in between are smaller. This arrangement enables the floors of the cars to be brought down much nearer the pavement than those used in Peterboro. Quite convenient, and we were told a concession to the tight skirt period.

We moved along, looking for an enticing sort of place in which to eat. Glancing at the window signs, as one will do when walking the streets of a strange place. Presently the eye caught sight of a sort of sub-basement entrance, with a name in queer letters over the door. Two or three steps down from the level of the pavement was the entrance. A glance inside showed long shelves, broad at the bottom and receding to the top in a kind of pyramid effect, and all piled with foods laid out in alluring display. The whole thing looked hopeful. We made to go in. "Hold on," said the Mayor, "this is some sort of a Jew place. What does that sign say" "Blamed if I know," was the reply, "It's Yiddish; who cares so long as we get filled up. We may find Abe Potash or Morris Purlmutter in here, for all we know. Let's take a chance."

The long and low room was crammed full of men. Most of them had their mouths full. Almost all standing up at holders and shelves and eating as if dear life were at a premium. Seemed from their attire to be of the broker and business class. Such snaps of remark as were discernable in the general hum were of stocks and bonds and money transactions. From this we inferred that the place was respectable, and that we being distinguished visitors from across the border were in good company. Had to walk the length of the room, say about eighty feet to find a place to stand and look about. Presently a couple of seats at a low table were vacated and we slid into the chance. More waiting. Evidently these people did not appreciate our distinguished patronage. Presently I caught sight of a boy and told him to bring something to eat. "Can't do it," he replied. "I'm not allowed to do it." "Son," he was told, "your usefulness so far as this ranche is concerned, is gone. Get your time and pay and get out. He grinned and slipped away. It was plain that if we wanted to be fed that we would have to feed ourselves.

I asked a man who passed and lingered for a moment in so doing, if anything would be served. He gasped out an enquiry as to what we wanted, and on being told "something in the meat line to start in on," pointed to a hole in the wall. Out of this hole a fair to middling good-looking girl was watching the crowd. We moved over and proffered a request for two portions of roast meat. The girl nodded, touched a button sticking up on a board near at hand, and before one could say Jack Robinson a shelf shot out and thumped the Mayor at about the waist line. On the shelf were two plates with meat, sliced, and a spat of mustard along the edge. "This," said the Mayor, "is so sudden. But let us take what is sent."

We carried the meat to the table, and set out to collect other edibles. The Mayor went off and I saw him prowling along a fringe of shelves loaded with pies of surprising depth, and finished off with a sort of white foam. These the Mayor shied away from. Too etherial for him. I lost sight of him as he ambled up the room but presently returned with a handful of round cakes with a hole in the centre, some bread a smear of butter and a quarter section of apple pie. I skirmished about and secured a few trifles, including two fat biscuits, three doughnuts and the inevitable pie, and something that looked like a fritter. This last concoction I found out later was a delusion and a snare. It is ever risky to experiment. On the table was a printed slip that looked like a subscription list. This we paid no attention to. It was, however, a list of prices.

When we had eaten and drunk, we prepared to depart. No one so far, had even hinted at money. We were as much alone and unnoticed as if stranded on an island in the Pacific ocean. I never saw such financial indifference. But some one might be watching for all that. So with our coats on arms, for one must not in strange quarters appear as if ready to make a dash for the door, we were told to go over to a certain corner, and find a man who would accept money. We did so. He was sitting at what looked like a combination of street organ and phonograph. A stream of men walked past, said something, laid down a coin or coins. He nodded, twisted a handle and dropped the money into a sort of hopper. It was neatness personified.

I said, "What will I give you to straighten up?" He replied, "You know." "Blamed if I do," I said, "You know what you have eaten." I had to make a mental calculation of the viands I had absorbed and ran the chance of leaving something out. But I managed to make a sporting list, and he said "Thirty cents!" The money was paid out, and with a flourish of the crank, went down the hopper.

By this time the Mayor has come into the running and arrived. He had stopped en route to view the charms of a specially brown and appetizing goose, lying on its back ready for the knife. "Don't let him stick you," the Mayor breathed, very much more of a subdued tone than he uses at a meeting of the Property Committee. "He isn't, Mayor," I replied, "this man is a public benefactor. You pay what you like, or rather for what you have eaten." The Mayor had to take a mental memo. of his home consumption and reached the conclusion after a couple of offers, that he had consumed about 35 cents worth. The statement was accepted and the money paid.

"See here, frind," I asked, "how much money do you lose from time to time? Do you say that anyone can come in here, eat what and how he likes, tell you it is so much, and you accept the statement, and the cash? If so this is a new one to me."

"That's our plan and practice," he replied. "No gentleman would come in here, eat and go away without paying. Also no one would be mean for a few cents. True occasionally a man will forget, but he always pays up afterwards. Only last week I had a man send 45 cents from New Orleans, that he had not paid when going out."

This was information. You see we were rather flattered, that is the Mayor and I. Observe the "gentleman." We were right in our class, of course. Recognised on the spot. And deferred to in such respect. Asked for a further explanation the grinder of the cash crank said:

"You see when we get rid of the—(grind of crank)—expensive orchestra, and the fancy finger bowls—(another grind, and a batch of coins slip down the chute)—we cut off a heap of expense. Then we have no waiters—(four or five spasmodic twists and more money)—only two or three to keep the shelves supplied. All extras have been clipped off. (A spell of furious grinding, as quite a crowd was going out). Look here."

He pulled a key from his pocket, unlocked what proved to be a sort of bin in the bottom of the contrivance, and, sakes alive! there was about a gallon of quarters and half dollars in the thing. "That has been taken since a little after ten, this morning."

We came away, rather puzzled. Because the prices of the food served at this place seemed ridiculously low, considering that the rent as the man said, was $10,000 per year. At the same time, across on the East side, wherever that is, women were raiding the push carts in a frenzied protest against the excessive prices asked for potatoes, and such foods.

A block or two along the street and we came to an old stone church, one of the few remaining local landmarks, and treasured accordingly. Looking through the iron fence surroundings, we could see many stones, some upright and many flat on the turf. That is on such turf as there was. We went in through a gate and looked at the inscriptions on a few. Presently a policeman, one of the very finest, poked his head through the fence, and asked what we were doing there. This enquiry should have been wholly unnecessary. He could see what we were at. I replied that I was looking for some of my ancestors. He said that I was looking in the wrong place. I came back at him and replied that I knew I shouldn't look down but upwards. This sparkling bit of repartee incensed him and he waved his club and told us to come out anyway, and we retreated with due decorum. Made what the Germans call a discretionary retreat. Let into the front of the church building was a stone panel the text of which stated that underneath was buried the body of the American General Montgomery who led the invasion and who held occupation of Montreal in 1776. Afterwards, in walking along Notre Dame street, in Montreal, I called the attention of the Mayor to a brass medallion set in the wall of an old stone building at the corner of St. Denis Street. The building was the identical one in which General Montgomery held and made his headquarters while in command in Montreal in the long ago.—F. H. D.

DRINK HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST

Says you really feel clean, sweet and fresh inside, and are seldom ill.

If you are accustomed to wake up with a coated tongue, foul breath or a dull, dizzy headache; or, if your meals sour and turn into gas and acids, you have a real surprise awaiting you.

To-morrow morning, immediately upon arising, drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is intended to first neutralize and then wash out of your stomach, liver, kidneys and thirty feet of intestines all the indigestible waste, poisons, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal.

Those subject to sick headaches, backache, bilious attacks, constipation or any form of stomach trouble, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin enjoying this morning inside-bath. It is said that men and women who try this become enthusiastic and keep it up daily. It is a splendid health measure for it is more important to keep clean and pure on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing disease, while the bowel pores do.

The principle of bathing inside is not new, as millions of people practice it. Just as hot water and soap cleanse, purify and freshen the skin, so hot water and a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Limestone phosphate is an inexpensive white powder and almost tasteless.

Coolie Labourers Now Working Upon French Soil

The pick of Chinese skilled and partly skilled labourers is being sent from Tien-tsin, China, to France, at the rate of more than 1,000 a week, and from Indo-China to France in at least equal numbers, mainly to work in French munition factories, according to a representative of one of the largest British manufacturing and trading concerns in China, now on a visit to the New York branch of the company.

"They are carried over to France at the rate of between 2,000 and 3,000 a ship," he said. "It does not take a large ship to carry 2,000 Chinese, for they go practically as freight. A Chinese can flourish in a space that would hardly do a white man for his grave.

Many Six-Footers.

"Only the best selected stock is going to France from Tien-tsin. A large percentage of the men are six feet tall. For the most part they are Chinese who have learned something about machinery in British mills and factories or in construction camps. Some are agricultural labourers, taken to France to increase food production.

"The exportation of Chinese to France has been going on at Tien-tsin for considerably more than a year, and the number of Chinese now in France, including those from French China, is probably considerably more than 100,000.

Strange Contracts.

"Before they can be induced to leave China these Chinamen all insist on a contract providing not only for their wages, which are small enough, but binding the French Government to ship their bodies back to China for burial if they die in France. It also provides in detail for the apparatus of a Chinese burial. Every Chinese who dies must have a new set of clothing for his appearance in the future world and for the food which goes for the spirit of a Chinese of his class, from rice to roast goose and pig. He must be assured that other funeral ceremonies will be faithfully observed, such as the burning of a string of tin foil imitations of Chinese money, the burning of a paper house and of a paper chair or carriage.

Get Double Wages.

"In our factories in China we pay Chinese workingmen who have some mechanical knowledge 12 1-2 cts. a day American money. The contract which induces them to go to France provides for wages of 20 or 25 cents a day, and that is enough to recruit the Chinese as fast as ships can be found to carry them out.

Good Agriculturists.

"There is no doubt of the great value of these Chinese in adding to the man-power of France. They are hard workers and, while they have not quite the stamina of Europeans, they are willing to put in long hours and live on very little. Only those are taken who are found to be of better intelligence than the average Chinese workman. I should say that, generally speaking, three of them would be the equal of two Europeans in the less skilled labour connected with making munitions. They rank even higher as agricultural labourers.

"There is an inexhaustible stock of Chinese fit to meet the required standards, and the loss of those who have gone has hardly been perceptible on industries in China.

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP
YOU SHOULD USE
MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS

Sleeplessness is caused by the nervous system becoming deranged.

Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be assured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. I tried several doctors, but they did me practically no good. I noticed your advertisement, and immediately tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am proud to say they cured me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or three for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The eyes of the world have been focussed on the Russian Government on account of the revolutionary activities and, at this time, it is interesting to note that the Princes of the Russian Royal household are keen bicyclists. These Royal lads; Princes Vasili, Rotislav, Nikita and Feodor Alexandrovitch, have been able to have anything their hearts desire, but they have spent a great deal of their play-time on bicycles. There is scarcely a Royal child in Europe who is not an ardent cyclist.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Twice a Home

A Widow's Experience

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

My love for Edward Lane began when we were both so young that neither of us could remember a time when it did not exist. His father's place was but a short distance from ours. Indeed, the rear line marked the limits of both places. On one side of this line was the playground of the several children, boys and girls, including Edward and myself, who lived in the neighborhood. I can remember as far back as when I was seven years old and Edward nine that in playing keep house he and I always played the part of husband and wife. There was a swing on this playground, and Edward's father put up articles for a boys' gymnasium. A little house four or five feet high was built for us girls and furnished with toy furniture. At times we would leave our dolls there all night, first putting them to bed.

When I grew taller I could not understand how I could have stood upright in that little house. And what seemed more remarkable to me was that Edward could have done so, for he was always a large child. And I remember that when he had been away to school for a long while and came back he was taller than the house.

By this time we were growing out of childhood into that intermediate period when, though boys and girls may feel love, they are not likely to express it. It is a period of transition from child love to real love. The boy mind is taken up with athletic sports, while the girl hides her secret almost from herself. Indeed, so nebulous is this period that in my own case it is difficult for me to recall my exact feelings. I remember them faintly and as existing at intervals. They were rather a small portion of my girl's existence than the whole of it.

When I was sixteen I was awakened to the true condition by the marked preference displayed by another girl for my Edward. From that time my love became the principal instead of a minor part in my life. I failed to conceal my jealousy from him, and this brought out his own consciousness of what was between us. There was no formal declaration, no conventional giving of the hand, not even the lovers' kiss. He merely said something about the other girl, I know not what, but it assured me there was no change in our position since the days when we played husband and wife at keeping house—no change in the position, but a great change in the condition. It had then been like a winter bud, but it was now swollen under a spring sun, ready to put forth leaves.

I sometimes wished that I could have experienced the proposal that other girls seemed to regard the next most important moment in their lives to their marriage. Edward and I had no occasion for a proposal. Our love was rather, as I have said, an unfolding of a bud than the birth of a butterfly. The only abrupt part of it was when he gave me the first kiss. I treasured that in lieu of a proposal.

When we were married great changes had occurred. I had been left alone in the world, so it was arranged that we should occupy my house. Our living room was on the second floor, overlooking the playground where we had pretended to be husband and wife. The faint dream of childhood had been developed to a realization of almost perfect happiness. If there could be a perfection on earth these five years of my life, from twenty to twenty-five, were such a condition. Two children were born to us, a boy and a girl. What seemed strange to me was that, though I gave them a boundless love, that which I bore their father, instead of being diminished, was increased. Truly love must be, like space, infinite.

Up to this point there had been an expansion of happiness. Suddenly there came a check. Our younger child sickened and died. I have described with some minuteness what I have likened to the gradual unfolding of a flower. I have no heart to give more than a brief mention of its blighting. Within a few months after the first death a second occurred, and within another year I lost my husband.

For a time I was in a sort of collapse, in which I did not take enough interest in my surroundings to be affected by them. After one has met with a serious accident or has been operated upon by a surgeon the senses are deadened; then comes the beginning of pain. It was so with me. When I became myself my surroundings were painful to me. Some persons similarly situated nurse their grief by living in such surroundings. I longed to get away from them. Friends advised me to seek recovery in the many new scenes and interesting objects that are to be found abroad. I took their advice. I sailed for Europe, leaving the place where I had been so happy in the hands of an agent for sale. One thing I was resolved upon—never to return to it.

It may be considered that my story is one of coincidence. It is more than that. It is an illustration of the very different conditions that may occur in the life of a single person. Masters of romance have maintained that there should be in song or story but one love. Playwrights never bring a second on to the stage. They portray rather romance than real life and do not give all that real life needs. They are of the same order as the people of India, who believe that the wife should die on the funeral pyre of her husband.

I may be weaker than some women or I may be stronger. Possibly I may have less depth of feeling, though that I will not admit. I saw only in nursing my grief a dreadful life before me. I recognized the principle that no two absorbing ideas can occupy the brain at one time. I did all that I could to interest myself in what was about me. True, I did not at first succeed and when I did only partially so. I dreaded the word forget, and yet I realized that to avoid suffering I must temporarily forget. I forced myself to feel that after a time I would be reunited with my loved ones and that meanwhile I must, except occasionally, put them out of my mind.

I made my home abroad. Three years after my bereavement I married again. I did so partly because I was lonely, partly because I wished for a man to rely upon, as is natural to any woman, partly because the man I married assured me that I could give him an interest in life and, lastly, because I became attached to him. He was an American, like myself, and, being wealthy, gave himself up to study. He lived abroad that he might write books which required his presence among the subjects of which he wrote.

For five years after our marriage we continued our residence abroad. During this period children were born to us. There was a tacit mutual agreement between us that I should not talk about the world in which I had lived. I saw that he would rather leave that to me, considering himself as having no part in it, and I had no desire to make him a part of it. He was absorbed in his literary work, and if I ever told him even where I had lived he soon forgot it.

Then he was called to America on a matter of some property that needed his attention. It was agreed between us that he should leave me and our children in Lucerne, where we were then living. He expected to be absent not more than two months, but soon after his arrival in America he was induced to write for a publisher a work necessitating his presence in America. He suggested my coming home with the children, but left me to consult my own feelings in the matter.

I had never intended to return to the United States, dreading lest it should reawaken me to my lost world. But with a husband and children that world had receded further and further from me till the consciousness of it had grown very dim. I wrote my husband that I would go back to the western hemisphere and remain there. I was tired of moving about from one place to another, and the children were coming to that age when they should have steady instruction at school. Our boys I preferred to bring up in America. I therefore suggested to my husband that he buy a place in which we might settle. He replied that he agreed with me and would carry out my suggestions. Later he wrote me that he had bought a place in the suburbs of the city wherein it would be necessary for him to do his work.

We arrived after dark. I was delighted at our reunion, as were the father and the children. I did not ask where our home was to be. I intended to be satisfied with it, pleased with it, wherever it was. We took a train and in less than an hour alighted at a station, where a carriage was waiting for us. It was very dark when we reached our home, and I saw nothing of it till I stood in the hall. Then I caught at a banister to prevent my falling.

I was in the house I had left more than ten years before with a blighted heart.

"My dear!" exclaimed my husband, starting toward me.

But in a twinkling I had recovered myself. And what had enabled me to do so? The sudden appearance of an object. Ah, these objects that come to us! How much more valuable oftentimes than realization! I must at least for the present spare my good man the inexpressible pain of knowing what he had brought upon me.

"Nothing," I replied. "A little giddiness at having been so long rolling at sea."

"Nothing you don't like, is there?" he asked anxiously.

"On the contrary, I am very well pleased. Let us see the rest of it."

He took me into every room in the house, a house that had been sold twice since I had parted with it and both times with the furniture included. Not for the world would I have betrayed that these rooms, closets, corners, with every bed, table, bureau, had been familiar to me from childhood. But when it was over I passed the night alone in a room opening into one occupied by the children.

No tongue or pen can describe what that night was to me.

When morning came I found that if I could endure the first shock I could endure more. I deferred from day to day telling what had happened. My husband was delighted with his purchase, and before I had gained heart to tell him my secret he had become a fixture in it. Months passed, then years. My husband is now an old man and my children are grown. None of them know that their mother has been living in her second earthly world.

And yet, after all, this coincidence has not brought me unhappiness. I have been living two existences, both of which are dear to me, the one near by, the other in the far past and future; the one of flesh and blood, the other of spiritual meeting of the two.

MARRIED AT 12 DIVORCED AT 20

BUFFALO, March 26.—Married at twelve, a mother at fifteen and divorced at twenty formed the rapid sequence of events in the shattered romance of Carolina Constantina of Niagara Falls.

Mrs. Constantina, through an interpreter, told the court she was married in Scranton, Pa., in April, 1909, and a year ago went to Niagara Falls to live. She says she is the mother of three children, aged five, three and one, and that her husband abandoned her in September of last year.

Witnesses testified of several parties and "big times" they had had with Salvatore, her husband. Justice Wheeler granted the decree.

WARNS GERMANY TO HASTEN REFORMS

SOCIALIST LEADER SAYS THE HOUR OF PRUSSIANISM'S DOOM IS ABOUT TO STRIKE.

BERLIN, March 21. — Philip Scheidemann, Socialist leader in the Reichstag, says in the Socialist newspaper Vorwarts:

"It does not require many words to explain why almost the whole world is arrayed against us. The answer is given quickly. The whole world sees among our enemies more or less developed forms of democracy, and in us it sees only Prussians.

"We have always answered by referring to the absolutism of Russia, but now Czarism has gone and the Emperor's successor is to accept the throne only if the representatives of the people agree. These representatives are to be elected on the basis of universal, equal, direct and secret suffrage.

"In Asia the empire of the Mandarins opposed every reform. They desired an emperor with absolute power as long as he did their will, and thereby undermined the monarchy and laid the foundation of a republic. In the European Central Empires similar spirits seek to build similar Chinese walls and hinder every reform. They imagine they hold up the time when they move back the hands to eleven.

"Why does the Chancellor shrink back now from unconditional necessity? Always the hesitator, the procrastinator, Bethmann Hollweg wants to begin to cure Russia after the war. Russia also promised all reforms after the war, but the war lasted too long for the Russians. Why postpone till tomorrow what is absolutely necessary to-day, what even the King declared years ago was one of the most urgent matters of the business of the State. Now is the time for decisive action. The difficulties which might arise if the Government adopts the Reichstag system of elections for Prussian elections are as a feather-weight as compared with the difficulties which will come if it does not do this. The Chancellor should not delay one day. The Prussian people as well as the other German States will stand as one man at his side if he acts decisively."

In a different strain the Lokal-Anzeiger, one of the organs closest to Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg, says:

"A change in the Prussian electoral system has been promised for a year, and after the war will be debated and put into practice with all quiet thoroughness. That is no longer news; it is an obvious fact. To demand it for to-morrow, and at that in connection with a hymn of jubilation for the Russian revolution, is so precarious a venture that it must be rejected. It is certain that Minister-President von Bethmann Hollweg intended no such result from his last speech."

DYSPEPSIA
MOST DIFFICULT TO CURE
BUT B.B.B. DOES IT

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure.

You eat too much; drink too much; make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of time before dyspepsia follows.

That forty-year-old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia, and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we receive from time to time.

Mr. Neil A. Cameron, Kiltarlity, N. S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what your great medicine Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I was troubled very much with dyspepsia for the past two years. I was recommended all kinds of medicines, but they did not help me any. At last a friend advised me to try a bottle of B.B.B. I took four bottles and was totally cured. I will gladly recommend it to all sufferers."

Duke of Norfolk Was a Typical "Johnny Bull"

A FEUDAL LORD YET SIMPLE- ONE

He was Intolerant of Those Who Laid Stress Upon His Rank.

The Duke of Norfolk was so generally recognized as the lay head of the Church of Rome in this country that many people failed to see in him the typical John Bull, says the Westminster Gazette. Everything about him was as thoroughly English as it could be—even the suggestion of constraint that seemed to be mingled with his splendid hospitality when, as often happened, he was called upon to act as host to distinguished representatives of the Vatican or of some Catholic Power. That he should have been chosen to conduct many more or less formal missions from England to the Vatican was natural and in this, as in all his public work, he proved to be an admirable public servant; but he had all the Englishman's love of domesticity—though his own domestic life was, for many years, one of deep sorrow, borne manfully—and of social enjoyment. He was fond of the theatre, a good novel: a good story, or a joke—even against himself; and his laughter was that of a man who has a contented mind and an easy conscience.

The Duke and Dress.

Stories innumerable are old of the complete disregard for appearances that was a characteristic of the Duke of Norfolk; but to accept them all at their face value would be to make a grave mistake. He certainly seemed to share the view that a Duke of Beaufort once expressed: "When I am in London nobody knows me, so I can dress as I like; when I am in the country everybody knows me, so it doesn't matter what I wear." But nobody had a stricter regard for etiquette and for absolute "correctness" than the Duke on great occasions. I think I never saw a figure of more perfect dignity than that of the Earl Marshal, in full uniform, wearing heavy gold spurs and with a very beautiful charger kept in waiting for him, as he stood in Palace Yard seeing that all was in order on the morning of the funeral of King Edward VII.

The Duke's "Grace."

The fact was that the Duke was a typical "grand seigneur" who allowed himself to be influenced by "what people would think" only in really serious matters. At Arundel he maintained almost feudal state, strangely mingled with simplicity and with a "neighbourliness" that was much appreciated by his dependents—by all the district, that is to say. The description of his crowded death-chamber, with "the heads of the household" among the mourning throng, might almost have been taken from a mediæval book of history. But he was intolerant of those who laid undue stress upon his rank. When he was engaged upon the preparations for the Jubilee of 1897 he summoned a number of newspaper men to Norfolk House to describe his arrangements to them. "Will your Grace do this....?" Does your Grace intend that ....? Will your Grace tell us....?" one of them asked as every fresh point arose. At last the Duke could stand it no longer; and he used the only "swear word" I ever heard from him. "No, my Grace is damned if it will! Now, gentlemen," he went on, as he turned his back on the offender, "is there anything more that I can do for you?"

Much of the income of the Duchy of Norfolk is derived from groundrents in Sheffield. This property was worth little enough when Judith, niece of William the Conqueror, brought it as part of her dowry to a Saxon Earl, from whom the Howards had it. At the end of the seventeenth century it yielded £2,000 a year, the population of Sheffield then being only 4,000. Now it is estimated the rents in Sheffield rise above £100,000 a year.

The train was late, even later than is usual on this particular line, and as they crawled through one station a weary traveller was heard to exclaim:

"What a villianous station this is! They try to irritate one on purpose. Look at those girls in the refreshment room. Why do they dress them all in black?"

"Don't you know?" said a fellow passenger, in a most solemn tone of voice, and, with a look of awe on his face.

"No," replied the curious and fretful traveller.

"Why," said the other, "because they are in mourning for the late trains."

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine —Here is More Proof.

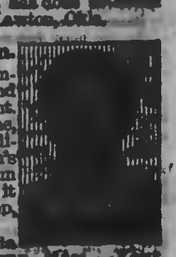
To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Crandon, Wis.—"When I was 16 years old I got married and at 18 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it restored me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. Mayme Aragon, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla.—"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—Mrs. A. L. McCausland, 509 Have St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.



Roxbury, Mass.—"I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were bearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. B. M. Oscoop, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

NO LACK OF EVIDENCE RIGHT HERE IN PETERBORO'

To Prove the Remarkable Upbuilding Influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food—Two Good Reports To-day

Peterborough, Ont., March 8.—Day after day we are printing in this paper reports from Peterborough people who have been cured by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

There are in the meantime hundreds of other cases of which we never hear. But you will find that your friends and neighbors know about this great restorative treatment, and have something good to say about it.

If you are skeptical, ask them what you may expect from its use. Then put it to the test. Use the Nerve Food regularly and you will soon find that weakness and disease are giving place to strength and vigor.

Mr. George Lee, 767 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., writes:—"I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food some time ago when I was in a run down condition, and found them to be just what I required to build up my system. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food also worked wonders for my wife. She had been suffering from nervousness and could not get a good night's rest. She would awake up at different times during the night, sometimes jumping right out of the bed. She tried doctor's medicine without success and finally commenced taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The first box helped a little, the second box benefited her more, so she kept on taking them until she grew strong and healthy. She has recommended this treatment to many of her neighbors."

Mrs. Wm. Herron, 11 Conger street Peterborough, Ont., writes:—"I suffered from nervousness, run down condition, and was unable to get a good night's sleep. The least noise would waken me and then I would lie awake for a long time. Trivial matters used to worry me, and I did not seem to be getting any better. Through a friend, I was persuaded to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I commenced using this treatment, and am now feeling much better. I can get a good night's rest, my appetite has improved; the Nerve Food strengthened my nervous system and now trivial matters do not worry me as they used to. This medicine has done me so much good that I cannot speak too highly of it."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50 at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Chetwynd's Death Recalls Romance And Tragedy

LONDON, March 21.—The death of Sir George Chetwnyd at Monte Carlo recalls the most famous love story of the Victorian era, linked to American interest by the fact that his heir, George Guy Chetwnyd, married in 1902 an American girl, Rosalind Holt Secor, daughter of a rick New York lawyer, who, however divorced him.

This story of love and the turf is recalled by the Star as follows: "Chetwynd was one of the famous figures of the turf and polo set and appeared in a famous turf cause celebre when he brought a libel action against Lord Durham for a speech at the Gimcrack Club in which the peer criticised the running of Sir George's horse Fullerton in the racing season of 1887.

"The Jockey Club refused to investigate the matter and Sir George brought an action against Lord Durham for $100,000 damages.

The case was brought before three arbitrators, James Lowther, M.P.; the Earl of March and Prince Soltykoff. Though the graver charges of pulling were found by the arbitrators to be unfounded, there were such unsatisfactory conditions about the running of the Baronet's horses that they awarded him only a farthing damages and ordered each side to pay its own costs.

"Sir George took this as a slur upon him and resigned from the Jockey Club. His jockey was subsequently warned off the turf.

"Sir George's turf career had a romance. He was married in 1870 to the Marchioness of Hastings, who died in 1907. This lady, whose beauty and form led to her being called "the packet Venus," was the only daughter of the second Marquis of Anglesey. They called her lady bird in the days when Queen Alexandra was a young bride.

"Lady Florence Paget, as she then was, was engaged to marry Henry Chaplin. She drove with him one morning to a well known West End shot to buy part of her trousseau. She was passionately attached to the wild Marquis of Hastings, and she left the West End shop by a different door, leaving Chaplin behind. She met the Marquis outside and married him.

MARQUIS OF HASTINGS A SUICIDE.

"Three years later a dramatic revenge came. Chaplin won the Derby with Hermit, a rank outsider, at 66 to 1, and the Marquis of Hastings went a cropper and lost so heavily on the race that he was ruined. Shortly afterward he committed suicide at the age of 26. "Judge not that ye be not judged," says the text on his tombstone at Kensal Green Cemetery.

"Three years afterward his widow married Sir George Chetwynd. They had a son and two daughters."

The story of the Marquis of Hastings's ruin on Derby Day and his subsequent suicide after marrying Chaplin's fiancee has been the basis of more than one melodrama in Drury Lane that has later been seen in the United States. Chaplin is now a viscount and is still alive at the age of 76. Chetwynd was 68.

The Meaning of the Revolution

J. W. Riddle, Formerly American Ambassador to Russia in New York Herald

The Duma has been greatly responsible for the growth of a spirit of democracy in Russia, for although the first Dumas did not accomplish much in the way of legislation, the members enjoyed the right of free speech and the newspapers reported what was said in the Duma, whereas they were prohibited from reporting public speeches made outside the Duma.

There never has been much manifestation of public opinion in Russia because the mass of Russian peasants have no opinion to express so far as foreign politics or national government is concerned.

The spirit of nationalism and a feeling of sympathy for all Slavs has been the one subject which has brought forth a manifestation of feeling on the part of Russian masses, who are intensely interested in the fate of their "Little Brothers," the Slavs who have been, or still are, under Turkish or other foreign domination. It was this spirit which brought about the war of 1877 with Turkey.

Even the Russian peasants who take no interest in home or foreign politics feel intensely on this question of nationalism.

The revolution in Russia seems to me to be more a purging of foreign influence than anything else. It is an expression of national feeling.

There have always been many persons about the Russian court who have been strongly pro-German. The court itself, that is, the family of the Tsar, has always had strong pro-German sympathies. Although France has been Russia's natural political ally the court has always shown more interest for German institutions than for French.

A minor incident illustrates this feeling. On the birthday of the Kaiser, January 27, and the birthday of the late Emperor of Austria, August 18, the Tsar always gave a banquet to the Teutonic embassies, drank the health of the rulers and extended every courtesy to their representatives. But he did not pay any attention to July 14, the French national holiday.

Probably he considered Germany to stand for the principles of authority and autocracy, while France stood for democracy.

It is true that since the Japanese war there has been a certain development of the democratic idea in Russia, but I do not think the people will want to do away with the throne. They do want to rid the government of some of the pernicious growths and barnacles that have adhered to it.

Russians always have enjoyed a great deal of democracy in their local government. The Zemstvos, which are somewhat like county councils, are chosen by the people, and their voice is supreme in matters of local government. In the present war the Zemstvos have been active in the forwarding of supplies and other military matters and have enjoyed the full support of the people.

The Russian government always has been patriarchal, and the peasant is willing to let it take care of national affairs.

Although the Russian army—and people have not always been one in the past, they are at the present time. They have one single purpose, and that is the winning of the war, which to them means the liberation of Slavs who are under foreign domination.

There has been sporadic revolutions in Russia since 1825, and it is said that Alexander II. had a constitution ready to sign the day he was assassinated. These revolutions have never changed to any great extent the form of government and have been mostly in the cities where students, college professors and educated people who had not a voice in the government have directed them.

Throughout the country the revolutionary movements have not been felt. Some times mobs burn houses and buildings in the provinces, but it is usually to get food and not to attempt to change the form of government.

The terrorists, anarchists and other organizations which in the past have continually been agitating against the government do not represent the people at large. Even they have been quiet since the war began and have refrained from embarrassing the government.

In short, the present disturbance is a revolt against foreign influence in the government and graft in the administration of affairs. The people are determined that the war shall be fought to a finish and they are forcing the government to do it.

I believe that if a plebiscite were held the majority of the 150,000,000 Russians would not vote for the overthrow of the Emperor or the abolition of the throne.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S COMBINATION CAMISOLE AND BLOOMERS

By Anabel Worthington.

In the matter of economical buying, the early spring months rank above all others of the year, for the white goods and fabrics that make dainty underwear. Most of the shops offer extraordinary values and no woman should let pass the opportunity to get a quantity for the summer's use at prices way below those usually asked.

In this accompanying sketch a very fascinating garment is shown. The design is adaptable for camisole and bloomers, or for corset cover and drawers. Cut on graceful, smooth lines, the camisole is gathered at the lower edge and joined to the bloomers with perfect fitting waistline, and which are smoothly shaped to the hips. Ribbon and elastic do double duty at lower edge. Drawers are made the same as bloomers—except that the lower edge is turned under for a hem. A buttonhole scallop, hand or machine worked, edging, lace, ribbon and insertion are usually depended upon to effectively finish any undergarment. Many women prefer decorous embroidery and neat ribbons to express daintiness in lingerie, others do not think quantities of lace at all vain.

Crepe de chine, batiste, nainsook, handkerchief linen and silk are always appropriate for underwear. When you have finished making this combination you will certainly "see" the value of the paper pattern.

The combination, No. 8,172, cuts in sizes 34 to 44 bust.

To make in size 36 requires 2½ yards of 36 inch material; 3½ yards of edging and 4¼ yards of ribbon.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.
Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

RUSSIA TO GIVE WOMEN THE VOTE RIGHT AT ONCE

LONDON, March 23.—A monster demonstration will be held in Petrograd on Sunday in favour of women voting at the elections for a constitutional assembly, says a Reuter despatch from Petrograd.

Grand Duke Nicholas is on the way to Petrograd, and former Emperor Nicholas, adds the despatch, is expected at Tsarkoe-Selo, where he will be met by General Korniloff, commander of the Petrograd district, with whom he will motor to the palace, escorted by a guard of cavalry.

"General Korniloff," continued the despatch, "informed former Empress Alexandra of her arrest. Proceeding to Tsarskoe-Selo with his staff, he telephoned from the station to the Court Chamberlain Count Benckendorff, asking when it would be convenient for the former Empress to receive him. General Korniloff declined to speak over the telephone of the object of his visit. Count Benckendorff asked him to wait at the telephone, returned in a few minutes and said that he might be received in a half hour.

"General Korniloff and his staff drove to the palace, where they were taken to the private apartments of the ex-Empress, who appeared in a few moments dressed in black, and asked all to be seated. Her first words were: 'To what am I indebted for your visit?' General Korniloff, rising, replied: 'I have come by the instructions of the Council of Ministers and I have to inform you of the decision of the provisional Government.'

"The former Empress, rising, said: 'I am ready to hear the Government's decision.'

"General Korniloff then read the decree and informed the ex-Empress that she was from that moment deprived of her liberty.

"A strict guard was established at the palace, the former guards being removed.

"The staff having retired, the ex-Empress asked General Korniloff not to dismiss the household servants, who were familiar with the habits, and needs of her sick children. She especially requested to be allowed to retain Sergt. Berevenko, the male nurse of Alexis, General Korniliff granted the request and withdrew."

The man who had made a huge fortune was speaking a few words to a number of students at a business class. Of course, the main theme of his address was himself.

"All my success in life all my tremendous financial prestige," he said proudly, "I owe to one thing alone—pluck, pluck, pluck!"

He made an impressive pause here, but the effect was ruined by one student, who asked impressively:

"Yes, sir; but how are we to find the right people to pluck?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

ts Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

WIFE SAYS HE OWES HER $4,950 ALIMONY

James J. McDonald, Wealthy Contractor, Arrested, Then Released On $1,500 Bail.

NEW YORK, March 24.—James P. Washington, D. C., was taken into custody by Deputy Sheriff Eisenstein and then released in $1,500 bail on a charge of failing to pay alimony amounting to $4,950 to his wife, Mrs. Edith McDonald, of No. 584 Academy street. Papers were served on him at the Aberdeen Hotel.

Edward H. Burger, lawyer for the plaintiff, said that Mr. McDonald was ordered to pay his wife $150 alimony monthly. He said that Mr. McDonald came here on a business trip and has been engaged in work on the Hayti Railroad.

An order was made in the Supreme Court last November to show cause why Mr. McDonald should not be arrested for contempt of court for failure to pay part of the back alimony. The order was extended to be made returnable to-day in the Supreme Court.

Mrs. McDonald asserts that she formerly was surrounded with luxury in Orange county, New York, where she had a country home but since her husband's alleged failure to pay alimony she had no funds and is living largely upon the money given to her by friends.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRL

Run-Down, Weak and Nervous—Made Strong by Vinol.

For the benefit of Peterboro school girls who overwork and get into highly nervous, weak and run down condition, we publish this letter from Dorris Coplier, of Fort Worth, Tex:—"I go to the high school and take music lessons and became nervous, weak and very run-down, so could not do anything. I would shake all over, and could have screamed at times and was really unfit to keep on with my studies. Mother purchased a bottle of Vinol for me and within a week I was better, and in two weeks I had gained five pounds and felt fine."

It is the curative, strengthening elements of beef and cod liver peptones, aided by the blood making, revitalizing effects of iron and manganese peptones and glycerophosphates contained in Vinol which made it so successful in building up health and strength and overcoming the nervous condition of Miss Coplier, and we ask every school girl in Peterboro who is in a like condition to try Vinol on our guarantee to return their money if it fails to benefit.

Allies Still Advancing On The Western Front

Another Peace Suggestion From The Enemy Is Likely

RAIN AND BROKEN GROUND FAIL TO STOP THE PROGRESS OF THE ALLIES

Spectacle of Wanton Brutal Destruction Wrought on French Soil Has Roused the French Troops to Such a Point That They Are Irresistibly Forcing Their Way Onward---Have Reached Folembary and Repulse German Counter Attacks Between the Oise and the Somme.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, March 26.—(French Official).—Despite a driving rain and every obstacle of broken ground, French forces still progressed to-day against the Germans. The official statement declared that General Nivelle's troops had reached Folembary, south of the forest of Coucy. During the night the Germans unsuccessfully attacked the new French positions between the Oise and the Somme. They lost heavily. The fire of the French guns north of Rheims exploded a munitions depot behind the German lines.

LONDON, March 26.—The destruction of which the retreating Germans counted most to hamper the advance of the Allied forces on the Western front may possibly prove the Teutons' undoing.

The spectacles of the utter, wanton, brutal devastation wrecked on French soil evacuated by the invaders to-day had roused the French troops to such a point that they were irresistibly forcing their way onward, even overcoming some long prepared positions in advance of the "Hindenburg lines."

PETROGRAD, March 26.—An attempt by German forces in the region of Postavy to advance after four successive gas attacks was repulsed by the Russian forces. The official statement said to-day that the enemy was thrown back. This is where the big German offensive is expected.

In the Caucasus the statement said the Russian forces had occupied fortifications taken from the Turks in the direction of Kanykin and Kalaichanin and Quentin Heights near Miayaga.

NEW YORK, March 26.—An unofficial statement from the German Admiralty, via Sayville, to-day, declares that the German subs have sunk during the last few days a total of twenty-five steamships, fourteen sailing ships and thirty-seven trawlers. Many of the ships listed by Berlin as sunk were French, but the list includes the twelve thousand-ton British ship Asturias, which the Germans admit was used by the Allies as a hospital ship. Of the neutrals, there are ten Norwegian ships in the list, one Spanish and one Dutch, also two American — the Memphis and the Illinois, which have already been reported, also two American schooners.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Two torpedoings, involving American sailors, but with no casualties, were reported to the State Department to-day. Men of the American tank steamer Healdton were suffocated, frozen or drowned when their vessel was torpedoed last Wednesday in Germany's so-called "Safe lane," off the Dutch coast, according to a report from Consul Krogh at Rotterdam to-day. His message, based on the captain's report, showed how the men were caught below deck in the flaming vessel, and how others, naked, were exposed for hours to below zero weather.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—The Supreme Court to-day ordered a mandate, issued immediately, turning over the German prize steamer Appam, interned at Norfolk, and her cargo to the British owner.

LONDON, March 26.—The American liner St. Louis arrived safely at a British port to-day.

LONDON, March 26.—Popular apprehension in view of persistent rumours of a German invasion of Scotland and an attack on Lowestoft were greatly relieved to-day when Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law made an unqualified denial in the House of Commons. He admitted that the home defence forces had been ordered held ready "for all emergencies," but declared this was frequently done.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Practically accusing Germany of regarding treaties as scraps of paper, the United States Government's note regarding the reconstruction of the 1799 treaty informed Germany that further "engagements" would be useless. The note, made public in full to-day, added that the Government is seriously considering whether or not Germany's "flagrant violations" had not abrogated the 1785, 1799 and 1828 treaties.

PHILADELPHIA, March 26.—Marines guarding the interned German ships at League Island shot two members of German crews early to-day when they attempted to escape, making final effort to avoid "shipment" to the south. Neither of the would-be fugitives was seriously wounded, and both were recaptured. Local police believe that most of the machinery of the two German boats, Prinz Eitel Friedrich and Kron Prinz Wilhelm, has been destroyed by the interned sailors.

OTTAWA, March 26.—It is not likely that small subscribers to the 150 million dollar Canadian victory war loan will get their money back by reason of the fact that the loan was over subscribed by a hundred millions or so. It is semi-officially announced here that it will be sixty-one millions subscription of banks which will be declined with thanks, and possibly some of the heavier subscriptions of insurance companies will be whittled down.

ICE JAMS BROKEN UP IN THE CREEK WHICH IS CLEAR

DANGER HAS PASSED

Incipient ice jams in the creek were broken up by the use of dynamite yesterday above the Wm. Hamilton's Company's plant, and at the Townsend street bridge. Fortunately a repetition of last year's damaging freshets appears to have been avoided.

The plan adopted yesterday was to dispose of the ice that had formed during the winter at these two points, thereby providing a clear passage for the ice from the upper reaches which broken into small blocks by buffeting against the rocks on the way down, usually piled up within the city. The preparedness plan, however, worked smoothly and offered a complete measure of relief. There was about an inch of water in the north shop of the Hamilton plant yesterday afternoon, but this has subsided. This morning it was reported that the danger of a jam seemed to have passed.

MANY SMUGGLERS CAUGHT BY WOMAN

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., March 26.—A female Customs officer, Mary White, paid a flying visit to Niagara Falls, Saturday evening, in time to catch the over-river "shoppers" returning to Canada, and caught a lot of women in the act of smuggling. Much goods were confiscated here and at Bridgeburg. Mrs. White's visit was principally to detect whiskey smugglers and it is said she caught many women with bottles who were smuggling them over.

Another Suggestion Of Peace From Huns

AMSTERDAM, March 26.—Intimation that Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg will make another peace suggestion at a meeting of the Reichstag on Thursday was contained in Berlin despatches received here to-day, quoting the Socialist organ, "Vor Waerts." The "Vor Waerts," in hinting at such a proposal, advocated an effort to obtain a separate peace with Russia.

RETIRED FARMERS WILL BE MOBILIZED FOR THE SPRING CAMPAIGN

Increased Production Movement Will Enable Retired Farmers, Policemen, Firemen and All Who Are Entitled to Two Weeks Holidays to Assist the Empire by Helping to Solve the Labour Problem on the Farms—"Boys in the Trenches Do Not Get Two Weeks Holidays," Said Mr. Gillespie."

JUDGE HUYCKE ELECTED CHAIRMAN

The mobilization of retired farmers, office men and others with two weeks or more holidays at their disposal, will for the next few weeks be the chief aim of the Speakers' Patriotic League to whom has been delegated the task of supplying the farmers in the community with enough help to ensure a maximum crop. This is a part of the increased production campaign that has been inaugurated under the auspices of the Dominion and Provincial Governments. On Saturday an urgent message came to this city inviting a local committee to call an emergency meeting and ascertain whether retired farmers and others were willing to help in the greater production movement. The call of the Empire for more food is urgent, but the Ontario farmer cannot respond unless labour is available for seeding which commences next month. In response to this message a meeting was held on Saturday evening in the City Hall. His Honour Judge Huycke was elected chairman. Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., informed the meeting of the intentions of the Agricultural Committee of the Provincial Government in respect to the urgent call for increased production.

BOYS WILL HELP.

"It is the intention of the authorities to seek the aid of every retired farmer or any person in a position to give as little as half a day or more in an endeavour to assist the farmer in spring seeding operations," said Mr. Gillespie. "In Toronto a number of firms are giving their employees three weeks' holidays instead of two and are permitting them to take them as soon as the spring seeding is under way. The same procedure will likely be adopted later on when the crop is ready for harvesting. The department has organized the High School boys and a large contingent will be on the farms by the twentieth of next month. Efforts are also being made to influence the farmer to use the best seed available and adopt any other measures that will tend to increase the production. In conclusion, Mr. Gillespie asked the Speakers' Patriotic League to assume the responsibility of forming a local organization.

Mr. Gillespie—"Yes, that is just the thing. Not a man at the front gets two weeks' holiday and that is all the more reason why every man, woman and child in this country should do their utmost to speed up production."

"The High School boys who are being sent out on the farms will be handled through the district representative of the Department of Agriculture," said Mr. Gillespie. "The boys will be placed out on two weeks' trial at a minimum wage of twelve dollars a month."

SMALL RETURNS.

Mr. Gillespie asserted that in the past the farmers have never received fair value for their products. He did not consider present prices excessive with a few exceptions. "Few farmers," said Mr. Gillespie, "make five hundred dollars in wages above their investment. That is one reason why the men were leaving the farms." Mr. Gillespie said that he kept a strict account of his farming operations, and as a result was in a position to say that he never realized as much as six per cent. on his investment.

Alderman Weir expressed a similar opinion. As regards the manner in which the majority of the farmers would use the boys entrusted to their care, Alderman Weir was of the opinion that the farmers would use them as well as a painter, a coal-dealer or any line of industry which might be mentioned.

"One way of solving the farm labour problem," said Mr. Gillespie, "is to have a house on the farm for the hired man, and farm in the winter as well as in the summer time. Too many farmers were indifferent to the possibilities of the stable in winter time. A farmer should make his stable a manufacturing place in the winter time," said Mr. Gillespie.

100 Inches Of Snow Fell During Winter And As Rain Is Conserved For Water Power

It may surprise many citizens to know that approximately 100 inches of snow fell durng the past winter, and that the average fall for a number of recent years was practically 96 inches. These figures were casually quoted by a gentleman in the Trent Canal office, where records of snow and rain precipitation are compiled in connection with the conservation of the water in the Trent system. Ten inches of snow are regarded as equivalent to one inch of water, hence the past winter's snow produced 10 inches of rain. The engineering department of the Canal working on these approximate figures can estimate the number of cubic feet of water the Trent watershed will produce. There is a certain loss through evaporation and soakage, and when this quantity is subtracted, the department has a fairly close estimate of the amount of water produced by the winter's snow.

The Spring rain fall is added, providing a total of the water held in the canal reservoirs. Briefly, therefore, the quantity and the location of the water is known, and can be accurately and easily controlled in its outpouring. The water supply for the power plans on the Otonabee and other rivers in the system can usually be maintained at a normal flow instead of the natural method of former years, when the river would rage in Spring and reach its minimum volume in late summer. This control of the water is the genius of the conservation system, the elaboration of which was prevented by the war. It has, however, been well advanced, and when completed will be an extremely valuable asset not only to the Central Ontario district but practically to he entire Province.

School Nurse Going On Overseas Work

Miss Una P. Kennedy, Public School nurse, has been notified to report at once at Kingston for overseas service. About a year ago she offered her services to the Government for nursing work. It is understood that the Board of Education is arranging to fill Miss Kennedy's place as soon as possible. As school nurse in Peterborough, she has been exceedingly efficient, and it was fortunate that the Board's first venture in this modern idea of caring for the children was entrusted to a nurse of Miss Kennedy's industry, tact and ability. A Lindsay nurse is under consideration as her successor.

ISOLATE ST. QUENTIN

LONDON, March 25.—Along the whole front of the German retreat the allies are advancing and a terrific battle is now beginning, which is likely to prove one of the great turning points of the war. From Arras to La Fere, a distance of fifty miles, the heavy guns are now booming, and reinforcements and reserves are being rushed up with the greatest possible speed.

The heaviest fighting is still going on around St. Quentin, where the French to-day closed in upon the enemy's lines for a considerable distance, and along the road to Cambrai, where the British have scored brilliant successes which may possibly have far-reaching consequences.

WOULD ISOLATE ST. QUENTIN.

Both the British and the French advances at the present moment are aiming at the cutting off of St. Quentin and the capture of that powerful point in the Hindenburg line of defence. After whirlwind fighting the troops of General Haig have flung the enemy out of the important centres of Roisel and Beaumetz-les-Cambrai, where desperate street-to-street and house-to-house combats took place before the Germans relinquished their grip. The occupation of Roisel by the British cuts the Cambrai-St. Quentin line, one of the chief supply lines on which the present German front is dependent.

Around St. Quentin itself the French have struck new and powerful blows that, coupled with the successes of their allies, threaten that stronghold very seriously. To-day Nivelle's troops smashed forward and drove the enemy out of the important line embracing Castres, Essigny-le-Grand and Hill 121, along a front of about two and a half miles directly west and southwest of St. Quentin. Time after time the Germans attempted to win back these positions, but all their furious efforts were unavailing. Stirred to a white heat by the spectacle of ravages committed by the Germans in the country evacuated by them, the poilus were not to be denied. Their charges against the enemy were irresistible, and they seemed fairly to race with one another for the distinction of being the first to smash up against the fire of the German batteries.

FLOODS BAR THE WAY.

But for floods and uniformly bad weather it is probable the French and British would hold the town of St. Quentin to-day. The Germans undoubtedly meant to hold this stronghold originally, but as the battle develops it seems not only that they will be unsuccessful, but that the place will fall into the hands of the French sooner than they themselves had expected. The entirely unexpected rapidity of the advance of the French and British forces has resulted in the interlocking of the opposing armies in a struggle of almost unprecedented in-

THE PENNY BANK.

Seventeen years ago, Peterborough narrowly escaped having the benefits in our schools, of the Penny Bank, which a Rip Van Winkle contemporary describes as an "educational fad," though prominent educationalists in the city of Toronto, the intellectual centre of the province, and a group of visionary "faddists" like the Bankers' Association, heartily endorse it as a most important educational feature in our schools.

The present attempt to get our educationalists out of the rut, is the revival of a spirit of educational enterprise, though apparently unsuccessful, and made a subject of cheap ridicule, is a move in the right direction; and The Examiner has nothing to apologise for in trying to rouse rut-arrested authorities.

In 1899, The Examiner, seeing from exchanges printed in enterprising educational communities, the success, in even its incohate stage, of the principles of the Penny Bank, collected information as to its working and benefits and placed it at the disposal of Dr. Burnham, a member of the School Board, who had on his own behalf also made inquiry, with convincing results. He introduced the subject of Savings (Penny) Banks to the Board, and its consideration was in June referred to a special committee composed of Messrs. W. H. Hill, W. B. Bamford, J. J. McBain, W. G. Ferguson and Dr. Burnham, chairman.

The committee, after "having carefully investigated the matter, including the evidence furnished by reports of the success of the system in other places" etc. recommended "that the system of Savings Banks be introduced into the schools in September next."

The committee after investigation were so thoroughly impressed with the benefits of the system, that they made preparations to procure the necessary literature, books, blanks, etc., to give it effect. The report was adopted, but the summer holidays intervening, in September a further report, recommending details of procedure, being presented, a motion was adopted to allow the report to stand in abeyance till the following January, and no more was done.

That this course was taken, is no condemnation of the principle of the Penny Bank, no more than the fact that the School Board in seventeen years has so deteriorated that, in the face of the accumulation of proof of the benefit and success of the Penny Bank it will not even consider the matter, nor listen to information that might shake its indifference into action.

This attitude is no more a condemnation of the principle of the Penny Bank system, than the existence of "slackers" is a disproof of the righteousness of the cause of empire, for which they refuse to fight, nor any reason why good citizens should not fight for the success of both.

SHALL WE USE OUR FULL STRENGTH?

When Parliament resumes in April, one of the problems it may certainly count upon facing is that of Dominion-wide prohibition as a war-time measure. What action will be taken is not as certain as is the necessity of such a measure in the interests of Canada doing her part to the fullest possible extent. One need not be surprised if effective action is taken. With the spectacle of an anti-British Cabinet minister publicly recanting his anti-Imperial tenets, for that is what Postmaster Blondin's late reported action amounts to, we shall feel no astonishment in the Government measuring up to the same standard of recognition of duty.

Canada has done much and made many sacrifices to help in the war. We have promised to enroll and send overseas 500,000 soldiers. We are considerably short of this mark with little present promise that we shall make good the shortage. But we should have probably had the full number overseas now if we could have counted as in the ranks all who have offered. It is not a venturesome conjecture to submit that if all the Canadians who volunteered and were rejected as physically unfit, had been possible of acceptance, Canada would have had her promised half a million of soldiers now under arms. The question of physical fitness, though a supremely necessary condition in the matter of fighting, is as important in reckoning upon the mobilization of our manhood in the interest of fighting the home battle of peace. We are not fighting alone to win the war. We must take our part worthily in the world, prepare to make good the biggest asset in national progress and efficiency—robust and high-principled manhood—which involves all the necessary conditions; and the one way, and as things stand, the only way, is to relieve the country of the weakening and deteriorating operation of the liquor traffic.

We have made a beginning in the provinces, and the splendid results, under even the heavy handicap of an inter-provincial liquor traffic, have furnished an ad captandum argument for Dominion prohibition of the liquor traffic for beverages purposes.

In view of the waste of food products, and the worse waste of manhood, such prohibition would seem to be an immense strengthening of the national capacity, for the best service of the Empire, and of this country. Statistics inform us that 150 million pounds of food stuffs were devoted last year to the manufacture of strong drink, which, consumed, induced a corresponding and much more serious waste of manhood and earning strength. It is stated that, large as has been Canada's contribution in men and money, we have in the past ten years wasted far more even in money value in hte form of strong drink. Is Canada prepared to throw her whole strength into the task of winning this war and preparing us for the work that will come after?

CANADA'S MONEY POWER.

If money is the fundamental munition of military success, then the British Empire is armed cap-a-pie. Great Britain's finacial achievements crowned by her recent 5,000 million dollar "Loan of Victory," has set the world wondering. But the outlying Dominions of the Empire are also doing their part. While Great Britain seems to be made of money, as witness her last loan of 5,000 millions—$110 per head of the whole population, the dominions are a good second. With the last Canadian loan taken into account, Canada has subscribed to war loans 350 millions; Australia, with only 4 1-2 million population, has contributed 380 millions; New Zealand, 40 millions; South Africa, 40 millions, and India is subscribing to a 500 million dollar war loan. Altogether, the outlying Dominions of the Empire have subscribed war loans to an aggregate of 1320 millions of dollars.

The success of the last Canadian loan of 150 millions, is remarkable only for its gratifying spontaniety of reply to the call for the new loan. No special organisation was necessary. Gilt-edge investment in earning power, plus undoubted security, plus patriotism, did the work. The appeal was for 150 millions, and intimation comes from Ottawa that this has been over-subscribed about one-third, and that the total applications will reach the immense sum of 200 million dollars. This response is not to be regarded with astonishment. The country has had unexampled material prosperity; banks, insurance companies, and especially industrial establishments, have been busy at extraordinary profits. There was much money available and it was freely offered. Nor were good investment and good security the only inducement. Pure patriotism influenced many business concerns. They withdrew capital and pinched themselves a little to make the loan investment, and invested in a war loan considerable sums that would have made larger earnings if they had been kept in the business, a condition that applies to a large proportion of the investments made; the banks, for instance, that loaned 61 millions, at 5.40 per cent., are accustomed to declaring 10 per cent. dividends.

The success of this and preceding loans indicates abundance of money in existence in Canada, though it is possible that a large amount has not yet been touched. The Monetary Times, in this regard, has this to say:

> Given, dramatically, the knowledge of a real crisis, with a war loan campaign organized by the best financial men of the country, it would be found that there are many millions of savings which have not yet been attracted to our government securities.

Though Canada's response in manhood, judged by the present response in recruiting, may not indicate a very keen sense of the value of the country we are asked to fight for, yet our response and our capacity for response in financial contributions (for a consideration) is proof of the large liquidable extent of our developed resources, a prospectus, so to speak, of the indescribable potentialities of a country whose practically inexhaustable resources are not yet one-tenth touched, whose area is not one-tenth occupied. It is no wonder that Canadians think that Canada is worth fighting for, and with investing in. We furnish the best security for investment in the world—we have developed wealth to meet far more serious financial obligations than we have yet assumed, and we have latent wealth, easily convertible into cash, to cover a hundred times any obligations we shall be asked to shoulder.

THE EMPLOYMENT OF BRITISH WOMEN AS SOLDIERS

Of all the innovations brought about by the war in the status of women, perhaps the greatest is the one hinted at in a modest paragraph sent out over the cables recently, to the effect that a force of British women was to be organized to carry on work behind the lines in France. According to an article in the London Express, the British military authorities have for a long time had regiments of women who not only attend to the housekeeping, cooking, and well-being of the men undergoing training in England, but who are upheld in their work by a keen spirit of patriotism, and bear themselves with military discipline and a full sense of what befits their position as members of a military unit. Now the scope for women soldiers is to be extended on far wider lines, and they are to be employed with the Army both in Great Britain and in France in practically every capacity in which they are able to carry out the work, and so release thousands of fit men for service with the regiments.

It has only lately been realized, says our contemporary, how much useful work women can carry out in that vast organization, with its network of different sections, which constitutes an army on active service. There are kitchens and canteens which women can run quite as well as men. Ther are offices and pay departments where the clerical work can be undertaken by the woman accountant or typist every inch as successfully as by the male clerk. Women in these days, thanks to their own energy and determination, are qualified to drive motor-cars and to take charge of technical stores which means a wide knowledge of bolts and screws and all the thousand-and-one pieces of mechanism that are required for motor-cars, lorries, and army equipment of this type.

These women are not merely employees of the army. They are recruited, disciplined and uniformed as soldiers, and this fact is one of the secrets of the great success of the plan. It has been found that putting women in uniform and housing them in huts is immensely successful. The mere fact of wearing uniform inculcates a sense of military discipline. The women are extremely proud of their position, they know that they are "doing their bit," and are thus able to be of direct assistance to their menfolk. They show themselves perfectly ready to adapt themselves to novel conditions. Discomforts are treated with a smile. A woman ploughing her way through seas of mud in a camp where the ground has become a veritable morass will treat it as a joke. They are obedient to orders, and even the strict rule that prevails in camps where the women cooks and waitresses are working that no woman in uniform may speak to a soldier within the camp precincts is seldom broken. The success which has attended the formation of these regiments women argues well for the new plan of giving them military work in France. There they will feel even more keenly the soldier's sense of responsibility and the stern necessity for discipline and obedience to orders. The happy day has dawned for women when it is no longer her duty to sit at home and wait. She, too, can be up and doing.—Montreal Herald.

THE ROBIN.

Dwellers in the country see many signs of spring. In town, apart from flustier efforts of backyard crowing and cackling or a sudden warmth in the air, with water in the cellar, our one grand sign of spring is the robin's return from abroad. This winter tourist noticed about Monday that a favourable gale blew up from the gulf regions. It felt uncomfortably warm, anywhere south of the Ohio to one in feathers, and as the wise robin snuffed it through his beak, he felt strange intimations of the northland, where once he was born and learned to fly. On the impulse he spread his wings, and scudding before the roaring southerly was soon in Canada, the fountain of song broke out at once, and, behold, he was warbling up on a spray with a soft, rich, maple-syruppy voice and people excitedly pointing at him.

It's the same old song from the same old bird. It asks a worm, and if the frozen nights still keep the various vermin bound in slumber, Robin will contrive to live for a while on mere song or expectations. Probably in the distant past of the glacial period our friend already sang this selfsame roundelay at the fringes of the ice-floe. It is a note that breathes away winter, melts ice and flatters worms and flies till they lose their heads. For a hundred thousand or a million years, perhaps, spring has come to this whistle, coyly induced, and with wild shying, but the lure is insistent in that swaying, slow, dancing, wooing contralto. A thousand-fold voice of Dixie-land ripples for the millionth time over our North and in response there cometh forth out of the strong the expensive sweetness of the ancient maple.—London Advertiser.

PEACE IN IRELAND.

The foes of Ireland's true progress must have been disappointed by the peaceful manner in which the national festival was celebrated in the Emerald Isle. In the Irish capital the "wearing of the green" was conspicuous on St. Patrick's day. There were races and football matches, but no riots, no attempts at a rebellious outbreak. The military preparations by the government were found to be entirely unnecessary.

Moreover, even in unionist circles an encouraging sympathy with Irish aspirations is now displayed. At the dinner of the Irish club in London Lord Northcliffe appealed to the men of Ulster to enter into consultation with the people of the other Irish provinces so that Ireland should take her share of the great world-struggle for freedom.

It is acknowledged that John Redmond, the Irish nationalist leader has been loyal to England under very trying circumstances. Surely something is due to these who have peacefully fought for Ireland's inalienable rights with the weapon of constitutional agitation.

The Irish people are not disloyal, and rebels like Casement and others cannot be said to have represented the mass of Irish opinion. A genuinely peaceful Ireland will be seen when all Irishmen, putting aside old prejudices, join in accepting a measure of autonomy for the entire country.—Rochester Post-Express.

It is said that men who never drink, smoke or stay out late at night live to a ripe old age. Perhaps that's their punishment.

Farmer Fined $20 and Costs For Being Drunk

A Douro farmer was fined $20 and costs of $9.75 this morning in Lakefield by Magistrate Langley for being drunk in a public place. The charge was laid by License Inspector Stewart on the ground that the accused was helplessly drunk on a load of logs driving toward the village, the reins trailing the ground and the horses faithfully jogging along at an accustomed pace.

BIRDS FLOCKING BACK.

This morning signs of spring had manifestly multiplied over night. The air was alive with a new life and the presence of birds that had closely followed the season in its northward moement. Robins, crows, blackbirds, the little song sparrow or warbler, the bluebird, the meadow lark, the plover, and other birds have returned apparently bringing in themselves the happiness of which they are scarcely more than a symbol.

WHY HE LIKED IT.

"I was rumbling along in a street car the other day when a batch of young fellers got aboard," says a ranchman, who is visiting in the East. "I judged they were college students by their funny clothes and queer-shaped heads. The car was pretty full, and they pushed and snorted back and forth in the aisle, tramping on people's feet and committing similar frivolities that-a way. Bimeby they all rared back and fetched loose a long yell. Then the nearest one to me too a look, and not admiring my face or something, says:

"'Well, my rural friend, don't you like it?'

"'Shore, I like it!' says I. 'I'm half-witted myself!'"

Peterborough, March 26, 1917

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I am quite interested in this free market, but fail to see any benefit in it.

If it is a bother to the farmers, paying the tolls on Saturday mornings or inconvenient to them, getting through to do their shopping, just let them write the city a check for $2,000 on the first day of each year, and that will save any of the delay.

If the merchants think it unfair for the farmer to do this, they can oblige the farmers by sending the same kind of stuff to the City Treasury Office and not have the ordinary ratepayer suffering by letting that $2,000 slip through their fingers, and the farmers laughing up their sleeve, getting $4.00 for a bag of potatoes and $35 for a few onions, and a free market, bread and honey.

About the policeman. Now without a doubt, there are a lot of honest farmers, and in the city too there are a lot of honest people,—but what about the dishonest.

A farmer's wife need not dread these brass button men, on less they have a piece of paper tied to the leg of a chicken in big figures, 4 lbs., when a matter of fact, there are only 3 small lbs.; or eleven eggs for a doz., or half peck apples for a peck. These are the people that don't like to see the brass buttons.

In my way of thinking it is the duty of our policemen to be on that market, from the time the door is unlocked till it is locked up again, and in plain clothes, as well as in uniform.

What are we paying these men for? To hide on Saturdays when the farmer comes, I suppose.

I don't think the farmers require any one to look up anything free for them, by the way they expressed their feelings Saturday. They don't intend to make it any freer for us, mind that.

I wish to change the subject to the people who are going to plant gardens. Our Lord did greater work than look after a bit of a garden, and he did not work on the Sabbath day.

Can a man do the work in a garden on the Sabbath day and in his conscience feel he is doing right. Would he be disappointed if he had a poor crop. I don't think he should be disappointed. Think it over.

Just a line about the Quaker Oats Co., and the overhead bridge. I appreciate the Mayor's suggestion that was in the paper a few nights ago, and have found a lot of ratepayers greatly in favour of it. We all understand what the Co., is that we are dealing with. That is where to spend that $2,000 that you are giving to the farmers and let the farmers build their own bridges.

Thanking you sir for this space in your paper. I remain.

Yours truly,
A RATEPAYER.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir: We, Mildred, Mary and Maud, think Mr. Worth's is a fearless, progressive and creative policy, and is away beyond the destructive policy of many others. Mr. Worth is humane and honest in his expressions of sympathy for our working sons and brothers and our grime-begrimed husbands. What would the town be without them?

If the Supervised Playgrounds Committee had used the money already spent in a bathing float on the shores of the river for our kids they would have demonstrated its uses and benefits to our city fathers, and amused the youngsters in a practical and far-more useful manner, in this land of big lakes and rivers, terrific winters and hot summers.

Keep the Supervised Playgrounds for your land-locked cities, but give us bathing places. Cleanliness has to come 'before' godliness! The children must be taught to swim!

Mothers are in a constant state of anxiety on their behalf as soon as spring opens up; as if the hardships of winter were not enough eating up all the man can make in the summer. Live and let live.

"SOME MOTHERS."

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Much has been said and written of late upon the subject of the future prosperity of the City of Peterborough, Ontario, and discussions have been held bearing upon the means of securing this.

Peterborough has been fitly described as a "City of Working Men," accepting this statement, would it not be better to re-write it and adopt as our governing principle, "Peterborough is a City FOR Working Men," since without the workers, prosperity must cease.

One question, very much in evidence, is that of our street railway system, now publicly owned, and presenting a fitting opportunity, in the writer's opinion, for making an experiment in the mutual interests of the citizens and the balance sheet of this public utility.

The writer would suggest that the City Street Railways be made a radial system within the present limits, taking the junction of George and Charlotte streets as the radial centre, and that only one class of ticket be sold, that is to say, at the rate of twelve (12) tickets for twenty-five (25) cents, or, in smaller quantities at two (2) for five (5) cents. The fare being one such ticket for each inward or outward trip or portion of trip, to or from the radial centre respectively.

The writer would further suggest that, within certain time limits, and covering periods during which industrial workers are proceeding to and from their places of work and houses, that one such ticket, suggested above, should cover the whole length of run of any single trip, such privilages might also be extended to our school children and students attending the public technological classes. In all cases of these extended privileges, the worker or student should possess a card of identification and qualification to be produced on demand by the Street Railway fare collector, the inclusion of students here seems advisable, since they are potential workers in training who should be encouraged to regard themselves as such. The time limits could no doubt be best decided by a joint representative committee chosen from the local Trades and Labour Council, the City Council, and our Board of Education.

The advertising value of such an initiative move in this city, would carry weight with owners and managers seeking new locations for industrial enterprise, and would be a great incentive to skilled workmen with families, to settle here.

The above suggested radial system for the city would also enable long distance travellers to secure seats at the radial centre, which, under present conditions, are occupied by passengers whose destinations are but a short distance beyond, and for which they would not generally be induced to forfeit an extra ticket, and, in the interests of long distance travellers, there should be no deviation from this rule, however short the additional distance may be.

The subject of radial extensions into the surrounding country, in reference to the prosperity of the City of Peterborough, in the immediate future, is equally important from the workingman's standpoint, by bringing in food supplies, fresh, and from sources, now, from lack of transportation facilities, economically out of reach. The radial extensions would also enable citizens (who desire to do so) to build their homes outside the city limits, live at less cost, and still retain industrial associations with us, while the possibilities of business growth to our merchants and business men generally, resulting in increased trade, revenue, and prosperity to the city, needs no further comment here.

The writer has frequently spoken of the above to fellow citizens, and the repeated request for collected notes on the subject is his apology for this communication.

Yours very truly,
W. H. PRETTY.

MULATTO ESCAPES FROM BRANTFORD TURNKEY

Breaks Jail and Is Believed To Be Making Tracks for Border.

BRANTFORD, March 26.—While serving an eighteen-month sentence in Brantford jail, Victor Johnson, a 17-year-old yellow mulatto, made his escape, and has since eluded the police. It was while the turnkey was returning the prisoners to their cells from the basement of the courthouse, where they had been kalsomining, that Johnson made his getaway. Johnson hails from Chicago, and it is believed he will try to cross the border. He was sentenced for keeping a disorderly house here about a month ago. Johnson, who is of medium height, has one-half of his right ear missing.

SATAN'S DESTINY UNFOLDED BY THE REV. J. TURNBULL

Pointed Information About His Power and Methods Given at a Meeting Held in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church

How much do you know about Satan? People know clearly but very little. Any who attended the public meeting held last Friday evening in St. Paul's Presbyterian church for the study of Bible prohecy must have come away greatly impressed with the description of "that old serpent, which is the Devil," as given by the speaker of the evening, Rev. Mr. J. Turnbull, pastor of the Beverley street Baptist Church, Toronto While not attempting in the time at his disposal, to give anything like a full account of the characteristics, aims and destiny of Satan as given in the Bible, the speaker sketched the character in a way that was impressive and calculated to make people wonder to what extent their lives were being influenced by his Satanic majesty without their knowledge and because of his wonderful ability to present his wicked schemes under the guise of righteous motives. Emphasis was laid on the point that the conception of Satan as portrayed in popular dramas, where he is shown with horns, hoofs, etc., is a characteristic of him in which he must keenly delight inasmuch as he never presents himself in his true character, but always as "an angel of light."

FUTURE EVENTS.

The speaker opened by reading Ezek. 28-19 and Rev. 20 which in the first passage gives in verses 11 to 19, the description of Satan's origin and fall, and in the last passage his final destiny. Some ministers, he said, seem to be proud that they have no programme for the future. If they have not there is something wrong, for God has outlined in His word a very clear plan and outline of future events. When men begin to set a date for the Lord's return they make a serious mistake for the Bible declares that no one Knows the day nor the hour. It is necessary also for Christians while watching for future events not to neglect the present.

Some men seem to delight in denying that there is such a one as Satan. By doing so they are playing directly into Satan's hands. In heathen lands where his work among the ignorant is plainly manifest, his personality and power are not denied. It is only in Christian lands where his power is more controlled because of the presence of the Holy Spirit, that it is possible for people to deny his existence.

There are three things that Satan detests: He hates to be exposed, he hates the Atonement, and he hates the doctrine of the second and personal return of our Lord. If we follow the word of God and study the record of Satan that it contains, we will never doubt the existence, cunning and power of the great adversary. The Bible tells us that he is a liar, and the father of lies, a murderer and the cause of sin. It tells us that in the beginning he was a being of great beauty and perfect in character until his fall, and that he is the greatest of all spiritual beings, next to the Trinity. The first picture given of Satan, where he appeared in the Garden of Eden, shows that his attempt was to gain the allegiance of Adam and Eve from God to himself. Sin then entered the heart of man and from that day to this Satan has been striving to win humanity away from God. This is not God's age. It cannot be as long as Satan is loose and free to tempt men.

The Scriptures show that while Christ overcame Satan at the time of His crucifixion and resurrection he has not yet assumed his full power. (Heb. 2:9) and will not until His enemies be made His footstool. In the meantime Satan is permitted to tempt mankind and is doing so on an enormous scale in spite of the fact that God offers to give through Christ complete freedom over the power of Satan to all who will believe in God and accept the Atonement. In the 20th chapter of Rev., we see that the time is coming when Satan's freedom to tempt mankind will be taken from him and not until then will God's age be established. In the meantime those who are ignorant of Satan's power, methods and aims and neglect to turn to God for power to overcome them are, because of their ignorance, "taken captive by him at his will," (2nd Tim. 2:26.)

ESTABLISH A KINGDOM.

Satan would like to establish a kingdom of his own in opposition to that of God. He is not the originator only of evil things but just as he offered Adam and Eve to make them as Gods if they would follow his suggestions, so he to-day is offering men all manner of things that are naturally good in themselves if he can only lead them thereby to refuse to listen to God and neglect God's method of salvation. It is because he clothes his angels as "ministers of righteousness" and disguises his methods in such crafty ways that such multitudes to-day are falling victims to his power. In this age we find in 2nd Thessalonians 2nd chapter that his power is being held in check by the presence of the Holy Spirit in the earth in the hearts of believers and followers of God. When at the end of the age Christ returns and takes away His saints, the wicked will be left and Satan will reveal himself in all his malignity and power. His time then however, will be short as he will be overthrown and bound by Christ at the time of His second coming. In the meantime he is spoken of in the Scriptures as the "God of this age." This explains the prevalence of so much evil and sin in the world.

USE SIGNS.

Satan does not hesitate to use signs and wonders as a means of accomplishing his purpose. He is the instigator of the belief in Spiritualism, which to-day is leading astray such a large number of people, including prominent scientists, who claim to have talked with the dead. He is behind Christian Science also, which denies the Atonement, and is the instigator of many other things of the same character.

In view of the clear description of him given in the Scriptures and the warnings issued to believers not to be ignorant of his devices and of the fact that God offers to give us power to overcome him it is the duty of all Christans to study their Bibles more earnestly that they may know more about him and not fall a victim to his devices.

The address was the second of a series being given in St. Paul's church on Bible study and prophecy. The third will be given next month when the speaker will be Rev. Mr. Hollinrake of the Barton street Methodist church, Hamilton. The meetings are proving intensely interesting.

Ironing Will Kill Germs in Garments

One need not worry about receiving infection in clothes sent to a laundry, even though they be washed with those of other families in which there may be infectious disease. Such, in substance, is a report just issued by the U. S. Public Health Service, after an investigation by M. C. Schroeder and S. G. Southerland, of the New York Department of Health. For whatever disease germs are not killed in the washing will be killed by the ironing. In fact, the ironing kills more germs than the washing.

There is, however, danger in having clothes washed by a laundress at her own home, for "owing to the close quarters in which the laundresses live, there is possibility of reinfection of the clean linen if communicable diseases are present among the members of the laundress's family."

The report says the sanitary conditions in Chinese laundries are far ahead of those in "hand laundries" managed by white persons.

The investigators tried to find out if infantile paralysis could have been carried through laundries, but it was found that a majority of the families in which that disease existed did not send their clothes to laundries, and that the better class of laundries refused to handle clothes known to have come from homes in which there was infantile paralysis.

Working Man Offers $5 Subscription To A Bathing Place Fund

A number of employees of the C. G.E. works, ratepayers too, have expressed their opinion, that in so far as they were able to judge the merits of the two questions recently before the Council, viz., public swimming places and a free market, they were in favour of the former. They also admitted that if present circumstances required it they would be satisfied to defer the provision of swimming places until after the war. But they said that if the Council could part with $1,200 or $2,000, or whatever the sum might be for a free market, the advantages of which they were quite dubious, that action did not indicate the need of refusing proper bathing facilities. One man who asked that his name be withheld offered to donate $5 to any public subscription that might be opened by the citizens for supervised bathing. "My swimming days are over, I guess," he said, "but I feel that the children should be given every opportunity to learn to swim under proper conditions. If the Council cannot provide the money probably a subscription might be taken up, and I've got five dollars for it if some person opens a fund." This ratepayer sated that the weight of opinion in the C.G.E. was behind the public bathing places.

MISS DOROTHY ALLEN'S SUCCESS AT OWEN SOUND

The following enthusiastic account of the great success achieved by Miss Dorothy Allen of this city, at the Knox Church concert at Owen Sound, is taken from the Advertiser of that place:

"The Knox Choir concert given last Thursday evening was equal in all respects to former concerts put on by that organization. The feature of the concert was the singing of Dorothy Allan of Peterborough, who though a new artist in Owen Sound, won the admiration of her auditors in all her numbers. She is a very capable artist, and has combined with a voice of rare quality and volume, just enough informality in her amnner to make an instant appeal to the udience. Sanderson's "Spring's wakeing," her first number, was sung with a delicacy and finish scarcely to be hoped for in a more experienced soloist. Her execution in this number was perfection itself. Subsequent numbers from her were equally delightful. "Where my Caravan Has Rested" (Lohr), was perhaps, the favourite, of all her selections. The copmosition is intrinsically beautiful, but when sung by Miss Allan, new beauties are revealed. In her last number, "La Marseillaise," sung in the French, Miss Allan demonstrated that in addition to a magnificent voice she possesses a strong magnetism that carries her audience everywhere with her. The audience received this thrilling number standing, and also stood for her encore number, "Rule Britannia," which was also sung with equal force and appeal. Her glorious bursts of power were a revelation and the enthusiasm created by her singing almost impiled the audience to join in with her. It was magnificent. The duet number, "I Feel thy Angel Spirit," by Hoffman, sung by Miss Allan and Mr. McDonald, was also accorded an exceptionally hearty reception and insistent demands for another number from them were made. The two full, rich voices are admirably suited for duet work and the applause received was well merited.

Tubers Sold For $2.60 A Bag

That a decided slump is taking place in the price of potatoes is illustrated by the following incident.

A Manvers farmer telephoned a Lindsay institution a day or two ago with a view to selling his tubers, the price quoted being $4.00 a bag. He was informed that the price was an exhorbitant one in view of the anticipated slump. This was news to the farmer, who it appears, had a plenteous supply of tubers on hand, and being afraid that the expected decline in price would leave him with a surplus stock, disposed of thirty bags to a merchant for $2.60 per bag.

This is no street corner story, but an actual fact.

"The Builders of Empire" Subject Of Address By Rev. J. P. Wilson

On Saturday afternoon Rev. J. P. Wilson gave a most interesting address on the "Builders of the Empire" in the Public Library. Col. A. Stevenson was in the chair.

In opening his address Mr. Wilson spoke of the great changes which have taken place lately in the world's history, the liquor traffic doomed, and the great bloodless revolution in Russia. The latter, he said, was saved the horror of the French revolution by the fact that the poor, weak, deposed Czar had stopped the sale of vodka. The last great change was the government's generosity in granting the franchise to women.

ORIGIN OF ENGLISH RACE.

The Empire, which to-day is fighting with the vim of a new nation, is 1,000 years old, and to-day is united as never before. Who are the builders of this magnificent Empire? The first inhabitants came from the shores of the Baltic, these were followed by the Jutes Angles and Saxons, then the Danes, Norsemen, Latinized Normans and Hugenots. From this inter-mixture came the Englishman. Each left some racial characteristic which can be found to-day. From the Norseman came the shipbuilding spirit, from the Norman, the martial spirit, and so on.

SELF GOVERNMENT.

Self government began in England as far back as the Empire dates. From the "Moots," which consisted of freemen, meeting to discuss public questions, we can trace our government of to-day. So, as far back as the Angles and Saxons, England has had what Russia only got two weeks ago.

TEMPERATE ZONES.

With an instinct wiser than reason the early Englishman did much for the Empire in seizing and holding great dominions in the mild temperate zones. Wherever an Englishman went he took his wife and family, so none of the racial characteristics were lost. They remained English in thought, ambition, culture and speech.

ENGLISH JUSTICE.

England remains a world-power because of the liberty, justice, and fair play which she stands for. Liberty is the basis of every act. There is none of the corruption going on which has been the starting point of the fall of every other mighty empire.

EQUAL FRANCHISE.

Mr. Wilson concluded his address expressig he hope that the women of to-day who now may have a share in Empire building, may show such judgment in their new power as to help avoid the blunders men have made before them.

A vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. Aylmer and seconded by Miss Lancaster.

REV. T. A. WALKER IN ST. ANDREW'S

Large Congregations Attended Both Services—A Word to Fault-finders and Praise-seekers

Large congregations greeted the Rev. T. A. Walker, formerly of Owen Sound and Calgary, who yesterday made his initial appearance in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. At the evening service, Mr. Walker took for his text, Isaiah 40:10—"Behold, the Lord God will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him: Behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him."

"There is a great principle enunciated in this portion of the scripture said the speaker. The situation described here was very much like that which lately took place in Armenia where the inhabitants were ruthlessly persecuted by the Turks. The question came to the mind of the prophets—what keeps God pursuing his task when man seems inclined to wander from the path of righteousness. Why not let man go back and let the earth rot in its wickedness? A similar question is propounded in the New Testament—why did Jesus keep on in spite of all the obstacles that were thrown in his path?

A REAL REWARD.

Comparing the way of the Lord with that of the people the speaker said that too many people live for the material things of life. When they do something good they expect the Lord Almighty to send down something in a basket, lay it on their doorstep or take it in and cook it for them. "Rewards don't come that way," remarked Mr. Walker.

The real reward of life is the spirit in which we live. When we put the right spirit into what we do, we are in a Divine partnership. As a people we are not naturally thankful. Real gratitude is scarce. Even a child has to be taught to say thank you. We have too many fault-finders and praise seekers. The greatest legacy we can have is a soul and a due sense of appreciation of the life we should live.

Music & Drama

"THE GIRL WHO SMILES."

"The Girl who Smiles," as presented at the Grand Opera House on Saturday, proved as billed, an unusual musical comedy. For one thing the plot was more ambitious than usual in a production of that kind and the chorus methods were different from the usual style. The musical numbers were the big feature of the attraction. The score abounds in tuneful hits of which the two waltzes, "Teach me to Smile," and "Temptation," were the gems. "The Song of the Sparrow," an unusual number, was another selection that greatly pleased. The company was a well-balanced one with clever principals, and a chorus that could really sing.

THE WEATHER

With the snow rapidly disappearing, the gutters full to overflowing, the creek on its annual spring rampage, and the merry "cheer-up" of the robin to be heard on all sides, it looks as if spring were actually here. Yesterday the thermometer went up to the highest point touched for months, reaching 56 degrees in the shade during the afternoon.—W.P.

Blind Soldiers Are Making Use Of The Bicycle

The interesting news has come from the Old Country that soldiers blinded in the present war are not denied the healthful and pleasing benefits of cycling. In the vicinity of one of the military hospitals sightless veterans are daily seen riding bicycles on the streets with the aid of a guide. This is accomplished by hooking five or six bicycles into a "train" which is steered by an attendant. The blind soldiers have to look after their own balance, which they do with ease, and a speed of four to eight miles per hour is attained on the trips. Except for the manner in which the wheels are fastened one behind the other, a spectator would not judge that all but one of the cyclists are blind.

In a number of institutions, the convalescents make use of bicycles on rollers in order to regain leg strength and a quick return to good health. After this exercise the invalided men ride bicycles on the road for health and pleasure. In Canada many returned soldiers are riding bicycles for their health and one point in this connection is that the bicycle is so cheap and so economically maintained that the returned men can easily afford to cycle.

It is not generally known that Helen Keller, the woman who is deaf, dumb and blind, learned to ride a bicycle thanks to the tuition and guidance of a former racer and trick cyclist. She enjoyed her cycling experiences greatly.

Terrific Battle On A Wide Front

tensity. So kaleidoscopic are the changes along the fluid battle line that the details of the situation are almost impossible to grasp. Even as these words are being written events are taking place on the devastated battlefield which may set them at naught.

Along the Ailette line, north and south of the Oise and north of Soissons the French troops also pressed ahead. On the east bank of the Ailette they advanced to the south of Chauny. South of the Oise they penetrated several points in the lower Coucy Wood and reached the outskirts of Folembray and Coucy-le-Chateau, which the Germans have devastated. North of Soissons further gains were attained.

ENEMY STUBBORNLY RESISTS.

Throughout this devastated region the Germans offered stubborn resistance, counter-attacking in great force between Bonigny and Bonay, and along the Vregny-Margival front. These assaults were repulsed by the French almost without exception, and the Germans' losses are reported by Neville to have been severe.

"During the course of the day," says the French communique, "a desperate struggle followed a strong defence by the enemy, but our soldiers, aroused by the spectacle of ravages committed by the Germans, everywhere drove back the adversary who suffered serious losses."

BRITISH MAKE PROGRESS.

On the British end of the Arras-La Fere line there was little change in the general situation during the last 24 hours. Everywhere along this front the Germans are furiously resisting the advance of Haig's troops, which consequently continues much slower than that of their allies to the south.

The British improved their position west of Croiselles and in the region of Roisel, which was captured yesterday. Berlin admits the retirement of German rearguard forces from this district, as well as in the neighbourhood of Beaumetz. Counter attacks by the Germans north of the Bapaume-Cambrai road failed under British fire.

Poor Business To Plant The Peelings of Potatoes

Planting one's potato peelings, and eating the major portion of the tuber may have the charm of economy but it's poor business according to Mr. W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist, whose opinion was sought on the advice of a Michigan agricultural expert, Dr. Schaffter, whose assertion that it was extravagant to plant the whole potato has been widely published.

"To raise the kingly potato cheaply and profitably," said Dr. Schaffter "one should cut cone-shaped pieces of flesh, containing eyes, from the lordly vegetable, and not waste whole potatoes slicing them in great pieces for planting purposes. By merely cutting small eye-pieces, only one-fourth of a potato, possibly one-fifth, need be used. And in these days when potatoes are being accepted for movie theatre admissions that's some saving."

"The scheme might work in just the right conditions, with a proper amount of rain and the proper soil," declared Mr. Macoun, "but under ordinary conditions it is taking too much of a chance."

"In case adverse conditions when the quarter sections of potato are planted as is the popular custom, the eye draws strength and moisture from the adhering flesh of the potato, while if the eye were cut out with only a little flesh it might dry up before the tiny plant is started.

"In the best of seasons you might get a fair crop, but I wouldn't advise any one to do it."

PRESSES SUIT OF CLOTHES FOR FIVE COMMON "SPUDS"

CHICAGO, March 26.—P. H. Crocker, who conducts a chain of tailoring shops in the loop, has placed signs in his windows advertising that suits or overcoats will be pressed in exchange for five potatoes.

Five of the spuds rapidly becoming obsolete, from latest reports, are exhibited in the windows. Customers who called Crocker's bluff found that it wasn't a bluff at all. Crocker means business. He is a potato bug.

A few who went out to get potatoes found they couldn't get five potatoes for 25 cents. At least so they reported, and they decided that the cheaper way to have their suits pressed was to pay the two bits in coin.

"No, this is not an effort to corner the potato market," said the tailor. "I believe that five potatoes are worth more than 25 cents and I bring the potato proceeds home to my wife and make a great hit with her. The way things are going I may get up a new price scale to include eggs, onions, and bread in exchange for tailoring services. Why not?"

Young Women Suicide

PORTSMOUTH, N.H., March 26.—Two young women held revolvers at each others temples and fired, both dropping dead, in a booth at the Portsmouth Cafe. They had previously registered at the Rockingham Hotel as Ethel Stanton and Rose King, of Wellesley, Mass.

In a travelling bag left at the hotel by the King girl, was found a letter telling of an agreement between the two girls to commit suicide, and asking that they be buried together. The letter signed "Peggy" was addressed to Mrs. E. L. Spaulding, Newton Centre, Mass. The police communicated with Mrs. Spaulding and learned that "Rose King" was her daughter. Miss Spaulding was a graduate of the Newton High School. She was prominent in athletics, having served as captain of the high school girls' hockey team.

A note addressed to C. S. Malsbury, Cincinnati, was found in the Stanton girl's bag.

The girls, each about 20 years old, had been in the booth for more than two hours before other diners were startled to hear two shots. They rushed to the booth and found the girls lying dead on the floor.

Choristers Are Back

Warm Welcome by St. John's Choir to Members Who Have Returned

Yesterday was a pleasant day for St. John's choristers, when instead of saying good-bye to one who was about to leave and make another gap in the ranks, which have been sadly depleted, mainly owing to the war, several former choristers were heartily welcomed to their old places. Sergeant George Coleman, invalided home from England, Mr. Tom Warbey, Mr. John Stoneley from Quebec, Mr. George Brown (who has been ill for a long time,) and Mrs. Seward, were all at yesterday's services, and the crowded chancel brought back a vision of three years ago when the choir roll was over fifty strong. At the morning service Mr. Walter Hutchinson sang finely a solo from "Olivet to Calvary, "O! was there ever Loneliness like His?" At evensong the offertory was a recit, and quartette from Stainer's "Crucifixion," sung by Mrs. L. V. Devey and Mrs. Quartermaine, soprano, Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Seward, altos, Mr. W. Hutchinson and Mr. A. Marshall, tenors, Mr. H. Flowers and Mr. Tom Ward, bass. The Recit. "And as Moses," was sung by Mr. John Taylor. Both the quartette and the Recit. were finely sung, and will be heard again at the presentation of all the work on Good Friday night, April 6th.

WEDDING BELLS

BEAVIS—WHITE.

St. John's Church, Lakefield, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Thursday, March 22nd, when Miss Ella White, one of Lakefield's most popular young ladies was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Howard W. Beavis, one of Smith's promising young farmers, and only son to Mr. Henry Beavis, Lakefield.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. W. McKenzie in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends of the contracting parties.

Precisely at 1.30 o'clock the bride entered the Church leaning on the arm of her sister, Miss Ethel White, of Cobourg, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Miss Attwood.

The bride was charmingly attired in a navy blue taffeta suit, with hat to match, and was attended by Miss Maude Beavis, sister of the groom, who was becomingly attired in a suit of navy silk poplin, while the groom was supported by Bandsman Allan Clark of the 247th Battalion, Peterborough.

Immediately after the service the happy couple left amid showers of rice and confetti for Peterborough, to take the 3.45 p.m. C.P.R. train for points west, and after their return will reside at "River-View" farm, Smith.

The bride was the recipient of a large number of handsome and useful presents, showing the esteem in which she is held by all.

IMPRESSIVE MEMORIAL SERVICE WAS HELD

Earnest Addresses at Mark Street Methodist Church by Major O'Flynn, Capt. Burnham and Rev. Mr. Whattam at Service in Memory of Pte. Fred Wicker.

A LARGE CONGREGATION

A very impressive memorial service was held in the Mark Street Methodist Church last evening in memory of Pte. Fred Wicker, a member of the congregation, who went overseas with the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, and who was killed in action a short time ago. The church was crowded, the congregation including a number of officers and men of the 247th Battalion. The choir rendered appropriate music and addresses were given by Major O'Flynn of the 247th Battalion, Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., late paymaster of the 93rd Battalion, and Rev. Mr. Whattam, pastor of Mark Street Methodist Church.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, the first speaker, expressed his sympathy with the relatives of Pte. Wicker, and pointed out that the dead hero had died for the principle for which the British Empire had always stood.

Major E. D. O'Flynn, of the 247th, in an earnest address, expressed his appreciation of the privilege of being able to speak at such a service. He referred to Pte. Wicker as having joined the Deathless Army — deathless, because as long as the Anglo-Saxon race survived, would the memory of the brave men who had died in the great war be kept green. Major O'Flynn remarked that Pte. Wicker had died in defence of freedom, and it was due to such men as him that the British Empire had maintained its reputation as the defender of freedom.

The speaker expressed his deep sympathy for the bereaved family, but felt that a touch of pride in having made such a sacrifice for such a glorious cause should be commingled with their sorrow. Our Saviour had made such a sacrifice in giving his only Son to save the world.

Rev. Mr. Whattam chose as his text, 16th verse, 4 Chapter, Esther: "If I perish, I perish, that is to say, between duty and death the choice is to be made. A similar situation has developed in our time in the life of the British Empire to that when the crisis in the life of the Hebrew nations produced a crisis in the life of the beautiful young queen. A similar regard on the part of our soldier boys will save our Empire from the loss of the highest and best things.

The challenge of to-day has been answered by the young manhood of every nation. In the struggle Europe has become a vast battlefield. A quarter of a million Canadians are engaged in the mighty conflict. There are the brawn and brain of our land; there courses in their veins heroic blood; they fight for the holy cause of freedom.

Whilst the price of victory is inestimable, if life is to be worth living, the victory must be won. There is an enobling influence of fighting for such a cause. Truth is too pale and history too tame to record the deeds of our brave men. Men tell us war coarsens and degrades; not so a war such as this.

Mr. Whattam spoke of the effect of this war on Russia.

In speaking of Pte. Fred Wicker, Mr. Whattam referred to the note received by a friend of Pte. Wicker's in which he said: "Tell mother if anything happens to me it is all right. For such as he it would be impossible to erect a monument of sufficient grandeur.

PTE. FRED WICKER, Killed in Action

We had several days of strong and active market this week, followed by a slowing down. The rise was attended with much public buying and belief that war with Germany would bring about extension in business in many lines. The reaction was the result of profit taking by many persons who thought the advance had gone far enough pending further developments. The near approach to war failed to frighten anybody, nevertheless it made some traders timid. The rise was, in a measure, based on removal of uncertainties, to which so long had overhung the situation. Now that this has been removed people have begun to plan, and these plans include preparations for war on a large scale. The Russian revolution was a stimulating factor and rumours of discontent in Germany also had a bearing on the market. It was felt that both of these developments would bring peace nearer. The present attitude of financial interests is that peace would be a favorable development. If the United States enters the war peace will be hastened.

Interest this week has largely been centered on business conditions. The up-turn of the market was led by U. S. Steel, which issued a remarkable annual report, surpassing all expectations. In this connection prediction was made by officials of that company that 1917 would witness further records in the Steel trade. This stimulated much public enthusiasm to buy stocks but as often happens many who had bought U. S. Steel lower down took profits on the good news and we have had a moderate reaction as a consequence. Besides the U. S. Steel statements we have had other highly favourable reports of earnings. A favourable influence was the application of the railroads to the Interstate Commerce Commission for an increase in rates. Railroad stocks moved up quite sharply on this. We consider the chance good of this being granted. There is much in the situation that should help securities, and we think the upturn in prices should go further. Use all setbacks to buy standard issues. — Bryant, Dunn and Co.

Mrs. R. F. McWilliams Was Delighted With Children's Shelter

Mrs. R. F. McWilliams, President of the Winnipeg Council of Women, who was in the city for the week end, visited the Children's Shelter on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. McWilliams expressed herself much impressed by the orderliness and cleanliness of the home. She paid a high tribute to the matron, Mrs. M. E. Reid, at whose hands the children met with kindly and efficient treatment and with whom the children seemed happy.

In regard to woman's franchise she said that women should respond to their new responsibility and vote, and that they must understand that responsibility. In voting, two things are necessary: to realize the inherent duty and to strive for honest public service.

The recent meeting Mrs. McWilliams attended in Ottawa was held to arrange for the business which will be discussed at the annual meeting of the National Council of Women in Winnipeg in May. The principal motions which will come up will be to ask the Government for the Federal vote for all the women of Canada. Military training will be discussed, immigration, and the food controller asked for. The latter motion is from the Peterborough Council of Women.

ASSOCIATION MET SATURDAY NIGHT

The Peterborough Industrial Association met on Saturday evening and among other things formed a number of standing committees. A progressive campaign of civic development is planned. Anything that pertains to the advancement of the city's interest will be taken up by the Association.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Vegetables to be tender must be cooked slowly.

Never boil a soup bone in an iron vessel.

A great comfort in a living room is a built-in seat.

The white kitchen is not only cheerful, but it makes dirt so apparent that it has no chance to hide.

When boiling macaroni if you let it cook slowly on back of stove it will get much larger, taste nicer and you will not have to stir it every few minutes because it doesn't stick nearly so quickly as when it is cooked fast.

When making pastry keep everything as cold as possible and your pastry will be lighter and flaky.

Never butter pie plates, just put a little flour in them.

There is no need to butter your cake tins, just take the greased paper that comes around the bread and cut it the size of the pan. The printing doesn't come off. The paper also keeps the cake from burning at the bottom. If your cake sticks to the pan and you do not wish to use the above hint, after you have greased the pan sprinkle a little flour in bottom of it and you will find that your cake comes out all right. If you don't want your cake to fall do not bang the oven door or pull it out of the oven before it has risen. If you don't want your cake to rise too high and break be sure you put the right amount of liquid in it and not too much baking powder.

Shoes are only about eight inches high, in deference to the longer skirts.

Says Women Want To Be Free of All Entanglements Of Party Prejudices

Patronage System and Government House Expenditure Condemned by S. Carter

FREE-SPEECH RIGHT

TORONTO, March 27.—"Please don't label us, because we will not stand for being labelled to any political party," declared Mrs. Hector Prenter, who presided at the luncheon of the Political Education League in the St. Charles Hotel yesterday afternoon, where Sam Carter, M.P.P., for South Wellington, was the guest. "We must be free from all entanglements of party prejudices, and we must take the vow now not to ally ourselves with any political party if our vote is to mean anything.

"Some rumours have been current," proceeded the speaker, "that the Political Education League is a straight political party with a terrible 'Grit' at the head of it. I can assure you that that is not so. So long as the Liberal party stands and works for the things that we women want, I contend I have a perfect right to speak on a Conservative or any other platform so long as their ideas and aspirations are in accord with the principles for which women are working."

CONDEMNED PATRONAGE SYSTEM.

In a vigorous condemnation of the patronage system Mr. Carter declared he would not ally himself with any party that would not bury patronage face downwards. "All the men, or at least nine out of ten, who are getting the big increases at Parliament buildings this year are there because of their politics, not because of their ability," he declared.

He laid at the door of the Government the responsibility for the neglect of the feeble-minded and mentally defective, with the train of immorality and crime which prevailed amongst that class. "All the Government could do to help this class was to vote $25,000, when they should have voted a million or a million and a quarter. "If you women are worth anything you will take care of those legislators in Queen's Park who will not take care of those unfortunate people.

EXPENSE OF GOVERNMENT HOUSE.

He rated the Government for the extravagant expense on the million dollar Government House, with its $1,500 carpets, when they could spend only $50,000 on technical education, which he urged should be given to every child before they were sent into the world to earn their own living.

"Cut out the charters of every racing association that allows gambling and takes percentages, and not have a law for the rich, and another one for the poor man, who is sent to jail for taking a five-cent rake-off in the common gambling house. The jail is open for them all; make them all criminals, and draw no distinctions," declared Mr. Carter.

United States Prepared To Finance War

Five Billions of Dollars Could Be Loaned to the Allies Without Noticeably Affecting the Financial Situation of the Country

"MONEY IS POWER"

Special to The Examiner:

(By Web. Miller, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, March 27.—The United States, the treasury house of the world, is able to loan the allies the staggering sum of five billions of dollars without noticably affecting the financial situation of this country.

An official of one of the largest American banking institutions to-day told the United Press this country is in a position to loan five times that amount of our national debt to the allies in case of war between the United States and Germany. In the gold piled up in this country is power, if loosed, to end the war, in the opinion of the bankers.

Heavy Fighting on a Fifty Mile Front—Desperate Attacks By the Germans

OPEN FIGHTING

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, March 27. — The allied pursuit continued hotly to-day, marked by violent fighting of both open and massed character at half a dozen points along a fifty mile front, now rapidly nearing the permanent German line. The French were within less than a mile of the "Hindenburg line" and progressing steadily despite inundations and an increasingly strong resistance from the enemy. The nearest aproach of the British. The line was around Jagnicourt, about eleven miles west of Cambrai. There was bitter fighting in his neighbourhood German massed forces desperately striving to retake the village, but the British hold firm and beat off all attacks.

The Vast Prison Palace Of Former Czar of Russia

Nicholas Is No Longer Allowed to Walk in the Park, But Enjoys Greatly Shoveling Snow—Rasputin's Grave Lonely, Desolate and Desecrated

HAS FREQUENT FITS OF CRYING WHEN ALONE

TSARKOE-SELO, March 27.—Penetrating into and under the vast prison palace of Nicholas Romanoff the deposed Emperor, the correspondent of the Associated Press obtained from the jailer the first reliable statement of the former Emperor's condition, and later visited the desecrated grave of Gregory Rasputin, Russias real autocrat for a decade and the unintending parent of the revolution.

Since the visit paid by the correspondent to the palace last week, several measures have been taken to guard the prisoner. These grew out of rumours of an attempted flight, monarchist conspiracies against the temporary Government, and pressure by extremist forces. The guards have been increased and a special representative of the Council of Deputies put among them. On announcing his desire to visit the grave of Rasputin, the soldiers demanded his passport of the correspondent, and then led him to the kitchen entrance of the palace prison, which is the headquarters of the guards.

Dingy, Dirty Surroundings.

Behind the kitchen entrance stands a complex system of low buildings built around a courtyard and ending in a series of subterranean ad semi-subterranean galleries running the whole way under the palace. Inside the second entry is a small hall crowded with soldiers. All these parts of the palace are dirty, dingy, ill lighted, and unimpressive not at all such as might be expected of the surroundings of a great monarch in captivity.

The correspondent was led to the palace commandent Capain of Cavaliy Kotzebue. Captain Kotzebue's headquarters are in an angle of an old and now untenanted section of the Tszarskoe-Selo palace. He gave the correspondent a soldier escort and a permit to pass along the road to Rasputin's grave. The captain is Nicholas chief jailer, and responsible to the Duma that no flight takes place and that there is no breach in the severe inspection regime. He is a youthful and urbane officer of the guard type, who speaks perfect French and English. Apparently he was chosen by the Duma Imprisonment Commission as likely to respect the susceptibilities of his prisoner.

Nicholas Cries at Times.

After telling the correspondent that he had been given orders to arrest all civilians who asked the soldiers questions about the complex geography of the palace Capt. Kotzebue consented to say something about the condition of the former Emperor and his family in their imprisonment, politely calling Nicholas "former Emperor," whereas all the soldiers say brusquely, "Nicholas Romanoff."

"The former Emperor is not under detention, but is in all respects a prisoner, and is treated accordingly," said Capt. Kotzebue. "He is in perfectly good health and in fairly good spirits; but when he is with his own entourage he has fits of crying. He is no longer allowed in the park, but twice daily, from 11 to 3 o'clock, he is permitted to walk for recreation in the railed garden between the east and west wings of the palace. Outside the railing are six soldiers, constituting the so-called intermediate guard. The first guard is within the palace walls and the third outside the park fence.

Likes Shovelling Snow.

"The regime of the imprisonment of Nicholas is applied also to all courtiers and servants who are prisoners. The former Emperor is not permitted to go into the garden except in my presence. He walks frequently with other prisoners preferring the society of the former Empress, Count Benkendorff, former marshal of the court; Madame Narychkine, and Countess Hendrikoff. He is requested to converse only in Russian when in the presence of soldiers. The former Emperor's chief occupation is shovelling snow in the gardens which he enjoys greatly."

Heart Troubles Empress.

"He shows a boyish interest in what is said and written of him. He does not resent abuse. At present he is chiefly desirous of receiving foreign newspapers which are virtually unobtainable. The former Empress is in better health. Her real malady is not of the nerves, but of the heart. She is unable to walk any distance, and is carried in a chair even from her own suite to her children's rooms. Grand Duke Alexis, the former heir to the thrown, has recovered entirely. He arose from bed on Friday for the first time. When he heard of his father's detronement he cried bitterly, not, in my opinion, from appreciation of the situation, but merely because he was affected by his parents' misery. The other children are better, except Grand Duchess Marie.

All Letters Censored.

"All letters and communications to the court are brought here first. I am the censor." Here Capt. Kotzebue showed the correspondent a pile of envelopes awaiting censorship. Many, judging by the handwriting were from illiterate peasants. The captain also exhibited bottles of a solution used for revealing invisible ink.

"My chief anxiety" the captain continued, "is to reduce extravagance and disorder at the palace. This morning I discovered sixty men who were drawing pay for moving firewood from one courtyard to another. Five men could do the work. This is symbolical of the general administration of our Empire under the vanished regime."

Rasputins Desolate Grave.

The correspondent then visited Rasputin's grave on the edge of a ravine beyond a desolate and roadless plain, covered with deep snow. The grave is surrounded by an unfinished log chapel, which adherents of the monk, with the monetary assistance of the former Empress, planned to raise over Rasputin's dust. Besides the chapel nave are half a dozen tiny cells for pilgrims ,and near the end is the ten-foot hole from which the revolutionaries disinterred the body. The chapel was filled with soldiers, some of whom were inscribing ribald remarks on the log walls.

To Prevent Further Desecration.

One of the inscriptions reads: "Here lay Rasputin, fouleat of men the shame of the Romanoff dynasty, the shame of the Russian Church." As the correspondent was reading the inscriptions he heard loud shouts. Looking down into the grave, he saw a little brown Siberian soldier on his haunches during the Russian squat dance. The soldiers told the correspondent that Countess Hendrikoff, at the request of the former Empress had offered a large sum to the guards if they would have the grave covered so as to prevent its further desecration.

Secretary Lansing Indicates That Plan Is Being Considered

Espionage and Censorship Were the Measures Decided Upon.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The War Department announced yesterday afternoon it has no plans now for moving any resident aliens so long as they conform to the laws of the nation.

Members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee discussed the international situation with Secretary Lansing. Espionage and censorship measures were among the legislation the new Congress may take up that were considered.

During the conference, Secretary Lansing indicated that one plan to aid allies is to help France finance the war, and that another under consideration involves the sending of a military force to the French front. The President's conclusions were not made known definitely, and it was not finally determined what to recommend in his message to Congress Secretary Lansing made it very clear that the plan which probably will be urged most will be authorization by Congress of a large bond issue whose proceeds would be devoted to the purchase of French bonds. What amount of bonds, whether a billion dollars more or less, Secretary Lansing suggested, was a matter within the province of Secretary McAdoo, of the Treasury Department.

The committee was particularly anxious to learn what the Government plans were as to sending an expeditionary force to Europe. Secretary Lansing vindicated he would be determined later.

The legislative program which Sec. Secretary Lansing indicated he would favour includes a declaration that a state of war exists, an enactment which passed the Senate last session, but failed in the House, to punish espionage and unneutral acts, and an appropriation of possibly $200,000 for employment of secret service agents.

There were some very choice loads and fancy Easter steers and heifers at high prices around $12 to $13, but these were exceptions. For the general run of butcher cattle trading was at first quite slow and some slight concessions were forced in order to get things moving. Afterwards trade was brisk and prices were not materially changed.

Munitions Department Installed a System of Guardians

An English factory expert writes: Under the Welfare Department of the Ministry of Munitions the hit-and-miss method of management has given place to organized control. Understanding women have been appointed whose duty it is, besides seeing that all physical conditions are adequate: Tactfully to supervise the individual so that she cares for her own health. To make sure that she takes advantage of the wise provisions to protect her from accident in the shape of suitable clothing and head covering. To see that messrooms are provided and properly managed.

Many other important details belong to her work which could not possibly be dealt with by the shops manager or foreman. Carried out, however, in co-operation with these practical people, they make for greater efficiency. From eight years' experience in a firm of nearly 4,000 people I have abundant proof that, viewed from the lowest standpoint, to study one's co-workers of all grades pays.

In fact, I am convinced that the phenomenal success of the house of business with which I am associated is mainly due to the careful way in which its chief has studied the welfare of his whole staff. This has engendered loyalty to the house, enthusiasm for their work, causing them to speak well of the man who employs them, and of the business for which they are working. Like a snowball, this permeates into the public from the 4,000 homes of the workers, and must be an advertising asset the value of which is incalculable.

Nerves Were So Bad Would Lie Awake Nights

And Had to Avoid Crowds or Excitement—When Doctors Gave Up Turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food With Good Results

Peterborough, Ont., March 9.—The cure reported in this letter will be best appreciated by persons who know the keen mental anguish caused by inability to sleep. You lie awake and think with alarm of all the dreadful things that might happen to you. You lose confidence and courage, are easily irritated and life is scarcely worth while.

But there is a message of hope in this letter, for it tells of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and the grand work it is accomplishing.

Mrs. Chas. E. Wiley, 136 London street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "About three years ago I was suffering from nervous debility, sleeplessness and loss of appetite. My nerves were so bad that I could not attend church or any place where there was a crowd or excitement. During the night I would lie awake for two or three hours. I had tried several remedies and taken treatments from doctors. The doctor finally said he could not do any more for me, and it was then I started using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I had read in the newspapers of how highly it was recommended, so I secured some and commenced using it. After the third box I noticed an improvement, so I kept on taking them until I had used eight or nine boxes. The results were such that I could sleep and eat well and go to places where there was a crowd or excitement without any difficulty. My health was generally benefitted greatly. Since that, from time to time, when I am not feeling up to the mark, I take a few of the Nerve Food pills, as I usually keep some in the house. I would recommend this treatment to anyone suffering from nervous trouble of any kind."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

ROYAL LOVE AFFAIRS

Dan Cupid Sometimes Supersedes Tradition

The romantic love story of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria and his wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg, provides a striking illustration of what a woman of inferior rank may have to suffer for marrying a royal personage. The archduke who is heir to the Austrian throne, declined to marry any of the royal ladies offered for his choice, for he had fallen in love with a maid of honor, the beautiful woman who is now his wife.

Although the emperor at last gave his sanction to the marriage, imperial honors were denied the bride, and it was only after some years that she and her husband wore down the prejudice which existed against her, and she was created a duchess by the emperor—a title which conferred upon her privileges more in harmony with her dignity as the lawful wife of the future sovereign. By the terms of the marriage settlements, however, the archduke's wife cannot become empress, nor even her children succeed to the imperial throne; although it is pointed out that royal marriage settlements have, before now, been set aside.

THE PHOTOGRAPHER'S ART

Camera Models Not Always the Prettiest Girls

A photographer who was called on to pick five beauties from a group of 100 for the purposes of a picture group selected five girls very quickly. A spectator gasped at his choice. "I shouldn't call these the prettiest!" he exclaimed.

"They're prettiest for photographers," answered the photographer, who proved his point by the result.

Here's one part of the secret: There are "photographable" faces, and the artist in photography knows the trick of picking them, as well as that other trick of making the most of them before his camera.

The quality of being "photographable" in any special degree is not commonly discernible to the average person. Many famous camera models make a good living by the discovery of this quality.

Of course, looking charming in front of a lens is something, too, of a mental gift. There can be no doubt that many women look their best before a lens. What is an ordeal to other women is to them a stimulation, an incitement to sparkle. Women with the gift naturally have a great advantage, quite aside from the advantage furnished by strictly facial charm. Their "look" is attractive as well as their "lines." Their eyes, instead of looking set and "starey," look interested—quite as if they were looking into the eyes of a friend. That is certainly a part of the sitter's trick—to make friends with the lens.

THE NEW MORALITY

A New York Woman's Ideas on Better Conditions

Grace Isabel Colbrone of New York, discussing "The New Morality," said: "The New Morality is to my mind really the old morality revived, I mean the morality of the New Testament. The Christian church to-day is not teaching this. When the early Christians fought for their faith, it was not for a church doctrine, but for a doctrine of civil service. Nowadays you can start a church any day in the year. Witness Mrs. Eddy and Billy Sunday. And you will get rich over it, but when you start a doctrine of social service you are in danger of being crucified." On the equality of birth Miss Colbrone was quite clear. "Put one hundred babies in a row," she said, "and no one could tell by looking at them, which was born in a hovel or in a palace. Everything that each little body needed is provided by the land, and everyone born is an increase of wealth to the land, because everyone has a mouth, it has also two hands to work and provide for that mouth; yet every little child is the supreme egotist and it is the duty of the mother to teach it the rights of its brothers and sisters. Applying this to the community morality would only be best developed when individuals consider the rights of others."

A heavy storm which flooded Mecca on the day the Grand Sherif was proclaimed Sultan of Arabia was hailed as a divine omen.

By the mayor's casting vote Lambeth Council decided not to bother about new titles for ten streets bearing "names of enemy origin."

BROWN SWISS CATTLE

The Brown Swiss, as they are known on this continent, represent one of the leading breeds. It has been developed in Switzerland, and is probably one of the oldest breeds known. In its native land it is classed as a dual-purpose breed, and formerly showed both as a beef and a dairy breed in America, but is now classed as a dairy breed. The cows weigh from 1,300 to 1,400 pounds, and the bulls often weigh more than a ton. The color is brown to silver gray, resembling the color of some families in the Jersey breed. The cows give a good flow of milk, containing about 3.7 per cent. of butter fat.

LOGGER'S DARING FEAT

Busby Became Talk of Vancouver District—Rivalled Steeplejack

The crew of Higgins' logging camp at Cameleon Harbor, Tribune Channel, about 80 miles north of Vancouver, witnessed an act of remarkable daring and agility, performed by one of their number, which will doubtless be talked about for many a day in the Coast lumber camps, where feats of daredevil bravery are as common as "scraps" among school boys.

In the course of a shift to a new logging location it became necessary to attach a cable to a very tall tree at a point 120 feet from the ground. Usually this is done by a workman equipped with pole-climbing spurs and belt, but this time these means were not available. What was to be done? It would take several days to secure the equipment from Vancouver, and a shutdown of the operations for that length of time was not to be thought of owing to the heavy expense involved.

This is where tall Andrew Busby came to the rescue. He was an expert chopper and skilled in using a springboard. With his axe and two springboards he began to climb the tree. Standing on the first board, he chopped a notch five feet above him, slipped the second board into the notch, climbed up, and, drawing the first board after him, repeated the performance a score of times. In an hour, while his companions below watched him breathlessly, he reached the top of the tree and affixed the rope. Standing on a board a few inches wide, he was apparently as cool at 100 feet from the ground as when he was only five feet from terra firma. Busby became a private in the 230th Forestry Battalion, enlisting in Vancouver a few days after performing the act above mentioned.

MOTORISTS SHOULD KNOW

Many Hints About Tires and Those Long Tours

One should never use hard grease for chain lubrication.

Two or three pairs of pliers instead of one should be carried.

You must know the load per tire in order to inflate properly.

Two horns should be installed when a long tour is to be made.

One should never forget spare tire valves and a hand-tire pump for emergency.

In lapping the piston it should be given both a reciprocating and oscillating motion.

If the silent chain is exposed when in operation it should be oiled as frequently as possible.

Where enamel has cracked and fallen off wire wheels, paint should be applied to prevent rusting.

Maximum tire mileage will be obtained if the casings always are properly inflated and kept free from cuts.

If the driving gears of a speedometer are lubricated once each week they will operate more quietly and for a longer period.

The side walls of the tire must retain a given shape and this shape can be altered by changing either the load carried, or the pressure in the tube.

Winter Clover For Fowl

Clover cured only enough to preserve is excellent, and fowls will eat a portion of it all winter, when they would turn away from cabbage. The shattered heads of clover from the haymows are one of the most valuable of foods for egg production in winter. Pour boiling water on the clover heads, cover them over with a bag, and allow them to steam and soak until the mass has cooled down to about blood heat, then drain off the water and use a pint of wheat bran with each two quarts of clover heads. Mix thoroughly and feed warm.

Fine Scottish Example

Mr. Balfour has congratulated the London unit of the Scottish Woman's Hospitals on "splendid work done and a magnificent example set."

This Bush Yields only 2½ ozs. yearly

A VERY small yield considering the size of the bush. It takes about 6½ bushes to yield a pound of ordinary tea—and about 10 bushes to yield a pound of Red Rose Tea, as only the tender shoots and buds are used to produce the distinctive flavor and richness which characterize this high-grade tea.

In sealed packages only. Try it. 170

JELLICOE'S PIETY

Father Bernard Vaughan, speaking at a meeting in the east end of London, said what he admired so enormously in Admiral Sir John Jellicoe was not only his efficiency as administrator, his efficacy in command, but his splendid manly piety. Just before the great sea fight off Jutland the admiral of the fleet retired to his cabin. There, on his knees, he committed himself and the fleet under his command to the care of God. When he returned to the bridge Sir John was as much at his ease and as calm and collected as though the great battle was some ordinary shamfight practice.

Leave Gown For Khaki

How great has been the sacrifice of Cambridge University in the war is illustrated by the fact that Professor Ridgway, a man with a world-wide reputation, has been lecturing twice a week for two terms—to one lady student! The Professor, who is almost blind, walks two miles into the town to deliver these lectures, and he gives his audience full time.

Some young men propose to a rich girl on their knees and some on their uppers.

Do not try to please everybody, or you will soon be a worn-out weather vane.

Some people like to tell the truth when they become inured to the hardships it entails.

About the time a man begins to have good common sense old age makes him childish and he can't use it.

Any girl who punctuates a love letter is mistaken in thinking there is something the matter with her heart.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

My First Valentine

Having Treasured It, I Came Upon It In Middle Life.

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

I remember the first valentine I ever received. I have good cause to remember it, for it marked an important feature in my life. But this is not the reason for my remembering it. The true cause was the impression made upon me at the time, and that impression has remained with me and will remain with me so long as I live.

In childhood one feels keenly little things that would be of trifling importance in maturity. Child loves are evanescent, but while they last they are of paramount importance. And disappointments! I can remember one day when I was a boy that I was to have been taken to a show. I was away from home at the time and delayed going back till it was too late. I locked myself in my room and bawled so loud that I could be heard all over the house.

But as to my valentine. I was past the age when children are interested in getting a great number of these missives, but not old enough to discard them. At any rate, I received a valentine and was very much affected by it. The filigree work, the bleeding hearts, the attachment, within which was a beautiful Cupid with a bow and a quiver full of arrows, all conspired to thrill me with a delight that I had never felt before. And I took it for a certainty that the little girl who sent it to me loved me as she said she did in the printed verses it contained.

And how my imagination pictured her in the flesh! She had mild blue eyes and golden hair that hung in shining wavelets down her back. I likened her to fairies I had seen in picture books dressed in spangles and holding a rod with a star on one end. There was nothing beautiful that I did not liken her to. And to think that this fair being loved me—not only loved me, but had sent this dainty missive to tell me so!

There was nothing in the valentine to indicate who sent it. Indeed, I think if I had known from whom it came it would have destroyed this vision of loveliness I created. Perhaps I was a boy of more than ordinary ideality. I needed a subject for my dreams. Whether it occurred to me to endeavor to discover my valentine I don't now remember. What I do remember is dwelling upon her as an imaginary creature.

Time did not cure me of my love. I grew to manhood, but I treasured my image, though it gradually faded into a fainter form, the whole leaving a delightful memory.

When I became a man I met a girl to whom I was drawn, not only on account of her physical attractions, but because she was one of those women possessing that which we call character. There is no other word that expresses what I mean, but what it stands for is a great deal.

Margaret Stanford and I became fast friends. Friendship—platonic friendship—is what I felt for her. There was another girl of my acquaintance who affected me very differently. Indeed, she was a very different girl. She was piquant, being also a bit of a flirt, and had brought her fascinations to bear upon me. I do not mean that she was to be blamed for that. It is a woman's province to flatter men, and there are times with every man, no matter how strong, when he needs to be flattered.

Lucy Tisdale's methods were very innocent. She was lovable, not only from a certain native feminine delicacy there was about her, but she had in her a certain romance. She loved poetry and pictures. The voice in a woman is an important factor, and Lucy Tisdale had a very feminine voice. My friend Margaret's voice was rich; Lucy's was like a child's. Another difference between the two girls was that when Margaret was displeased she showed her displeasure with a quiet dignity. Lucy, on the contrary, would cast down her eyes and seem rather hurt than offended.

Why I know not, but I sometimes associated Lucy with my imaginary valentine. I suppose it was that she was childlike. My valentine, being a creature of the imagination and perfect, had a great advantage over Lucy, who was a real being in the flesh. But, being now a man, a great deal of the reverence for the opposite sex that I had when a boy had dwindled. Alas, now that I am an old man, though it has not died out, it has greatly changed. A woman is not a creature to be placed under glass and worshiped. She is to be valued in proportion as she fills the position in which Providence has placed her.

Margaret and Lucy did not belong to the same social set and did not know each other. This enabled me to keep them apart and enjoy the companionship of each as I wanted it. I confess that I wanted Lucy's more than Margaret's. After a hard day's work I usually sought Lucy in the evening. Her sprightliness took the tired feeling out of me. When anything troubled me I turned to Margaret. I have given a reason why when tired I wanted Lucy, but I am unable to say why when troubled I wanted Margaret. I can only say that I needed each for what she supplied.

The world is becoming more strenuous every day. Lucy's disposition became more and more a necessity with me as time went on and care increased with me. The day came when I felt it essential to have her with me all the while, and I married her. She was by no means loath to accept me, and I was very happy with her. But I missed that stimulating influence I had drawn from Margaret. When I was simply tired I got from my wife what I wanted; when I wished for some one to consult, to thrash out plans by talking them over, she failed me. She would talk with me about them, but her suggestions did not tend to put me on the right track or draw me off a wrong one.

On this account I gradually refrained from consulting her about my affairs. Whether or not she noticed the change, she never took me to task for it. I rather fancied that such matters bored her. After my marriage my old friend Margaret became quite chummy with my wife. I think Margaret found in her that which acted as a sedative with me, a faculty for driving dull care away. Margaret was a frequent visitor at our house, and at times when she was with us and I needed some one with whom to thrash out a knotty question I would do so with our guest.

I think that Lucy realized that Margaret was a help to me in this way. At any rate, when she heard us talking over some matter of importance to me she had the good sense to leave us together without interruption. And I doubt if she was ever jealous. Indeed, I had strong proof that she was not as I am about to relate.

Lucy was delicate from a girl. When we had been married ten years a want of vitality set in, and after many trips and a surfeit of medicine I made up my mind that her health could not be restored. From this time on she sank gradually. Shortly before her death she told me that she had not long to live and that there was a matter of importance on which she wished to speak to me. I assented, and she said:

"Frank, why did you not marry Margaret Stanford instead of me?"

"Because I loved you and did not love her."

"Why was that?"

"Because—well, because you appealed to me as she did not."

"How?"

"Well, your sentiment fitted in with mine. Margaret is not an especially sentimental woman."

"I'm not so sure of that. You made a mistake, Frank. You should have married Margaret. She would have been a better helpmeet for you than I."

I confess I was astonished to hear my wife tell me this. I was impressed with her nobility in thus putting another woman above herself. I took her in my arms, but gave no verbal expression of my reverence for her.

"When I am gone," she said, "I want you to correct this mistake. I want you to marry Margaret."

"Oh, Lucy!" was all I could say.

"I always believed that you needed a stronger woman than I, both physically and mentally, but I could not give you up. Now that I must give you up you must let me choose a companion for you for what remains of your life."

I told her that I had no reason to suppose that Margaret would marry me.

"She has always loved you," said my wife.

"How, then, is it," I said astonished, "that you have permitted me to see so much of her?"

"Because I knew you loved me and that she would never try to take you away from me."

My wife died, and in time I married Margaret. I was but thirty-three years old and had the prospect of as much again of life as I had already lived. Contrary to my expectation, I did not miss the sentiment that I had thought she lacked so much as I expected. As time wore on I found her companionship very satisfying, and from the time of our marriage our joint judgment guided our affairs.

One day Margaret said to me that she had, according to my wishes, been getting rid of a lot of accumulations of letters and papers that pertained to the past and were now only an encumbrance. She had brought down some of these to show me before burning them. Looking them over, I came upon a valentine. As I continued to look at it I became impressed with the fact that it was my first valentine, the one that had affected me so deeply. I had treasured it as a boy, but when I grew older had forgotten it.

"Here is something," I said, showing it to my wife, "that gave me a sensation which can never be repeated. The image I conjured up of the child who sent it to me remained with me when I had outgrown the valentine age."

"What was your imaginary sweetheart like?" asked Margaret.

I smiled and said I did not remember; it had faded twenty years agone.

"Was it anything like me?" she asked, looking at me with a quizzical expression.

"You? Oh, dear, no! It was a child, a fairylike little thing, with blue eyes and golden hair."

"More like Lucy?"

"Come," I said, putting the valentine away. "Let us not bring up the past."

Turning from the valentine to Margaret, I noticed a curious expression on her face.

"Why did you ask that?" I said.

"Because I was the fairylike child who sent it to you."

I stood looking at her in a bewildered condition of mind for some time without speaking. Was she in earnest? Something in her expression told me that she was. I folded her in my arms. There were no words to express my feelings.

THE INTERMINABLE DAVIS FAMILY

They All Defended the Family Honor

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"I think, suh," said Colonel Venables, "that the oddest experience a duelist ever had occurred to me a year after the wah. I did not know Majah Davis until after peace came. Then he came to settle in the town where I lived.

"The majah had a good record as a soldier, and it happened that we soon became friends. The first time I saw him I noticed that the lobe of his right ear was partly gone, and I made up my mind that a bullet had inflicted the damage. Of co'se I didn't refer to it, and it was a couple of years befo' he made any explanation. One day as he sat in my office he made some allusion to his failing sight and added:

"'Colonel Venables, there was a time and it was not long ago that I had the sight of an eagle. I think I had the best pair of eyes in the United States.'

"I made some appropriate reply, and he went on:

"'Colonel, I'll tell you how good my eyes were and see if you won't be astonished. 'At the battle of Cedar Mountain I sat on my horse directing the operations of my regiment when I saw a Yankee soldier beside a tree half a mile away. While I watched him he drew up his gun and aimed at me. I saw that he aimed to put a bullet between my eyes. Mind you, colonel, I saw all this as plain as I see you. I could not flinch befo' my regiment, and I had to sit in my saddle and await my doom. After a few seconds his gun was discharged. I saw the bullet coming straight for me, and I watched it until it was within two feet of my head. Then I dodged to the left to avoid it, but I did not dodge quite far enough, and as a consequence the bullet struck the lobe of my ear.'

"'That was indeed wonderful,' I replied, thinking he had been drinking too much and was inclined to boast.

"'Yes, suh,' the majah went on, 'I saw the bullet every foot of the way, and that's how good my eyes were. I'm rather afraid that they are losing their sight, although I saw a bird the other day which was at least flying a mile high.'

"'Then surely, majah, your eyes must be all right. You are the only man I ever met who had seen a bullet in its flight.'

"'But maybe you don't believe my statement, colonel,' he retorted.

"'Why, as you say you saw the bullet I am bound to believe you, although it was a rare thing. I myself have seen cannon balls flying about.'

"'Yes, suh, I saw that bullet, and the man who says I didn't means to insult me.'

"I tried to turn the conversation into other channels, but the majah was obstinate and perverse and would not have it. After a minute or two he said:

"'Colonel Venables, I want a direct answer from you. Do you believe the statement I made or do you not?'

"'You might have possibly been mistaken, majah,' I replied.

"'That is enough, colonel,' he stiffly said as he rose up. 'I will send a friend to you, suh!'

"There it was plain and straight, and within two hours the details of a duel had been arranged. We met and fought the next morning. The majah was a novice with the rapier, and I could have run him through within a minute. I did not wish him any hurt, however. I let him off with a scratch, and we went our ways. We would probably have been friends again, but within two weeks he caught the typhus fever and within a few days was dead. After about three months a stranger entered my office one day and said that he had come to challenge me with a duel.

"'Why, man, I never even saw your face befo'!' I replied.

"'But I am a brother of Majah Davis, whom you fought a few months ago. You must give me satisfaction.'

"According to the code of honah, if you fought a duel with a man his relatives could take it up as long as they lasted. If the majah's brother thought that any stain had rested upon his record he had a right to challenge me. I selected pistols, and when we met in the grove I sent a ball through his shoulder, and his bullet grazed my hip.

"In about fou' weeks another stranger entered my office. His name was Davis, and he was a brother to the last one, and he had come upon the same errand. There was no hard feelings. We spoke very pleasantly, and I agreed to accept the challenge from him. I selected rapiers this time, and we wounded each other. He went away home, and I carried my arm in a sling fo' three or fou' weeks. Then, suh, came the fourth Davis. He was a brother to the others and a fine spoken man. I could not refuse his request, as he had made a journey of fifty miles to make it. I returned to pistols this time, and I wounded him in the side, and he wounded me above the right knee.

"It was perhaps three months when the fifth Davis brother made his call. When he had introduced himself I was so surprised that I called out:

"'Heavens, man, have you come about that old duel?'

"With a smile he replied that he had and that he hoped I would give him early satisfaction.

"'Is there no end to the Davis brothers?' I politely asked.

"He told me that there were three more to come, and, would you believe it, suh, I was obliged to fight them all!"

Was Anaemic
FOR OVER A YEAR

Anaemia, or blood turning to water, is caused by the heart becoming deranged, and if the heart becomes weakened it cannot pump the blood as it should. As a result the blood becomes impoverished, and it loses its nourishing qualities. The face becomes pale and thin, and the lips bloodless. There is a weakness, tiredness and loss of weight.

When those suffering from thin or watery blood start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they can see a change from the outset.

Every dose introduces into the blood those vital elements necessary to make it rich and red. The pale cheeks take on the rosy hue of health, the weight increases, and the whole being thrills with a new life.

Mrs. R. J. Grey, Fredericton, N. B., writes: "When I was a girl working at general house work I overtaxed my strength and became completely run down. For over a year I was very bad with anaemia. A friend told me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I got a box and when it was done I decided to get six more When I had taken them I gained not only in strength, but in flesh and colour, and best of all was good health."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box; three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

B. C. Fish Valuable.

In the report of the Fisheries Department of the Province for the year 1915 it is stated that the value of the fishery products of British Columbia for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1915, was $11,515,085, which is almost 37 per cent. of the total fishery products of the Dominion for that year.

The favorable showing which is made is notwithstanding the fact that an off year on the Fraser meant a decrease of $2,376,312 from the preceding year. British Columbia fishermen produced a value $3,784,890 in excess of that of any other province, and $623,616 in excess of New Brunswick, Ontario, Quebec, and Prince Edward Island combined. The halibut fishery shows great development. In 1913 Prince Rupert received 7,520,810 pounds, and in 1915 16,095,515 pounds.

Army's Colossal Demands

The vastness of the work of maintaining the British army—apart from feeding it—may be gauged from a few figures. In one month there were issued to the troops 450 miles of telephone wire, 570 telephones, 524,300 sandbags, 10,000 pounds of dubbin for boots, 38,000 bars of soap, 150,000 pairs of socks, and 100,000 pairs of boots.

In ten days there were also distributed 118,160 fur waistcoats and 315,075 flannel belts.

The way that insignificant items amount up where large numbers of troops are concerned is shown by the fact that every week there is issued on an average five tons of vaseline for the feet and 100 tons of horse-shoes.

Some idea of the complexity of the work can be gathered by reference to the official "Vocabulary of Stores," which contains 50,000 items.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

We say that the disciples could not but understand Him to mean His personal visible return to this earth, in the glory of his Father and with His holy angels and as to the duty enjoined of watching for the coming, the apostles could never have imagined what some at the present day imagine and teach, that the duty would be fulfilled by believing that the Lord would certainly return, but in the distant future. The apostles could not but understand the Saviour to mean that they were to regard his return as an event possibly near at hand for which they were to watch as virgins for the coming of the bridegroom—as faithful servants for the return of their Master. So undoubtedly the apostles did understand the injunction, and accordingly believed and taught the possible nearness of the advent— that for ought that was revealed Christ might come in their day. They did not, as is sometimes alleged, believe or each that Christ would certainly come in their day, but that he might come, and that in that sense, the coming was to be regarded as even near. The proof that the apostles so taught is twofold their language does not fairly admit of any other interpretation, and second the Apostolic church understood the apostles so to teach. As to the language of the apostles in reference to the advent, Paul writes to the Thessalonians, "We which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them that are asleep. We which are alive and remain shall be caught up with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. Of the times and the seasons ye have no need that I write unto you for yourselves know perfectly that the days of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. But ye brethren are not in darkness that, that day should overtake you as a thief. Therefore let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober, (1st Thess., 4:15, 5-6). To the Phillipans he writes our conversation is in heaven from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ (3-20). Let your moderation be known unto all men, the Lord is at hand (4-5). To the Romans he writes, The night is far spent, the day is at hand, let us therefore put off the works of darkness; and let us put on the armour of light, (13-12). So St. Peter in his first epistle. The end of all things is at hand, be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer. (4-7). So St. James exhorts those who were enduring affliction. Be patient, brethren unto the coming of the Lord. Be ye patient, stablish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth night. (5-7-8). That these and other similar passages that might be quoted it should be observed, are not exhortations to duty based on the certainty of Christ's coming. They are exhortations to watchfulness and patience and holy living in view as to the uncertainty as to the time, and hence the possible nearness—uncertain, not of course in the divine purpose, but to human foresight. In Thessalonians, 2 chap., Paul exhorts the Thessalonians thus—be not soon shken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter, as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand. Bishop Elliott says that false doctrine was being taught, that the day of the Lord had already set in, thus confusing the whole idea of a personal visible advent, just as at a later period Hymenues and Philetus confused the true doctrine of the resurrection by affirming that it was already past. This interpretation is favoured—not only by the expressed language, the day of Christ is present, but also by the intimation that the Thessalonians were in danger of being shaken in mind and troubled by the erroneous doctrine referred to Christians in apostolic days were not so affected by the prospect of the nearness of Christ's coming. It was to them a blessed hope and they looked for it, and hasted unto it with longing and expectation. In his first epistle to the Thessalonians written probably within the previous year, partly commended them in that they were waiting for the Son of God from heaven. If, however, they were subsequently taught, as some interpreter of God's word at the present day, teach that by the parousia of our Lord they were not to understand a personal advent, but a spiritual coming, and that this coming had already occurred, we can readily understand why Paul would beseech to be not shaken in mind, or troubled with doubts and fears, as to the certainty of what he had previously taught them both orally and in his first epistle, the literal personal coming of the Lord. This interpretation is confirmed by the subsequent exhortation in the same chapter, brethren stand fast and hold the traditions which ye have been taught whether by word or our epistle. He reminds them that when He was yet with them he had told them that before the day of Christ there should first come a falling away —an apostasy that then the man of sin should be revealed and that then the Lord would come to consume him, with the spirit of his mouth and destroy him with the brightness of his coming, an apostasy and the revelation of the man of sin before the advent is predicted, but the time within which these events would occur, is left wholly uncertain, as if to guard them against assuming that for the occurrence of these events a long period must necessarily intervene before the advent. He tells them that the mystery of iniquity doth already work, that they knew what withholdeth the revelation of the man of sin, that as soon as this restraining power was taken out of the way, that wicked one would be revealed and then the Lord would come for his destruction. Is there anything here consistent with what is repeatedly and explicitly taught elsewhere, the possible nearness of the advent. In his commentary on this passage, Meyer says: It is incontestable as the result of correct exegesis, that Paul not only considered Antichrist as directly preceding the advent, but also regarded the advent as so near that he himself might then be alive. The events which he predicted were for him so near, that he himself even thought that he would survive them. As conclusive that Paul himself did not regard the events predicted as inconsistent with the possible nearness of the advent is the fact that to the Phillipans in which he expressly declares—the day of the Lord is near were written subsequently to this epistle to the Thessalonians. Whatever questions may be raised as to the interpretation of this notable passage on the main point at issue between premillenarians and post-millenarians its teaching or rather what it does not teach, would seem to be indubitable and decisive. Paul is here fortelling what would occur between the time then present and the advent He mentions, an apostasy, he mentions the revelation of the man of sin, but he makes no mention or intimation of a millennial era of right-eousness and peace on earth, such as the old testament prophets predict of the Messianic Kingdom. Now is it credible that Paul would have omitted all allusion to the Messianic Kingdom if he believed that such an era would precede the advent. That we have not misapprehended the teaching of the apostles is confirmed by the fact that the Apostolic church believed that Christ might come before the generation then living had passed away and accordingly looked for, the glorious appearing with longing and expectation of the many eminent authorities for this assertion that might be referred to we select the following. In Lange's commentary on 1st Cor., 1-7, it is said the constant expectation of our Lord's second coming it one of the characteristic features of primitive christianity, hence the clause has been taken as a simple paraphrase of the word "christians"—on the same passage Dr. Hodge says, the second advent of Christ so clearly predicted by himself and his apostles, was the object of longing expectation to all the early Christians. On the same passage Mr. Barnes says: The earnest expectation of the Lord Jesus became one of the marks of early Christian piety. On the same passage Bishop Ellicott says, waiting for the revelation, that is the second visible appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ which the early church expected would soon occur. In Conybeare and Howson's life of St. Paul it is said the early church and even the apostles themselves expected the Lord to come again in that very generation. St. Paul himself shared in that expectation. A few quotations are necessary to finish this part of our subject, which will be given (D.V.) next week.

Yours sincerely,

James Sutherland.

Had Violent Coughing Fits

Looked Like Consumptive

Mrs. Mary Whelen, North Forks, N.S., writes: "Having taken five bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, during the past few weeks, to relieve a chronic cough and general throat trouble, allow me to express my unbounded satisfaction and thanks as to its sterling qualities. A short time ago I became subject to violent coughing fits at night and directly after rising in the morning. I began losing weight, and all my friends cheerfully informed me that I was going into consumption.

"After taking the 'Dr. Wood's' I am pleased to relate that the cough has entirely disappeared and I have since regained the lost weight. I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup."

There are many imitations of "Dr. Wood's" on the market so see that none of these so-called "pine syrups" are handed out to you when you ask for "Dr. Wood's." It has been on the market for twenty-five years, is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S BUNGALOW APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

The tidy housekeeper of moderate means is always interested in herself and in her home to such degree that she aims to look her best, even when working, and she does not consider an apron a thing apart, but something necessary to the complete furnishing of her wardrobe. The favorite style is the bungalow apron and the one pictured is sure to interest all who see it.

The garment hangs straight from the shoulder—just like the one piece dress of fashion's acceptance. The upper part fits to the figure with neatness and the fulness below is drawn to the back and held there with tie strings. The pocket in each front is a convenience made attractive with banding in opposing color; the square neck is finished with banding also and the kimono sleeve has a cuff facing to correspond.

Among the pretty wash materials for developing the design are plain or striped percale, lawn, chambray, gingham, &c.; for studio work, linen, sateen and the like may be considered appropriate. You could not be better occupied for one hour than you will be in making this garment.

The apron pattern No. 8,161 cuts in sizes 36, 40 and 44. To make in size 36 requires 5 yards 36 inch material and ⅝ yard 36 inch contrasting goods to trim.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

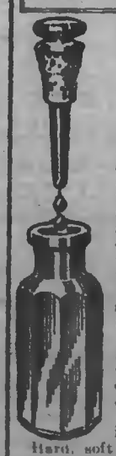
NO PAIN AT ALL!

CORNS DO LIFT OUT

No humbug! Apply few drops then lift corns off with fingers.



Just think! You can lift off any kind of a corn or callus without one twinge of pain or soreness.

A Cincinnati man discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Any druggist will sell a tiny bottle of freezone, like here shown, for very little cost. You apply a few drops directly upon a tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it right off.

Freezone is wonderful. It dries instantly. It doesn't eat away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Hard, soft or corns between the toes, as well as painful calluses, lift right off. There is no pain before or afterwards. No soreness or smarting. It is truly astonishing. It always works. No humbug or foolishness. Genuine freezone is only sold in these small bottles, packed in a little sealed wood case, bearing a yellow wrapper. Beware of imitations.

SUMMER DIET.

Why Overfeed the Body In Hot Weather?

Change of diet is just as essential to good health, once the warm weather arrives, as a change of clothes. No one would think of dressing in heavy woolens, furs and velvets with the thermometer soaring. Why, then, feed the system during the hot days with the same sort of heavy food which makes up the winter menu?

Too few housewives realise that the body craves change of diet once the warm weather sets in. They go on serving in summer hot soups, steaming meats, heavy desserts, just as though were the middle of winter, and then wonder why their families do not seem to relish their food.

Begin now to serve summer meals, for warm weather is here and a change of diet is necessary to good health. Make the first change in the appearance of the table. If you have been in the habit of using cloths use doilies during the summer season, as they give the appearance of coolness and summer comfort. They are, too, a great saving of labor during the warm weather season. It is no idle task to wash out a big tablecloth once a berry stain mars its pristine beauty, but if a doily becomes soiled how easy it is to take this single piece and dip it into the tub. During the berry and fruit season, when so many spots are apt to appear, no matter how careful the diners, this labor saving scheme should be given consideration.

Some housewives go so far as to substitute the paper doilies for the linen ones, throwing them away as they become soiled. These come in so many pretty designs and are so inexpensive that this form of table adornment is both pretty and economical.

SURE WAY TO GET RID OF DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Don't go near the oven with the dough while mixing it and if the oven is full put the dough in a cool place until you can use it.

SUNDAY READING FOR A THOUGHTFUL HOUR

Prepared for the Examiner by a Local Church Worker

The following thoughts from "God and the war" by Archdeacon Patterson Smyth, come with a benediction to those who mourn deeply, because of uncertainty as to the future of loved ones, careless and thoughtless, it may be, who have passed into the unseen world from the battle field.

"Rejected, still He pursues each one: My child, what more could Thy God have done?"

Thy sin hath hid the light of heaven from me, when alone in the darkness, I died for thee; thy sin of to-day in its shadow lay between my face and one turned away. And we stop and turn for a moment's space. To fling back that look in the Saviour's face. To give His heart, yet another grief, and glory in the wrong.

And still Christ keeps on loving us, loving us all along."

The Bible gives no encouragement to hope that one who with full knowledge of Christ, keeps on wilfully rejecting Him all through this life, will be able to turn to Him in any other life. But we may tell the poor mother, grieving over her careless boy, who died in battle, that her deep love and pain for her dead son, is but a shadow of the deep love and pain of God—that no one will be surprised or trapped in his ignorance—that no one will be lost whom it is possible for God to save—that no one will be lost until the Heavenly Father has, as it were, thrown His arms around him and looked him full in the face with the bright eyes of His love, and then of his own deliberate will he would not have Him. As, and more than that we can say. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth. So is every one born of the spirit." Let no man limit his holy influence. Surely He is nearer to the hearts of men when death is every moment knocking at the door.

When I hear of a careless boy, as he charges into battle, putting up a little prayer, not for himself, but for the dear mother at home in case he should die,—when I see him steadfastly facing death for the sake of duty, a comforting in the last moment of a dying friend. I know that God is near him. When I read of a man killed, because he rushed, but amid a hail of bullets to bring in a wounded comrade. I feel that such deeds come but through the Spirit of God, and I seem to hear the voice of Christ, who died for men—Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend."

And so I hope greatly, for I know not how far that Spirit of God has gone with that man's soul. I would not make light of life's responsibility. I would not encourage mere sentimental optimism. But I would say: every poor troubled mother to-day—Christ cares more than you care—Christ will do for your boy the best that may be done for him. Trust Christ with him.

Through all depths of pain and loss,
Sinks the plummet of His cross:
Never yet abyss was found,
Deeper than that cross could sound.
So we leave them in His hands,
Where better could we leave them?

FIDELIS

"O God! the path of grief has been,
My way of guidance into Thee:
And still through clouds that shut me in,
I follow though I cannot see."

AN OLD TIME FARM

And the Methods That Were In Use In the Year 1840.

DAYS OF THE SIMPLE LIFE.

When All Kinds of Clothing Were Made at Home, When Eggs Sold For a Shilling a Dozen and the High Cost of Living Was Not a Big Problem.

In view of the modern day high cost of living and of the many wonderful advances made in the last century—the railroad, telegraph, the ocean cable, the telephone, the automobile and farm and labor saving machinery of all kinds and the amazing changes these inventions have necessarily wrought in all directions in almost every walk of life—it may be of interest to recall living conditions on a farm in the year 1840.

The farm I have in mind consisted of 200 acres. The stock was fifteen cows, a yoke of oxen, twenty sheep, an old white horse, a dozen pigs, fifty hens, ten geese, a few ducks and a flock of turkeys.

The farm produced practically every thing the family consumed, both cloth ing and food. The sheep furnished the wool, which was carded at a "fulling" mill and made into rolls for spinning.

At home it was spun into yarn and woven on a hand loom. For beds it was left white; for clothing it was dyed any color desired. A competent housewife could make dyes of logwood, indigo or cochineal. The white and black wool were mixed to produce a gray like the Confederate uniform.

There were no ready made clothes; all clothes were made in the home. There was no woven underwear. Stockings were knitted at home as well as mittens and tippets. Caps with ear laps were of rabbit skin. There were no shoes. In the winter boots came up to the knees.

Several cows were killed each year There was a tannery near by, where the skins were tanned. A shoemaker made our boots. They were usually too small and gave much trouble and pain.

The flax, cut and laid down until the fiber loosened from the woody part, was put through a heckle worked by hand and then spun and woven. This strong linen cloth was used for summer clothing, towels, etc. The seed was saved to make flaxseed tea (a medicine) or poultice for bruises.

For food we had everything needed—fresh meat, potatoes, beets, cabbages, parsnips, pumpkins for pies, apples, which lasted from fall to spring; cider, which gave us vinegar or produced a cider champagne.

Half a dozen pigs killed in the fall gave us plenty of ham and bacon, lard, sausages and salt pork. The hams and bacon were hung up in the smokehouse, a small building with no opening except the door. A small fire produced more smoke than heat, but gave the hams and bacon a very delicious flavor.

There were plenty of chickens for roasting and potpies and eggs, turkeys for Thanksgiving and Christmas, occasionally a roast goose with apple sauce.

From the cows' milk we made both butter and cheese. What butter and cheese the family did not consume was sold in a nearby village. Butter usually brought 12½ cents a pound. Cheese was also made at home, as there were neither creameries nor cheese factories. Cheese was sold at 5 to 6 cents a pound. All eggs not used went to the village store and brought 10 cents to 12 cents a dozen.

Every farmer made his own soap. It was called soft soap. It was soft, but very strong, and took the dirt off your hands and face very thoroughly and some skin also unless you were careful in your ablutions.

Little was heard of the world at large. Twenty miles from the railroad the great four horse stagecoach came every day, bringing the mails. There were few newspapers or magazines. The telegraph was unknown. The Atlantic cable did not succeed until 1866. There were only twenty-three miles of railroad in 1830.

All the wonderful agencies which have added to the power of man in the last century will not be lost, but will be added to constantly. The many problems of the modern day high cost of living can only be solved by time and the efforts of our greatest minds.—Warner Miller that you can soon get rid of the agony of chapped hands by using Zam-Buk. Mrs. William Elstone, of Haliburton, Ont., writes:—

DON'T YOU KNOW

"Last winter my hands were very badly chapped. I used a lot of different so-called remedies, but my hands only seemed to get worse. Finally I tried the great herbal healer—Zam-Buk—which completely healed them."

Mrs. M. A. Bateson, of Souris, Man., writes:—"I have used Zam-Buk for chapped hands, and know of nothing to equal its wonderful soothing and healing powers."

Zam-Buk is also unequalled for chilblains, frost bites, cold cracks, and cold sores; as well as eczema, scalp sores, old wounds, ulcers, blood-poisoning, piles, burns and scalds, cuts and all skin injuries. 50c. a box. All druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

How Indigo Is Produced.

A primitive but effective method of obtaining indigo in southern India is practiced by the natives. The plant is tightly packed the day it is cut, in a large vat, into which water is run, and boards are then placed over the top and are kept in position by heavy crossbeams. The plant is allowed to soak for ten or twelve hours, during which time a heavy fermentation takes place. The liquid is then drained off into another vat, after which coolies beat and stir the soaked mass thoroughly with flails until the dye begins to emerge. The whole is then allowed to settle. The clear liquid is drained off, and the residue is boiled in copper vessels. It is then pressed into hard cakes ready for the market.

Unfermented Grape Juice.

Wash the grapes, free them from the stems, reject all that are not sound and place in a kettle. Add only enough water to cover, bring slowly to the boiling point, cook until the fruit is well softened, then drain as for jelly. Place the drained juice in an earthen dish and keep well covered in a cool place. The next morning bring to a boil, let it boil up well, then drain through a jelly bag. Continue this for three successive mornings, rejecting all sediment each time. The last morning measure the juice and to each quart allow a pound of granulated sugar. Boil four minutes, strain through a cheesecloth, bottle, cork and seal immediately. Dilute with water when ready to use and serve in glasses half filled with cracked ice. This is not only very refreshing, but very nourishing as well. Seltzer water can be used instead of the clear water with most excellent results.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure and Eat Less Meat.

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water and above all take a spoonful of salts occasionally to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

FRENCH ADVANCE IN COUCY FOREST

Further Progress Near The Hindenburg Line

Despite The Heavy Resistance French Make More Progress

Village of Coucy Le Chateau is Taken by General Nivelle's Forces Who Have Also Occupied the Entire Northern Part of the Forest of Coucy ---To-day's Official Reports Show the Allies Still Making Gains on the Western Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official Communique), March 27.—French forces have occupied the Village of Coucy Le Chateau and are progressing against the Germans in the Forest of Coucy, having occupied the entire northern part of that tract, according to the official statement to-day. The advances in Coucy Forest occurred during the night, and to-day Paris reported French forces further progressing. "Despite heavy resistance the French carried the Village of Coucy Le Chateau," the War Office asserted. "In the region of Soissons the French carried a farm northwest of Margial."

(Special Cable to The Examiner by William Phillip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, March 27.—One day spent in the territory just wrenched from German domination by the Franco-British arms would make the most timid human pacifist jack-rabbit stand on his hind legs and spit in the Prussian war hound's face. If American voters could spend an hour among the pinched faces of babies, could hear the stories of wronged women, could see the pillaged towns, the sacked cities, and the devasted country sides; then any Washington politician refusing to help resist the Kaiser's decision to treat Americans in the same way would find himself suddenly snatched from his chair by the nape of his neck and hustled where the whang doodle mourneth for evermore.

"Is America coming into the war," a woman with a sick husband and several small children asked me at Nesle. "Tell your people, for God's sake—for their sake—for everybody's sake—help us stop the war, because it won't end until these horrible Prussians are beaten. And with America in, they will be beaten the quicker."

LONDON, March 27.—Immediate re-examination of all men heretofor rejected for military service by medical examiners, was announced as an urgent step decided upon by the Government, in the House of Commons to-day. The Government also introduced a bill prolonging the present session of Parliament.

LONDON, March 27.—British forces have captured Equaricourt and Longavesnes, according to despatches received this afternoon from Press headquarters of Field Marshal Haig's army.

Longavesnes was taken by British cavalry it was stated.

PARIS, March 27.—To-day the French were pushing on around Margival in scores of disconnected action, with the whole advance nevertheless marvellously co-ordinated. Bit by bit they are taking farm after farm, village after village, making a steady advance, with a corresponding German retrogression.

WILL RENOUNCE TITLES.

PETROGRAD, March 27.—Grand Dukes Nicholas, Michael, Alexander, Beris, Serge, George and Dimitry, and the Princes Gabriel, Igor and Alexander, to-day joined in a formal telegraphic notice to the new Government declaring their desire to associate themselves with Russia under her new regime and announced their agreement that their rights and privileges under the old regime, should now be exercised by the new Government. This means they renounce their titles also.

EXTRA PROTECTION.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Precautions of the most elaborate kind will be taken to protect President Wilson from any harm when he delivers his war message to Congress one week from to-day. The usual secret service and police protection thrown about the President, will be greatly augmented. The greatest crowd that has ever attended a joint session is expected to be on hand to hear the President's war address.

ALLIES UNEARTH UNDERGROUND CITY ABANDONED BY ENEMY IN RETREAT

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES AFIELD, March 27. — The new German line to-day was under direct menace from Anglo-French forces at several points.

With systematic organized pursuit of the Teutonic forces there was the greatest speculation all along the front on whether the enemy would be able to hold their new positions. An underground city where at least 3,000 Germans must have lived in great comfort, was uncovered by the advancing troops to-day.

National Service League Branch Formed in Peterboro'

Organization Will Undertake the Task of Securing Help For Farmers

The Speakers' Patriotic League met last evening in the city hall and among other things the members decided to form themselves into a Peterborough branch of the National Service League. It was also decided to accept the offer of Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., to use his Aylmer street office as a centre wherein can be kept a register of all farmers in need of help. The same office will also receive the names of all applicants desirous of serving on the farm for any length of time. Later on speakers will be sent into the country to organize all outlying centres such as Lakefield, Norwood and Havelock, where a similar work can be carried on.

The meeting adjourned until such time as further information can be secured from Mr. Abbott, Secretary of the Toronto branch.

NATIONALIZATION OF TWO RAILWAYS IS SUGGESTED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, March 27.—The report of the Drayton-Smith-Acworth Commission on Canadian railways is not yet in the hands of the government, but is in process of completion. Sir Henry Drayton and F. W. Acworth favour the nationalization of the G. T. and C. N. systems, but A. H. Smith favours corporation control with a continuation of financial assistance until these roads are in a position to stand on their feet. The report that one hundred millions are required to place the two systems on an economic running basis is believed to be substantially correct.

A receivership or nationalization would seem under the circumstances to have two alternatives.

CRITICISM AT HOME RESENTED BY OFFICERS WHO ARE STILL OVERSEAS

The following extracts from a letter received from a Peterborough officer overseas deal with a subject about which there has been considerable comment in Peterborough:—

"There's a thing I wanted particularly to write about and that's the return to Canada of the Band and the Majors (of the 93rd). We hear a good deal of talk in Peterborough about the Band shirking and the Majors not giving up their rank. I saw a clipping from the Review the other day, obviously aimed at Major Lech with a lot of slurs at the Band thrown in. This talk and writing is done by a lot of dirty-minded civilians who don't know the first thing about the case. The Band were nearly all unfit for duty in France to begin with. They got rotten treatment after we first got to England, not from the battalion, but from outside. So they were glad to get away in any way. I've no doubt they're more use at home as a body than the few fit ones could be in France.

Now about the Majors. They both went to France on tour and while there did whatever was asked of them. They took their share of all work going and the danger too. Major Lech was certainly an efficient man, and is admitted here to have been the most efficient and capable Major they've had among those of depleted units sent to the 39th, and they've had some experience. The question of rank and reversion is too complicated to explain, and is certainly not understood in Canada. It all comes of the blasted muddle the whole organization of the C. E. F. has been in from the start. No one here, and we're more capable of judging—I think—blames any of those who returned, in the least.

The 93rd was Peterborough's own regiment. It has borne a good name at home and here for discipline, decent behaviour and efficiency, and it is a pity if the city can't withhold insinuating and dirty underhand criticism, and rather uphold its good name.

Our fellows have done well in France, and our old joke of "A Company leading" has become grim in the casualty lists. A lot of our best have gone under, poor fellows, and a lot of others with nasty wounds. I often wonder how many we could muster when its all over.

The officers have been lucky so far. They are all well spoken of. One has been recommended for the M.C. I hear, and another mentioned in despatches. We had a pick lot all through from the colonel down, and it was a shame they broke us up."

A BIG SMOKER IS ARRANGED BY THE 247th BATTALION

Bout Between Gallagher and Bull of the Riversides, Toronto, Will Be a Big Feature of the Evening---Presentation Made to Local Artilleryman---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

A big smoker under the auspices of the 247th Battalion will be held in the armouries on Friday night of this week. The feature of the evening will be a six round boxing bout between two well known members of the Riverside Club of Toronto, Bull, one of the best featherweights in Canada, and "Red" Gallagher, ex-featherweight champion of Canada. They will box six three-minute rounds with Sergt.-Major Turley of the Great War Veterans' Association of Toronto, as referee. Sergt.-Major Turley, who is a well-known entertainer, will take part in the programme. There will also be a boxing bout between Bandeman Dailin and Sergt. Giorno, to decide which man will represent the 247th Battalion in the 125-pound class in the Canadian Military Championships. Other items on the programme will include blindfold boxing, and a bout between Kid Coat and Kid Pants, who will settle along standing rivalry.

The band of the 247th will supply music. The smoker is free to all soldiers in uniform and all returned soldiers, while there will be an admission charge of 25c. to the general public.

Three more Peterborough soldiers are at Quebec on their way home from service overseas. The list includes Corp. A. Moscrop, who went overseas with the 39th Battalion, Pte. R. Irwin of the 21st Battalion and Pte. J. McFadden, who went overseas as a member of the military police of the 93rd Battalion and was one of the first 93rd men to be wounded in France. Pte. McFadden is the first member of the Peterborough Battalion to return wounded from overseas.

Pte. Henry Garfield Puffer, of Norwood, has been added to the strength of the 247th Battalion.

To Gunner C. A. Hallowell, Peterborough.

We, the employes of this department of the Canadian General Electric Company cannot allow you to sever your connections with this department without expressing our appreciation of your faithful services to the department before leaving to take part in our Empire's great struggle as an associate and employee. We are proud of you and greatly impressed with your principles. We are sure you that it is with mingled feelings of regret and pride that we bid you farewell, and regret at losing you for a time from our city; and proud at your courage and fidelity to the Flag and Empire, which you have shown by your enlisting for overseas service. As a slight token of our appreciation of your desire to assist in our Empire's war, we ask you to accept this watch. We hope and trust that you will be spared to return safe to your home again, after fearlessly doing your duty as a British soldier.

Signed on behalf of the Department Employees.

Feb. 22nd, 1917
Somewhere in France

My dearest Friends and Pals of the Y.M.C.A.—It hardly seems like two years since I cast my shadow upon the steps of the dear old building, but it is just two years since I had my first and only furlough from the army while in Canada, and no doubt a great many changes have taken place in that period of time. We are many miles apart but no matter what space is between me and you, I shall never forget the good times and good influence I received at the Y.M.C.A. and as the boys are rolling up to fit themselves for the greatest game of all. I am sure you are doing your utmost to help them along, both physically and spiritually, and at the

The following report of the Playgrounds Association Special Committee on Public Bathing Houses, was given by Mr. Meserve:

We, the undersigned, members of your special committee on public bathing, desire to report as follows:

Following our appointment on October 27th last, two meetings of the committee were held, it being decided to thoroughly investigate Otonabee River sites available ah bathing centres, to secure estimates of buildings required and cost of caretaker, etc. We also corresponded with about thirty different Canadian cities in a class with Peterborough and have on file letters from twenty cities stating that public bathing facilities are being provided by them.

Our investigation of sites convinced us that there are but two sites that are probably obtainable at the present time without the purchase of land, namely at the foot of Lake street on Little Lake, and in or near Inverlea Park. These are both desirable localities and well situated for the majority of the citizens of Peterborough.

Our investigation of buildings convinced us that a building 20 x 80 feet in size would be required at each bathing centre, each building to be well equipped with all needed features. A local contracting firm very carefully figured the expense of the building desired estimating the cost of construction at $650.

It was thought that $650.00 would cover the expense of a caretaker, life-saving apparatus and cleaning the beach in connection with each building, making the initial amount required to establish each centre for

TWO ORGANIZATIONS WANT APRIL 21ST AS TAG DAY DATE

Great War Veterans Consider Anniversary of Second Battle of Ypres as Appropriate Occasion For Their Campaign to Raise Funds

C. K. L. WANTS IT TOO

Mrs. J. Knox and Miss Mowat, representing the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Kitchener League and Sergeant P. Victor, representing the Great War Veterans' Association of Peterborough appeared before the Board of Police Commissioners at a meeting that was held yesterday afternoon. Both organisations want to hold a tag day on Saturday, April 21st. This is the anniversary of the beginning of the second battle of Ypres and the veterans of the Great War consider it a very appropriate day for raising funds with which to perpetuate the memory of those who paid the supreme sacrifice, care for those who survived and otherwise promote the welfare of the veterans of the present war. The Kitchener League lay claim to this particular date by reason of the fact that they selected the date four weeks prior to the initial announcement made by the Veterans' Association. Mrs. Knox for the Kitchener League gave a resume of the work undertaken by the League, which mainly consisted of supplying socks and other necessaries for the boys in the trenches. If the work of the League is to continue for another season it is absolutely essential that funds be forthcoming at once, said Mrs. Knox.

THE VETERANS

Sergeant Victor admitting the claim of the League, said that the soldiers were a unit in their desire to commemorate the anniversary of the second battle at Ypres by such a worthy effort.

Judge Hoyeke, chairman of the Commission said that the Commission had no jurisdiction over the matter and the most the Commissioners could do, would be to see that the police did not interfere with either of the organizations should they decide to hold a tag day. Chief Thompson suggested that the two organizations get together and have one tag day on the twenty-first of April and that the proceeds be equally divided between the two bodies.

Mrs. Knox suggested that the Vet-

CURLING AND CITIZENSHIP.

At first thought, the connection between curling and citizenship does not seem intimate. The election of Mr. W. D. Campbell to the presidency of the Peterborough Curling Club expresses it in part. Mr. Campbell owes the honour, upon what he is to be warmly congratulated, to the fact that he is an enthusiastic curler, and a good citizen, one of the foremost of our younger set of business men, who, apart from his general genial qualities, as a good fellow, owes the high esteem in which he is held, to his intimate and long association with the best elements of our business and general citizenship, with whom he has come into contact in the fine intimacy of the curling ice. Curling is a game that brings out the best that is in a man, physically and socially; its necessarily indoor character brings everybody into closer personal relations, and it has this negative merit, that even if a man were tempted to not play the game—to play unfairly—he has no opportunity—every move and play are open to everybody's view—the cards are on the table. The merit of curling is, in part, in its record. As a rule only the best or the better class of citizens and good sports are to be found amongst its devotees. Another feature of curling—at the local rink—is that it is a citizen's club as well. Every night the "gallery" contains a lot of spectators, men of like calibre with the curlers, who meet and associate in a way that makes their intercourse that of a civic or social club. They discuss civic matters in the intervals of watching the shots, and much intelligent interest in local interests and welfare is developed.

PLACE AND PATRONAGE.

The meeting of Conservatives of South York on Saturday, though ostensibly called to "perfect the organization of the riding," seemed to concern itself chiefly with disciplining Mr. W. F. Maclean, M.P., the sitting member, who has shown symptoms of thinking for himself in a way incompatible with the principles of the party. The president led the assault upon Mr. Maclean, whose chief offence seems to have been that he advocated in parliament a coalition government—in itself treason from the party point of view, since it meant displacement of the present government. The association at its last annual meeting had roundly condemned Mr. Maclean for his demand for protection to the nickel interests of Canada. The chairman said that Mr. Maclean has done a great deal for the Conservative party, and the party owed him much, but "no member of the Conservative party had any privilege to travel under the flag of the party unless he stood continually by its principles." The sum of Mr. Maclean's offence thus seems to be that he has outraged the principles of the party by advocating a coalition government, which would be sawing through the main plank of the party—office.

Another matter that seemed to be considered of vital importance was the patronage question. This was discussed with a seriousness that showed that this was considered a monopoly of the Conservative party, and that patronage was to be exercised in the interests of the party primarily, and in the interest of the country incidentally. To show how much at heart patronage was taken, one representative complained that his district that had "shown such outstanding loyalty" did not get a fair share of the patronage. In view of the secretary having had to bear the burden of patronage work, it was decided that the executive committee should act as an advisory board so that, it is to be assumed there would be a fair division of the spoil. Even the appeal of the demands of the war, for the subordination of all interests to its successful prosecution, was unheard and unheeded. The unspeakable evil of the patronage system still remains the piece de resistance of the party's political bill of fare. Holding office seems to be the height of party ambition, and the exploitation of public interests to party advantage is held well upon a level with it.

ONLY RECRUITS NEED RIFLES.

If the expropriation of the Ross Rifle Factory at Quebec by the Dominion Government, like the conversion of Postmaster Blondin, is a little belated as an act of patriotic interest in war administration, it is, at least a recognition of duty. The Ross rifle is stacked permanently and it is held by some not a moment too soon. The government insisted upon arming Canadian soldiers with the Ross rifle in face of the fact that it was unsuitable for active service—a foolish persistance that it is asserted imperilled and sacrificed many brave Canadian lives, and was an obstacle to military success, leaving our Canadian soldier helpless with a "jammed" Ross rifle at the moment when he needed the best working arm to second his courage and protect himself and the interests for which he was fighting. The government, though urged months ago, refused to take over the Ross rifle factory to manufacture Lee-Enfields—the approved arm—at a time when such an action would have meant much more than it does now. The excuse for inaction was given that it would take so much time to remodel the machinery to make the Lee-Enfield that the products of the factory would be of little use in the war. The Mail and Empire, speaking on the subject, and approving the government's tardy action, says "that national control and direct government responsibility are essential." In view of this, why has the government's action been so long delayed? The organ points out that when "the British government could not turn out rifles fast enough to arm its own millions of men, Canada was thankful to have the output of the Ross rifle factory"—even if it was was no use, but a detriment and danger to the Canadian soldier.

It seems, however, that the government organ hasn't much hope that at this late date, the Ross factory will help much to arm our troops at the front—it insists on its value in arming our home soldiers "after the war" when "our militia establishment should not be on so small a footing as 60,000 or 70,000."

Two years ago the Ross rifle was officially condemned. If the government had acted as promptly as their responsibility suggested, and the interests of Canada demanded, the action now taken of expropriating the Ross Rifle Factory, that should have appealed to the most obtuse official mind, would have been taken. The government that takes and has taken so perfunctory an interest in recruiting, could not be expected to be enthusiastic in providing arms for soldiers its negative policy would not produce; only Canadian recruits would need Canadian rifles, and the British looked after the Canadian soldiers at the front.

THE PASSING WINTER AND ITS LESSONS

It is a part of our Canadian patriotism to resent outside criticism of our winter season, as Kipling found out when he wrote a poem based on the assumption that considerable snow falls in this country. The average Canadian feels bound to protest when the foreigner meekly suggests that a rigorous winter has its drawbacks.

Nevertheless, there are winters and winters.

The particular winter that at last shows signs of coming to an end was rendered notable, or notorious, by a coal shortage as well as high prices for numerous foodstuffs. The coal situation, rendered critical by a threatened general railway strike in the United States, made the winter of 1917 memorable, and may assist in getting the people of Canada to face the plain fact that the country experiences every year, several months of severe, cold weather.

It is high time to stop treating King Winter as a jolly old chap incapable of harm and to brand him as a despot against whose tyranny we must strive in season and out of season.

The scientific research commission appointed by the Government will be working on a question of far-reaching significance for Canada when it takes up the matter of providing heat by electrical energy in place of coal. Canada has been supplied by a thoughtful Providence with an abundance of water power. This suggests a possible development to break up the offensive and defensive, unholy alliance between King Winter and King Coal, which, for several months every year, makes this a nation of near-slaves. The time may not be very far distant when we in Canada will not have to grovel at the feet of these two Czars, but will be able by a general use of electricity to rob one dictator of his terrors and the other of his threats and profits. The Hydro-Electric enterprise of Sir Adam Beck and the Ontario Government contains the germ and exemplifies the spirit of a future public utility of the very brightest promise. Scientists invite us to hope that electricity eventually will solve the problem of Canada's winter and, however much the Canadian of the future may envy the hardihood of his ancestors who had to shiver their way down to the cellar in the mornings and wrestle with coal, dust and complicated machinery, he will be just as well off when he can heat up his house by merely turning a button on the wall. And our patriots will find it easier to convince cynical foreigners that winter in Canada is really a delightful season. Besides which, electricity has a most welcome habit of being cheaper as well as more comfortable in the use than what it replaces.

It will be just as easy to think well of Canada when one can light the furnace without getting out of bed and shoot the snow off the front path by pointing a hot-air gun at it out of the second-storey window.—Ottawa Journal.

CURLING AND CITIZENSHIP.

At first thought, the connection between curling and citizenship does not seem intimate. The election of Mr. W. D. Campbell to the presidency of the Peterborough Curling Club expresses it in part. Mr. Campbell owes the honour, upon what he is to be warmly congratulated, to the fact that he is an enthusiastic curler and a good citizen, one of the foremost of our younger set of business men, who, apart from his general genial qualities, as a good fellow, owes the high esteem in which he is held, to his intimate and long association with the best elements of our business and general citizenship, with whom he has come into contact in the fine intimacy of the curling ice. Curling is a game that brings out the best that is in a man, physically and socially; its necessarily indoor character brings everybody into closer personal relations, and it has this negative merit, that even if a man were tempted to not play the game—to play unfairly—he has no opportunity. —every move and play are open to everybody's view—the cards are on the table. The merit of curling is, in part, in its record. As a rule only the best or the better class of citizens and good sports are to be found amongst its devotees. Another feature of curling—at the local rink—is that it is a citizen's club as well. Every night the "gallery" contains a lot of spectators, ten of the calibre with the curlers, who meet and associate in a way that makes their intercourse that of a civic or social club. They discuss civic matters in the intervals of watching the shots, and much intelligent interest in local interests and welfare is developed.

Altogether the game and the curling club, as one of the old timers remarked at the annual meeting last night, is more of an honour to the members than their membership is an honour to the club and the game. If he is not literally correct, at least the merit is equal—honours are even.

PLACE AND PATRONAGE.

The meeting of Conservatives of South York on Saturday, though ostensibly called to "perfect the organization of the riding," seemed to concern itself chiefly with disciplining Mr. W. F. Maclean, M.P., the sitting member, who has shown symptoms of thinking for himself in a way incompatible with the principles of the party. The president led the assault upon Mr. Maclean, whose chief offence seems to have been that he advocated in parliament a coalition government—in itself treason from the party point of view, since it meant displacement of the present government. The association at its last annual meeting had roundly condemned Mr. Maclean for his demand for protection to the nickel interests of Canada. The chairman said that Mr. Maclean has done a great deal for the Conservative party, and the party owed him much, but "no member of the Conservative party had any privilege to travel under the flag of the party unless he stood continually by its principles." The sum of Mr. Maclean's offence thus seems to be that he has outraged the principles of the party by advocating a coalition government, which would be sawing through the main plank of the party—office.

Another matter that seemed to be considered of vital importance was the patronage question. This was discussed with a seriousness that showed that this was considered a monopoly of the Conservative party, and that patronage was to be exercised in the interests of the party primarily, and in the interest of the country incidentally. To show how much at heart patronage was taken, one representative complained that his district that had "shown such outstanding loyalty" did not get a fair share of the patronage. In view of the secretary having had to bear the burden of patronage work, it was decided that the executive committee should act as an advisory board so that it is to be assumed there would be a fair division of the spoil. Even the appeal of the demands of the war, for the subordination of all interests to its successful prosecution, was unheard and unheeded. The unspeakable evil of the patronage system still remains the piece de resistance of the party's political bill of fare. Holding office seems to be the height of party ambition, and the exploitation of public interests to party advantage is held well upon a level with it.

ONLY RECRUITS NEED RIFLES.

If the expropriation of the Ross Rifle Factory at Quebec by the Dominion Government, like the conversion of Postmaster Blondin, is a little belated as an act of patriotic interest in war administration, it is, at least a recognition of duty. The Ross rifle is stacked permanently and it is held by some not a moment too soon. The government insisted upon arming Canadian soldiers with the Ross rifle in face of the fact that it was unsuitable for active service—a foolish persistence that it is asserted imperilled and sacrificed many brave Canadian lives, and was an obstacle to military success, leaving our Canadian soldier helpless with a "jammed" Ross rifle at the moment when he needed the best working arm to second his courage and protect himself and the interests for which he was fighting. The government, though urged months ago, refused to take over the Ross rifle factory to manufacture Lee-Enfields—the approved arm—at a time when such an action would have meant much more than it does now. The excuse for inaction was given that it would take so much time to remodel the machinery to make the Lee-Enfield that the products of the factory would be of little use in the war. The Mail and Empire, speaking on the subject, and approving the government's tardy action, says "that national control and direct government responsibility are essential." In view of this, why has the government's action been so long delayed? The organ points out that when "the British government could not turn out rifles fast enough to arm its own millions of men, Canada was thankful to have the output of the Ross rifle factory"—even if it was was no use, but a detriment and danger to the Canadian soldier.

It seems, however, that the government organ hasn't much hope that at this late date, the Ross factory will help much to arm our troops at the front—it insists on its value in arming our home soldiers "after the war" when "our militia establishment should not be on so small a footing as 60,000 or 70,000."

Two years ago the Ross rifle was officially condemned. If the government had acted as promptly, as their responsibility suggested, and the interests of Canada demanded, the action now taken of expropriating the Ross Rifle Factory, that should have appealed to the most obtuse official mind, would have been taken. The government that takes and has taken so perfunctory an interest in recruiting, could not be expected to be enthusiastic in providing arms for soldiers its negative policy would not produce; only Canadian recruits would need Canadian rifles, and the British looked after the Canadian soldiers at the front.

THE PASSING WINTER AND ITS LESSONS

It is a part of our Canadian patriotism to resent outside criticism of our winter season, as Kipling found out when he wrote a poem based on the assumption that considerable snow falls in this country. The average Canadian feels bound to protest when the foreigner meekly suggests that a rigorous winter has its drawbacks.

Nevertheless, there are winters and winters.

The particular winter that at last shows signs of coming to an end was rendered notable, or notorious, by a coal shortage as well as high prices for numerous foodstuffs. The coal situation, rendered critical by a threatened general railway strike in the United States, made the winter of 1917 memorable, and may assist in getting the people of Canada to face the plain fact that the country experiences every year, several months of severe, cold weather.

It is high time to stop treating King Winter as a jolly old chap incapable of harm and to brand him as a despot against whose tyranny we must strive in season and out of season.

The scientific research commission appointed by the Government will be working on a question of far-reaching significance for Canada when it takes up the matter of providing heat by electrical energy in place of coal. Canada has been supplied by a thoughtful Providence with an abundance of water power. This suggests a possible development to break up the offensive and defensive, unholy alliance between King Winter and King Coal, which, for several months every year, makes this a nation of near-slaves. The time may not be very far distant when we in Canada will not have to grovel at the feet of these two Czars, but will be able by a general use of electricity to rob one dictator of his terrors and the other of his threats and profits. The Hydro-Electric enterprise of Sir Adam Beck and the Ontario Government contains the germ and exemplifies the spirit of a future public utility of the very brightest promise. Scientists invite us to hope that electricity eventually will solve the problem of Canada's winter and, however much the Canadian of the future may envy the hardihood of his ancestors who had to shiver their way down to the cellar in the mornings and wrestle with coal, dust and complicated machinery, he will be just as well off when he can heat up his house by merely turning a button on the wall. And our patriots will find it easier to convince cynical foreigners that winter in Canada is really a delightful season. Besides which, electricity has a most welcome habit of being cheaper as well as more comfortable in the use than what it replaces.

It will be just as easy to think well of Canada when one can light the furnace without getting out of bed and shoot the snow off the front path by pointing a hot-air gun at it out of the second-storey window.—Ottawa Journal.

Playgrounds Association Elect Season's Officers

1917, $1,000. In view of the need of at least two bathing centres, it was voted to ask our City Council for an appropriation of $2,000.

While we were working on this project other individuals and societies were working along the same line with a view to petitioning the City Council to take action, and our movement has had the most hearty support of the two evening papers, The Examiner and The Review. Thirteen of these societies were invited to co-operate with the Playgrounds Association making one deputation to wait on the Ciuncil. On February 5th we were received very courteously by the Council and presented our appeals together with a signed petition containing one thousand names. The majority of the members of the Council in private interviews had told us that they were favourable to the establishment of public bathing centres, and it was a great disappointment when we learned that it was the purpose of our aldermen to postpone the consideration of our requests until a later date.

At a meeting of the Council held March 9th, the matter of our bathing house petition was called up at a late hour and resulted in Alderman Stratton moving that $2,000 be appropriated. Alderman Saunders and Alderman Dobbin led the opposition to the motion and same was defeated. On March 19th through the courtesy of our Mayor we were again given the privilege of meeting the Council, on which occasion we gave very good reasons why the public bathing question should be more fully considered by the Council. At this meeting Alderman Dobbin moved, seconded by Alderman Saunders that the matter be referred to a committee of the whole Council. This motion was amended by Alderman Stratton, seconded by Alderman Smith, that the appropriation of $2,000 be made and two bathing centres established. However, the amendment was lost and Alderman Dobbin's motion prevailed. Members who voted for the establishment of bathing houses were Aldermen Stratton, Smith and McIntyre; the Mayor apparently being friendly but not in a position to vote. Alderman Worth, who was out of the city sent a telegram to the Council placing himself on record as being thoroughly favourable to the bathing house plan. We believe, therefore, that the movement has had the approval of the Mayor and four of our aldermen.

While the motion to appropriate $2,000 was side-tracked, still a part of our request was granted by the appointment of a special committee consisting of Aldermen Stratton, Duncan and Dobbin to consult with the Playgrounds Committee as to the bathing programme. The Council committee met jointly with our Playgrounds representatives and a Citizen's committee on the afternoon of March 21st. While this was not a hearing as to the advisability of establishing bathing centres but only to consider the sites, buildings and general details in connection with bathing centres, three men were present and were given a hearing in opposition.

At this meeting our committee informed the Mayor and the special Council committee that if it were not possible for the Council to establish two bathing centres in 1917 our committee would go on record as being willing to co-operate if but one bathing centre were established with an appropriation of $1,000 from the Council, any fees received from this centre to be refunded on the appropriation.

We understand that at a meeting of the Council, held on March 23rd, no mention whatever was taken regarding the establishment of bathing centres, and that our aldermen consider the question closed. As the matter of an appropriation has been referred to a committee of the whole Council, according to parliamentary procedure, it still remains for our Council Committee of the Whole to report back to the Council some recommendation regarding this question. We trust that the Committee of the Whole will report at a subsequent meeting of the Council, when each alderman will place himself definitely on record before his constituents as to his position regarding this bathing house problem.

Your committee appreciates the friendly attitude of the majority of our aldermen and the courtesy of our Mayor and Council in receiving our deputation and the consideration they are giving the bathing problem.

While it would make this report too long to include the reasons we have submitted to our Council why bathing houses should be provided, we wish to assure you that the ground was pretty thoroughly covered, and that our investigations have proved to us and we have conclusive evidence of facts that would convince anyone who will consider morals of first importance, that bathing centres should be established immediately. We trust that our councilmen will not ignore the wish of the majority of the citizens of Peterborough for the establishment of bathing centres, for we must be of larger service to the hundreds of children of soldiers who are running our streets without the restraining influence of a father. In the season of 1916 fifty per cent. of the children to use the playgrounds came from soldiers' families, and this year we have in view a definite programme of larger service to these children who are temporarily fatherless.

Your Committee has done all that it is possible to do under the circumstances, and have made as strong an appeal as could possibly be made, urging our City Fathers to deal with one one of the most important questions that has ever faced them, and the responsibility for action now rests with our City Council, and we trust that the report of our committee will be received and approved by our Playgrounds Association and the Committee discharges.

Respectfully submitted.
C. N. Meserve,
Dr. F. C. Neal,
Mrs. W. R. Morris,
Mrs. A. Mowat,
Special Committee.

CHIEF HOWARD.

Chief Howard said that on two occasions he went to Mr. Dobbin and had been detained by Mr. Dobbin, having to listen over the telephone to complaints of people averse to the bathing proposition. These people were all emphatic in the condemnation of voting money for what they considered frivolous purposes. He had heard prominent citizens using every influence to prevent using money for bathing houses in war time. People have asked for improvements and have been put off as the Council has not enough money to finance the town on the present rate struck, so somebody must go short.

NORMAL SCHOOL WON THE DEBATE

A large audience heard the debate between the George Street Epworth League and the Literary Society of the Normal School, last night, when the following subject was discussed: "Resolved that the influence of the School has contributed more toward the advancement of civilization than the influence of the Home."

The Normal representatives, Miss L. Smith and Mr. D. Gullett, argued in the affirmative, and were given the decision. Miss M. Dorman and Mr. H. R. Armstrong upheld the negative, representing the League. The judges were Mr. Joseph Wearing, M.A., Dr. J. E. Middleton and Dr. H. D. Park.

The musical programme was excellent, Miss Marjorie Mather contributed a splendid instrumental solo; Miss Maysie Armstrong sang delightfully, and Miss Mignon Telgmann rendered a beautiful violin solo. All three numbers were very greatly appreciated.

COMPLETE SUNDAY TEMPLE.

Cafeteria Seating 800 Persons an Appendice to Auditorium.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The tabernacle at 168th Street and Broadway in which Billy Sunday will conduct his three months' revival, beginning April 8, has now been completed, and will be dedicated on the afternoon of Sunday, April 1, with Governor Whitman as one of the speakers. The building will seat about 17,000 persons, and there will be standing room, when the foyers are thrown open, for about 3,000 more.

The tabernacle has been build under the direction of Joe Spiece, who has built all of Sunday's revival structures for years past, and follows the plan which has been used for all of them. It is a huge low building of wood, with raised seats at one end for the chorus of 4,000 voices, and a platform for the speaker, his staff, the piano and the reporters thrust forward in front of the choir straight toward the audience. The famous Sunday sounding board which looks like six half megaphones fastened together along the sides and their small ends converging into a small dome reflecting light down on the speaker's head hangs over the pulpit.

Attached to the tabernacle is an emergency hospital, which will be under the direction of physicians from various hospitals of the city. Other appendices to the auditorium are rest rooms and cafeteria seating 800 people. This, as well as the rest rooms for women, will be under the control of the Y.W.C.A., and it is expected that the profits from the food will cover the cost of the cafeteria building.

GERMAN METHODS AND GERMAN EXCUSES

By H. P.—Furnished By the Press Bureau

The German nation, having assimilated the specious doctrines of Heinrich von Trietschke, have been expiating their credulity in blood and tears. For the German academic the longed-for war was merely to be a brilliant demonstration of the soundness of Trietchske's views upon politics. But casualty lists, privations and an empty breakfast table are all forces that the influence of this system of political science—"founded upon disregard of the moral law"—has begun to wane.

The German race, as a whole, is subject to mass illusions, and their partial awakening has, so far, been a slow and bitter process. The travelling Teuton has long been aware of his gross unpopularity with civilized people, but the fact that his race is neither liked nor esteemed is only slowly dawning upon his stay-at-home brethren.

So long as they believed themselves to be victorious the Germans were content to ascribe the pointed comment of neutrals to envy. Now that the illusion of victory has vanished with the memory of the taste of real butter into the limbo of sweet and happy far-off things, the theory of envy no longer seems to hold. As a result, there has been much heart-searching in Germany, and under the Kaiser's own pseudonym for the admission of defeat—Kriegspychologie"—the Teuton attitude to the remainder of the world, has been discussed.

Here and there, a bold pedant has abandoned sense—and shame—fighting gallantly to the last sentenec of a long-screed of Teuton eloquence. Crushing opposition with a final verb a good half bage away from its parent nown. But these are mostly men with jobs to save, Court sycophants who serve their causes in a perilous time. A number of more reasonable folk have been inquiring timidly, questioning the deeds by which all recent Teuton Kultur is heralded to a disgusted world.

Valour is tempered by discretion, and even the most impartial Professor bears well in mind that he lives in a country where, to quote Treitschke: "The state does not ask primarily for opinion, but demands obedience, and its laws must be obeyed whether willingly or no."

Criticism, under these circumstances is usually by influence, so only tentative references have been made to the enslavement of the Belgians.

A considerable body of German public opinion has timorously expressed a doubt of the exact legality of these proceedings. They have not dared to say honestly that though they could swallow the Lusitanic incident see the clean Christian justice of the Cavell murder, and applaud the use of poison gas—this Belgian business is too much for them to swallow. No, they have only dared comment upon it as likely to affect neutral opinion adversely, and question its expediency rather than its justice.

The German government has closed down this discussion in the press and issued a ponderous official argument meant to convince the troubled Teuton mind. The gist of this is redolent of Treitschke at his best; it does not admit that the enslavement of the Belgians was enslavement, but explains the deportations as measures which were essential to protect the Belgians from themselves.

The notorious von Bissing drops a tear over the moral degradation of Belgium, blind to the vital fact that this alleged degradation was unknown till the Germans occupied the land. The population of Belgium, says he, was becoming unused to work. It grew lazy, disorganized, and dependent upon charity. It would not work for Germany.

The whole dastardly scheme by which the country was brought to unemployment and the verge of starvation is glossed over. The sources of the unemployment, the German exploitation of all raw material and confiscation of all machinery, are ignored, and the case presented to the trusting German people is that the Belgians refused to work at any of their usual vocations, preferring the bread of idleness and the Comite de Secours Publique to their lifetime habits of industry and diligence. If the German people are stupid enough to accept this story, one would suppose that they can only ascribe this demoralization to the leaven of Teutonic Kultur working in the Belgian soul, for they are good enough students of commerce to know that prior to the war the industry of Belgium was one of the wonders of the world.

According to von Bissing, the orders with regard to compulsory work "only threatened compulsory removal to places where labour is required, in cases where the unemployed person declines, without adequate reason, to accept work which he is capable of doing and for which proper pay is offered. All reasons for refusal, which are based upon international law are recognized as being adequate. Accordingly a workman cannot be forced to do war work." And yet the Belgian families have been split asunder, and Belgians are now scattered here and there about the marshes of Germany digging trenches for the Hun.

"The measures taken," says von Bissing, "are based on sound legal considerations, and limit the freedom of the individual in the interests of the community."

The condition of Belgium to-day is the index of German civilization. It is the vindication of Treitchshe's political system, and a standing example to the civilized world of the outstanding benefits of the German intellectual standard. In fact it is indistinguishable from the savage barbarities of the Middle Ages, but according to the Teuton it is—in the interests of the community!"

The fact, of course, is that the German authroities concerned themselves not at all with any questions of unemployment, "adequate reasons," or anything of the kind. They wanted workers, and very simply; quite in the forthright and "good German" way, in fact, seized the required number of thousands, by so many to the street or locality. Young women, in most cases, were taken separately from their families. Breadwinners were froquently seized from households of which the remaining members were quite helpless by reason of age or ill health. And, lest there should be lacking any link between these operations and slavery, files of deporters were in many cases bound to a long rope, and in one verified case, at least, to a chain.

"Adequate reasons" against war work, when expressed by Belgian deporters have certainly never been ignored. Far from it. They have been promptly met by the application of blows and curses. Where these prove inadequate, the reasoners have been mercilessly drilled or, perhaps more mercilessly stood to attention for twelve hours on end without an instant's break. Subsequently, some times under pricks from bayonets, they have withdrawn their "adequate reasons" and proceeded to trench and other war work, while their strength lasted. Ultimately, in many cases, they have utterly broken down under pressure of starvation, incessant labour, and brutal driving. In such cases, when physically wrecked, they have sometimes been allowed by the kindly and enlightened exponents of Kultur, to return to their homes, where no doubt their experience of German methods and teaching would make them valuable missionaries of Kultur and centres of influence to check that reprehensible disinclination for work against their fellow-countrymen, which the genial von Bissing so heartily deplores.

Sergeant Victor pointed out the immediate need for funds. The local organization desired to send a delegate to Winnipeg some time next month to attend a conference for the purpose of defeating an attempt on the part of another organization to secure a Dominion charter. The other organization was said to include members who were not veterans of the present war.

At the suggestion of the Police Commissioners and two delegations withdrew with the understanding that a mutual attempt would be made to settle the difficulty.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE OPPOSES THE FREE MARKET SCHEME

Committee Ignores City Council's Request to Draft Rules and Regulations—Proposal Will Encounter New Reinforcements When It Again Comes Before the Council

A reversal of the modus operandi instituted by the City Council towards recommendations from the Property committee was recorded at last night's meeting of the committee when the members ignored the Council's instructions to draft rules and regulations for a free market. The committee recommended that Council accept the tenders received for the market tolls and appoint a market clerk to collect them for the current year. This was a polite way of informing the Council of the committee's disapproval of the free market scheme. This will necessitate further action by the Council and with Ald. Langford on the job will likely see the finish of the proposals for a free market. On two successive occasions the Council turned down the Property committee's recommendation respecting the appointment of a sanitary inspector so that the action of the committee towards the Council assumes the form of retributive justice although it was not done with that intention.

No Demand.

Ald. Duncan claimed there was no demand for a free market. He said that the general public was not in favour of the proposal. He had failed to find one man who approved of a free market.

Ald. Smith said that his idea of voting for a free market was not to help the merchants or the farmers for that matter. He was of the opinion that the free market was feasible.

"Get the money for the market and put it in the overhead bridge" said Mayor Duffus.

"If we are going to make a free market we should include the weighing of produce, including hay, cattle and other products," said Ald. Saunders, chairman of the committee.

Ald. Smith was of the opinion that all hucksters and auctioneers should be compelled to pay a fee for the privilege of selling on the market.

Mayor Duffus pointed out that the duty of the committee was to draft rules and regulations governing a free market in accordance with the instructions received from the Council.

It was moved by Ald. Duncan and seconded by Ald. Langord, that the committee recommend that the tenders for market tolls for the ensuing year be accepted.

This resolution was carried.

Will Employ Another Man

Returned Soldier or Rejected Applicant For Enlistment Eligible For Vacancy on the Police Force

John Brown's resignation as Sergeant in the Peterborough Police Department, was accepted at a meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners, held yesterday afternoon in the office of the City Clerk. Sergeant Brown has accepted a position of Chief Constable in Sudbury, and will leave for that town on Friday of this week. Mayor Duffus said it was a matter for congratulation that a member of the Peterborough Police Department should be selected for such an important position. Police Magistrate Dumble concurred in this opinion.

Chief Thompson was authorised to advertise for a man so as to facilitate the promotion of one of the senior members of the present staff to the position relinquished by Sergeant Brown. When asked if he needed another man, Chief Thompson said it would be false economy to attempt to get along with the present force. As it is, the department is under strength and in a short time it will be necessary to provide a traffic officer at the corner of Charlotte and George streets. Later on in the season, from twenty to thirty unoccupied houses will have to be guarded while the owners are away summering or helping the farmers to increase grain production.

Judge Huycke made it plain that no man fit for military service would be accepted unless it was impossible to employ a returned soldier or a rejected applicant for enlistment. Chief Thompson is of the opinion that in event of the United States going to war this country will be infested with "rough-necks."

"Slackers, you mean," said Judge Huycke, by way of correction.

Chief Thompson said that with the present force it was necessary to divide the men into thre shifts per day and each man worked one hour more than he would in any other police department in Ontario.

A MOTHER'S CARE

The woman at home, deep in household duties and the cares of motherhood, needs occasional help to keep her in good health. The demands made upon a mother's health are many and severe. Her own health trials and her children's welfare exact heavy toils, while hurried meals, broken rest and much indoor living tend to weaken her constitution. No wonder that the woman at home is often indisposed through weakness, headaches, backaches and nervousness. Too many women have grown to accept these visitations as a part of the lot of motherhood. But many and varied as her health troubles are, the cause is simple and the cure at hand. When well, it is the woman's good blood that keeps her well; when ill she must make her blood rich to renew her health. The nursing mother more than any other woman in the world needs rich blood and plenty of it. There is one always unfailing way to get this good blood so necessary to perfect health, and that is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills make new blood abundantly, and through their use thousands of weak, ailing wives and mothers have been made bright, cheerful and strong. If you are ailing, easily tired, or depressed, it is a duty you owe yourself and your family to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. What this medicine has done for others it will surely do for you.

Says Russia Refused To Supply Her Own Armies

NEW YORK, March 21.—That the Russian government deliberately withheld ammunition from the Russian armies in the winter of 1914-'15 and thereby turned Grand Duke Nicholas' hard won victories into crushing defeat, with the object of forcing an ignoble peace with Germany, was asserted by Boris Ivanovich Avilov, president of the Aksai Machinery Corporation at Rostov-on-Don, one of the largest industrial and munition establishments in Russia.

To substantiate his assertion Mr. Avilow produced a letter from the Russian artillery chief of munitions, written in December, 1914. The letter was in reply to Mr. Avilov's offer to make shrapnel in large quantities for quick delivery on the government's own terms. The letter stated that the Russian armies were in no need of guns or ammunition.

At that very moment, according to Mr. Avilov, the Grand Duke Nicholas was pleading with the government for both guns and shells. From day to day his earnest entreaties were answered with the promise that war supplies were on the way from America, England and Japan. Yet it was common knowledge that not a round of ammunition for Russia had been landed in Archangel, Vladivostok or Petrograd, that Archangel had been closed for the winter and that the Trans-Siberian Railroad was blocked.

OTHER OFFERS REFUSED

"My experience with the government," said Mr. Avilov, "was that of every other munition manufacturer in Russia. The Maltsev factories, the largest in Russia, offered to supply millions of 6-inch shells. I saw the letter refusing the offer. The result the world knows.

Mr. Avilov is a Cossack of the Don by birth. Although a large landed proprietor he was imprisoned in 1905 for promoting a revolution to obtain a new constitution for Russia. He has been here for six months on a military leave of absence buying machinery for making munitions and agricultural implements, and has placed $2,000,000 in orders here. His headquarters is at the Holland House.

"After Przemysl was retaken," continued Mr. Avilov, "the government was about to put its traitorous plan into execution. Its purpose was to go before the people with the announcement that Russia had done its duty in trying to win the war, but had been beaten, and that the only thing left to do was to make the best peace it could with Germany and Austria. It had anticipated a revolt by arranging with the Kaiser to suppress it.

"But the public storm of indignation was too great for the government to go through with the scheme without another show of resistance. The government had been forced into the war reluctantly in the first place. It could not escape a show of support for Serbia because of the sympathy of one Slav nation for another.

RUSSIA SET BACK A YEAR

"The withholding of guns and ammunition from the armies set back Russia a year in her military operations. The government's intriguing with the Kaiser did not cease with its renewal of perfunctory efforts to win the war. But meanwhile the forces of revolution gathered the strength for the stroke which means an emancipated Russia.

"A similar revolution in Germany is only a few months away. It is inevitable. That is the way the war will end, not later than November. The Kaiser and Prussian militarism will meet the same fate that has overtaken the Tsar and Russian bureaucracy.

"It was because England mistrusted the old Russian regime that she took control of the Russian government's munition orders. Factories here owned by German sympathizers refused to sell munitions to Russia on the subtle ground that such sales should be made by their European agents.

"Russia swarms with Germans, who got a hold there commercially before the war. They are known as 'Nemets,' which means 'dumb.' They are so called because of their clandestine ways. They are hated and despised, and their presence has done much to inflame the people and quicken the revolution. The war now will be directed as much against them as against the German armies.

Nuptial Knot Tied Three Times

LINDSAY, March 27.— On Thursday evening a wedding with a decidedly romantic flavour was celebrated on Lindsay street south, when a young Russian was married to a seventeen year old girl. It appears that this is the third time the couple has been united in wedlock.

Last January the bride interviewed Chief Short and informed him that although living with the Russian, she did not feel as if the ceremony which made them one was valid. She desired to go and live with a girl friend, but the Chief decided to see her husband before giving her any advice. The Russian was overjoyed that his wife had been located, and when questioned concerning his marriage, produced an official looking document, which showed that the couple were married according to the rites of the Russian orthodox church. The woman still claimed that she had been told she was not lawfully married, and as the husband was perfectly satisfied to have the ceremony performed again, no time was lost in bringing peace to the young couple.

It appears, however, that the seeds of dissatisfaction had been sown by some over-zealous parties and the climax came on Thursday evening when the couple again went through a marriage ceremony.

They left on Friday for Camp Borden.

PREDICTS DOWNFALL OF THE TURKISH GOVERNMENT

NEW YORK, March 21—The downfall of the Turkish government, with the flight to Berlin of Enver Pacha, Minister of War, and of Talaat Bey, Prime Minister, may be looked for in the near future, according to Dr. Ernest C. Partridge, president of the American Teachers' College at Sivas, Turkey in Asia, who passed several hours in this city before leaving last evening for his home, in Oberlin, Ohio.

"When the crash comes," Dr. Partridge said, "conditions approaching anarchy are expected to obtain until the advancing British and Russian armies get control of Turkey in Asia.

"General Townshend, who was captured with his ten thousand British troops, is reported still to be safe, living with an American family on an island in Constantinople Harbor, where he is constantly under military guard but is not harassed. The whereabouts of his interned troops are not known, although some of them are reported to be far down near Aelppo and Konia. This report cannot be verified. Fears are expressed by some that during the anticipated overthrow of the Turkish government many of General Townshend's troops will be massacred. I understand that Enver Pacha and Talaat Bey regard the situation as so critical that they are ready at any moment to leave Constantinople for Berlin.

OFFICERS READY TO DESERT

"Several causes have contributed to bring about the existing apprehension of an upheavel in Turkish affairs. In certain sections famine already has set in. The march of one British army from Bagdad, of a second British army in the vicinity of Jerusalem and of a Russian army from the eastward is undoubtedly proving an ominous warning to a population growing desperate from hunger. The German officers of high rank commanding Turkish troops are comparatively few in number. Forty per cent. of officers in the Turkish armies are Arabs, now in open rebellion, and preparing to go over to the approaching British and Russian forces as soon as these commands complete their swinging march from three different directions and converge toward a joint of juncture, thence moving on to Turkey in Asia. How soon this juncture will be effected cannot be predicted with any reasonable certainty. The Arab officers, however, aparently believe it will not be long delayed. Hence their rebellion and sympathy with the Allied force.

"Germany's plans for dominating the East could hardly be in worse condition. The breaking up of the Turkish government, with the continued advance of British and Russian armies until they take control of Turkey in Asia, would mean for Germany a disaster of magnitude as may readily be imagined.

"The rebellion of Arab officers and the disaffection of a part of the Turkish people are ascribed principally to a shortage in food so great in some areas that suffering therein has been widespread. This famine conditions are a direct result of the deportation, two years ago, of multitudes of Armenian Christians, most of whom were farmers. When driven out of their homes their crops and stores of surplus food were seized, but these have been exhausted by the Turks and by levies for German and Austrian armies. The Christian refugees are now scattered over a large territory, but many of them are in Aleppo and vicinity. When these thousands upon thousands of farmers were deported there were no other farmers to take their place and carry on agricultural work.

1,000 AWAIT RELIEF SHIP

"Notwithstanding a recent statement to the contrary, it is understood that one thousand American citizens are still gathered at Beirut anxiously awaiting arrivel of the United States government ship Caesar to bring them home in safety. But the Caesar is still at Alexandria. She was sent over as a Christmas ship by the American Committee for Syrian and Armenian Relief, and carried in addition to a huge cargo of food and hospital supplies a quantity of Christmas tokens. This cargo was sent from America for Christian refugees on the verge of starvation. The reason why it has not reached them is as follows:—The Allies guarantee safe conduct to the Caesar through their mine fields as far as Beirut harbor and the Turkish officials guarantee safety for the ship while entering the harbor, while living at Beirut discharging cargo and while passing out through the harbor with the American citizens. The Caesar is still held up at Alexandria because the United States insist that as she is a government vessel, Turkey must guarantee that she will not be torpedoed or otherwise attacked by Turkey's Allies, Germany and Austria both of which have submarines operating in the Mediterranean. This guarantee Turkey has not given and probably cannot give.

The Commissioners Declined To Act

City Council Wanted the Board to Show Why Police Force Should Not Be Reduced

A request from the City Council inviting the Board of Police Commissioners to reduce the strength of the Police Department by three men did not meet with the approval of the Board at a meeting that was held yesterday afternoon. The communication asked the Board to "show cause why such a reduction should not be made."

"Sounds like an injunction," was Judge Huycke's comment as the communication was tucked away.

Submarine Cordon Aroused Spain

MADRID, March 26.—An elaborate organisation by which a far-flung cordon of German submarines, stretching around the Spanish and Portuguese coasts, has been maintained in provisions and supplies has been unearthed by the Spanish authorities. A rigid censorship has been established, but it is unknown that at least four men have been arrested.

A most ingenious method was used in getting the supplies and provisions to the submarines. Lines of automobiles were run from Madrid to certain coast points, in order to avoid using the regular train service. At designated points floating depots were established beyond the limits of Spanish waters. These depots consisted of a series of small stout wooden floats, about the size of a fisherman's dory. Each float formed a good-sized receptacle securely built to protect the contents against water. Under cover of night small boats loaded these floats with provisions of all kinds, grease and fuel oil and other articles required by the submarines.

COASTGUARD IN IT.

A coast guard patrol boat discovered one of these depots as a number of men were busy re-stocking it from some of the small sailing craft used by the coast fishermen. The coast guards used their revolvers and captured several prisoners as well as a large quantity of supplies and considerable correspondence. Later investigation showed that one or more members of the coastguard itself were implicated.

The Spanish Ministry of Marine permitted the news of the first four arrests to be made public, but since then absolute secrecy has been observed in official quarters in regard to the entire affair.

SUBMARINE PATROL.

Information gathered by the Spanish secret police and naval officials tallies with the reports by travellers from Berlin as to the number of submarines employed in the German patrol. According to this information the peninsula cordon is a link in a great chain stretching from the Baltic to the Mediterranean, one submarine being allotted to every ten miles. Each of the undersea boats is supposed to be able to sail ten miles in an hour, and thus keep in close touch with its neighbours in the line.

High warm collars are made of embroidered woollen stuffs and laced through eyelets in front.

MURRAY GOVERNMENT SLOW TO EVACUATE

Fifth Week Now Since Its Defeat—Liberals are Incensed

OTTAWA, March 26.—Unless the defeated Murray Government in New Brunswick resigns within the next few days, or unless the Lieutenant-Governor, of the Province, Hon. Josiah Wood, failing such resignation, takes prompt action to dismiss his present advisers and deliver the reins of office over to Premier-elect Foster, a vigorous protest will be lodged with the Government here, by the Liberals of New Brunswick. Word to this effect has been conveyed to the capital.

The Murray Government was defeated on February 24, and although a month has elapsed since then it still holds office, and apparently intends to refuse to abdicate for some time yet. The reason alleged for the unprecedented delay in yielding to the will of the people is, according to the Liberal protests from the Province, due to the fact that the members of the Murray Government and their political friends are seeking to gain time enough to cover up some of the grods irregularities which have occurred in the handling of public funds of New Brunswick during the past few years. It is charged that official documents are either being destroyed or altered, and that evidence which might lead to criminal prosecution under the new Government is being carefully concealed as far as possible. According to advices which have reached here from St John, there will be a clean-up in the Province as soon as the Foster Government takes office similar to that which has taken place in Manitoba with disclosures just as sensational.

There seems to be no good reason for the delay which has taken place in consummating the change in Government. According to precedent, two or three weeks are allowed for a defeated Government to clean-up uncompleted routine of administration and vacate the premises. The Laurier Government resigned within three weeks of being defeated at the polls. The Murray Government, with much less routine to finish up, is now holding on for the fifth week.

Unless a prompt resignation now comes, steps will be taken to influence the Lieutenant-Governor to dismiss forthwith Premier Murray and his colleagues, and if this does not prove effective a formal appeal will be laid with the Government here.

Capt. O'Regan Was Arrested

LINDSAY, March 27.—A. R. O'Regan, formerly a Captain attached to the 216th Battalion, and formerly adjutant of the Imperial Munitions Board, was arrested at Buffalo on a charge of theft at the instance of the Toronto police.

On March 7th last O'Regan was given, it is stated, money to make certain payments. An audit of his books later disclosed a shortage of $684.75, which he was asked to account for. He offered to do so, explaining that he would bring other books to the office of the Munitions Board immediately. He disappeared and was located in Buffalo.

$600 A YEAR PENSION FOR THE FAMILY OF PTE. MCNAUGHTON

A pension of $600 a year has been awarded to Mrs. E. G. McNaughton, wife of the late Private McNaughton, of the 93rd Battalion, who was killed in action. This sum of $50 a month is granted by the pension board to the wife and three children and dates from February 13th, 1917. Through Mr. Dobbin's efforts the necessary information was presented to the Board shortly after the report of Private McNaughton's death and no time was lost in effecting the pension.

Two Million Pounds Of Dried Vegetable

Orders Placed in British Columbia, Says Hon. Mr. Burrell.

VICTORIA, B.C., March 26.—Replying to a letter from Mayor Todd suggesting that the Government place orders at fixed rates with the farmers, Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture says that it "does not seem feasible to make direct contracts with the farmers," but he understood that orders had been placed in British Columbia for dried mixed vegetables and dried potatoes aggregating more than two million pounds of the dried products.

PRESIDENT WILSON ORDERS NAVY PLACED ON A STRONG WAR FOOTING

Steps Taken Regarding Army Interpreted as Extensive Precautions Which U. S. Government is Taking to Forestall any Outbreaks from Teuton Enemy.

MILITARY DEPARTMENTS ESTABLISHED

WASHINGTON, March 26.—President Wilson took steps to place the nation on a war footing.

By executive order he directed that the navy be recruited without delay to full authorized war strength of 87,000 enlisted men. Taken in connection with emergency naval construction already ordered, this means that the President has exercised the full limit of his legal powers as Commander-in-Chief to prepare the navy for war.

For the army, the President directed that two new military departments be created in the Atlantic coast region. The order means that the task of organizing whatever army Congress may authorize will be divided among six departmental commanders instead of four in the interests of speed and efficiency in mobilization.

PROTECT U. S. INDUSTRIES

The third step was to assume as a national duty the task of protecting American industries from domestic disorders in the event of hostilities. For this purpose eleven full infantry regiments, two separate battalions and one separate company of National Guards were called back into the Federal service to act as national police in important districts. Supplementing these troops, a regiment of Pennsylvania guards and two companies of Georgia Infantry, enroute home from the border for muster out, were ordered retained in the Federal service.

The President's orders were made known in terse official statements issued by both departments. No explanation accompanied them except the statement that reorganization of the military departments, effective May 1 was designed to facilitate decentralization of command.

MORE NATIONAL THAN LOCAL

The official statement from the War Department states that many States have already deemed it advisable to call on the Guard for protection and as the necessity for such a step arises from issues "more national than local" the President has deemed it advisable to call into Federal service more than a dozen regiments.

The States included are: New York, Massachusetts, Vermont, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland, the District of Columbia and Virginia. One Georgia regiment and two companies of a Pennsylvania regiment which are still in the Federal sedvice, will not be mustered out under the provisions of the order.

The order is regarded as indicating the extensive precautions which the Government is taking to forestall any outbreaks from enemy agents upon the expected declaration that a state of war exists. Munitions plants, bridges, railroads and all other important public property which might be in danger of attack upon the outbreak of war will be carefully guarded.

GUARD NIAGARA PLANTS.

Albany, N.Y., March 25.—The request of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce that the power plants at Niagara Falls be guarded by National Guardsmen, was granted tonight by Governor Whitman. The executive announced that he had directed Adjutant-General L. W. Stotesbury, now in New York to order out enough troops to properly do the work. They will be selected from Buffalo units.

The request for troops was made to Governor Whitman yesterday by a delegation from the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, which came here for that purpose. The action was taken after rumors of plots against industrial plants wede circulated.

Holland Is a Vast Rink Troops Drill On Skates

THE HAGUE, Netherlands.—Holland is at the moment one big skating rink. From Sovereign to humblest peasant, from aged grandmother and grandfather to the tiniest toddlers, the nation is gliding serenely, merrily along on skates.

In striking contrast with the last three or four mild winters, a most intense and continuous cold spell has set in, and despite brilliant sunshine from a clear sky every lake and canal in the land of canals is now frozen as hard as the cobbled streets. Even the big North Sea Canal leading from the sea to the port of Amsterdam is only being kept open by icebreakers. Many of the islands are islands no longer, and travelers, passing to and fro, instead of booking their steamboat passage, buckle on their skates. The mail is even being conveyed to the famous island of Marken, on the Zuyder Zee, by the same means. One can go from the Hague to Amsterdam, to Rotterdam, to practically any part of the country on skates. The countryside, ordinarily so deserted and quiet, on the Sabbath in particular, is dotted everywhere with fleeing Hollanders of all ages; and in the towns themselves he who will need go no further than the canal just outside his door to indulge in the pastime.

MOBILIZATION ON SKATES

The mobilized troops of Holland have been carrying out various exercises and competitions on skates, for the army authorities consider it in the country's interest that the men shall be thoroughly at home on the ice. The problem of Holland defence—normally based, as it is on the methods of flooding a certain protective zone known as the new waited line—would be entirely transformed should invasion occur during such a frost spell as the present.

The Netherlands have to this day not forgotten their forefathers' dismay when their water gates were in the year 1795 thrown open to the invading French army by just such another frost, which enabled the enemy to easily cross the rivers and other water barriers on which Holland had been counting. Hence the present exercise being carried out on the ice, here and there under the eye of the Queen herself (also mounted on skates), and for which her Majesty has offered medals and prizes.

STRENUOUS OPERATIONS

In one competition, for instance, four parties of fifty men of the Grenadiers and Chasseurs brigade started off at fixed intervals from a point just outside the Hague. They had first to skate about fifteen miles, then proceed on foot for four miles, and give evidence on arrival at their destination of complete marching and fighting fitness. In another case eight patrol parties of 10 men, each led by an officer, had to cover a distance of twenty-seven miles, including about a mile and a half on foot. The winning patrol did the latter trip in three hours, six minutes. The Queen has further provided medals for public competition in every separate province.

WANT CAPTIVES EXCHANGED.

Swiss Fear They Will Be Overtaxed by Care of Prisoners.

Voicing the fear that the Swiss Republic's powers will be overtaxed if it undertakes to extend its hospitality to able-bodied prisoners of war in addition to caring for the thousands of sick and wounded warriors that have been placed in its care by the belligerent countries, Gustav Ador, President of the International Red Cross has appealed to the German and French Governments to agree to exchange men who have been prisoners for two years or more and who, although no longer fitted for service at the front, may still be useful citizens.

President Ador's statement, which was occasioned by the suggestion that Switzerland take charge of the numerous heads of families and other prisoners who had been in confinement two years or more, and was printed in the Berner Bund simultaneously with the announcement that the Swiss Federal Council had decided to take in, "as a test and without prejudice," 100 French and 100 German heads of families who were prisoners, meets with the approval of the Swiss press, which points out that, even if the belligerents pay for the keep of the new guests, the food they will consume is sorely needed by the Swiss themselves, especially since the problem of bringing in supplies has become so complicated.

Because Of Jackie's Red Cheeks, Father Makes A Subscription

MONTREAL, March 26. — "Because our Jackie has bright, red cheeks, because he is full of life, and is everything one could want a man-child to be—".

This was the reason given by an American contributing for the relief of the Belgians.

Another man who sent a subscription wrote that he had just completed the building of a little home, and the thought entered him that it would not be fitting to enter it if he did nothing for the homeless, starving little ones of Belgium.

A lady tells how a part of the remittance was made up of small contributions solicited, and says:

"Each one was asked to give—$7.75 was collected quickly. This morning the principal of the village school sent $6.20. A young girl with shining eyes brought it, and she said: "Look what we children have given! Each child gave two cents. A kind friend is matching every unit the village gives; so I have the happiness of sending a cheque to you for $24. The second one is on the way."

In some places local committees have put boxes in public establishments, with an appeal posted over them, telling of Belgium's terrible need. In other places good work is being done by raising community contributions. It has been found that a good round sum is always raised in a community where influential citizens take the lead.

The Central Belgian Relief Committee here feel that these examples will be an inspiration to Canadians to come forward with greater help than ever for the relief of this afflicted nation.

No fewer than ten million persons are dependent for their very lives on the food which is sent from this continent. These ten million people are not allowed to be heard in their own behalf. They can only rely on the good offices of the neutrals who are conducting the Relief Commission.

Subscriptions will be thankfully received by the Central Belgian Relief Committee, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal, or by any branch committee throughout Canada.

Captain Writes Brother That Spanish Vessels Supply Petrol.

The following letter from the Captain of a German U-boat to his brother, who was an officer in the German Army, is in the possession of the British Government. The soldier brother was killed in France a few weeks ago, and the letter was found on his body:

"When I think, my dear Ludwig," the letter reads, "of the privations suffered by our family, and even by you, I am ashamed of the solid comfort we enjoy. We are never hungry on the U. —. We have already a reserve stock of provisions, and we replace these by fresh supplies when we meet a merchant ship. The only thing we pay for is petrol, which we get from Spanish vessels. They do not insist on us paying for victuals.

"For four months I have not been able to renew my stock of torpedoes. I am therefore obliged to attack traders with my guns—a very risky proceeding, now that the British and French vessels defend themselves. A single shot well placed might easily send us to the bottom. Fortunately the vessels that are attacked are often so terrified and so little suspect the superiority their armament gives them that they often surrender without a shot. From them we get all the news. If I am to believe what I read, the best thing we can do is to get out of the war as soon as possible and pay the bill, however, terrific it may be.

"My submarine is an old crock. I wish that I could get command of one of our new submarine cruisers. As it is known that my boat is not much good I was not given anything very difficult to do. I am generally after fishermen and sailing boats, and run very little danger."

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad, and smothering feelings came on till I thought that I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of 10".

Bicycles In Use By Smart Set

Cycling to Become Very Popular Among Women This Season

A fact which is considered by friends of the bicycle as an indication that ladies everywhere will re-consider the bicycle as a means for health, pleasure and utility is that the smart set at Palm Beach, Florida, have made free use of the bicycle during several recent winter seasons. The wives and daughters of multi-millionaires and others have cycled—not for one season but for several—to the golf links, to the beach, to and from the hotels for pleasure and exercise. The fact that society women have used the bicycle during more than one sojourn in Florida is taken to mean that wheeling is being considered more than a fad.

Representatives of society from all parts of the United States gather at Palm Beach and other Florida winter resorts yearly and when they return to their homes they talk about the manner in which they and others rode bicycles down South. Some of them have begun to use the bicycle in the North during the summer months and there is a steady increase in this practice, it is declared. More ladies of Rosedale, the fashionable residential section of Toronto, ride bicycles than those of any other portion of the city.

When rich and fashionable women of Montana, New York, Massachusetts, Ontario and other scattered portions of the continent ride bicycles both winter and summer, as they actually do, the spirit of cycling is reflected down the line—as in all other habits of the female sex. Cycling authorities of Canada, therefore believe that the bicycle will shortly become very popular among all women. It is already being adopted, according to reports from the bicycle trade. One dealer in Toronto sold sixty-nine ladies' bicycles during 1916 alone and many other Canadian dealers enjoyed a good business in ladies' wheels last year. More ladies' models will be sold this season than last, it is believed, because a fair number of orders have already been booked.

It is also a sign of the times that a leading clothing establishment of New York has devised a fashion of lady's dress for bicycle riding exclusively this year. The fashion plates of this firm show a lady cyclist, with her bicycle, attired in the latest style of cycling apparel. This shows, it is declared, that the subject of cycling is receiving the attention of those who cater to the want of the ladies.

Nearly every photograph taken at Palm Beach and other leading Florida resorts last winter showed both men and women, stylishly dressed, with their bicycles. These exclusive people even posed in groups with their bicycles for the taking of photographs. These pictures were freely reproduced afterwards in the pictorial sections of the big dailies when reference was made to the fact that Mrs. So-and-So, the rich society leader, and her friends were enjoying cycling in the balmy climate of Florida.

A significant feature of the Canadian bicycle situation of the present year is that a mixed bicycle club has been organized in Toronto. Membership in this club is open to both men and women who cycle and it is the intention of the club to hold frequent Sunday runs a-wheel, bicycle picnics and other pleasure events.

Mr. E. G. Patterson Offers Silver Trophy To The Curling Club For The Vice-Skips' Bonspiel

W. D. Campbell Elected President at the Annual Meeting Last Night Succeeding J. H. Ferguson—Prizes Presented to Winning Rinks in Various Bonspiels.

$16 FOR TOBACCO FUND

Mr. W. D. Campbell was elected President of the Curling Club at the annual meeting held at the rink last night. His nomination by R. M. Waddell was unopposed, and the resulting election by acclamation was warmly received by the large number of curlers present. Mr. Campbell was Vice-President last year, assisting Mr. J. H. Ferguson, whom he succeeds. He has been a member of the Club fifteen years, during which time he has developed into first rank skip, and, off the ice, has assumed many responsibilities, which he fulfilled with a success that augurs well for his presidency during the coming year.

THE 1917-18 OFFICERS.

The officers elected last night were as follows:

Hon.-Pres.—J. H. Ferguson.
President—W. D. Campbell.
Vice-Pres.—J. W. McDermid.
Committee of Management—J. H. Ferguson, W. D. Campbell, J. W. McDermid, Felix Brownscombe, W. G. Morrow, R. P. Best, Dr. Wightman and Alex. C. Kay.
Representatives to the Ontario Curling Association—W. G. Morrow and W. G. Ferguson.
Auditor—G. H. Giroux.
Umpire—Angus McIntosh.

TROPHY FOR VICE-SKIPS.

One of the most gratifying features of the evening was Mr. E. G. Patterson's offer of a silver cup for the Vice-Skips' Bonspiel, in which he was a strong contender this year until his rink ran into heavy ice. In tendering the Club this timely trophy Mr. Patterson remarked that the Vice-Skips' bonspiel be played off earlier in the season than heretofore, that the mild weather accompanying the first breaking up of winter might be avoided.

The outburst of applause that greeted the new Patterson trophy warmly expressed the appeciation of the club which Mr. Campbell formally conveyed to the donor.

PRESENTATION OF PRIZES.

The customary presentation of prizes was of course not the least prominent feature of the evening. Follows the list of the winners and other details:

Consolation Runners-up.—H. Dearle, H. W. Cooke, W. M. Lang, Geo. Hepor, skip. Prizes—Nickel pocket stoves. Presentation made by G. Walter Green.

$16 FOR TOBACCO FUND.

Mr. Webb reported that $4.95 has been collected in the mercantile games. They were begun late in the season and it was hoped that a large sum would have been realised. Hence with the sanction of the meeting, Andy passed the hat collecting $11.05, making a total of $16 which will be used to purchase tobacco for members of the club who are overseas.

AMENDMENTS DEFEATED.

Two amendments proposed by Mr. Best and Mr. Kay that felt-soled boots be debarred from the ice and that a membership committee of five be appointed at the annual meeting were defeated. It was argued against the latter amendment that every curler should consider the bringing in of new members.

VOTE OF THANKS.

A vote of thanks to the retiring president, J. H. Ferguson was moved by Mr. Benor and seconded by Mr. Parsons, to the open bonspiel committee for their successful work, moved by Mr. Webb and seconded by Mr. Tooley, to the press and caretaker by Dr. Greer and J. W. McDermid.

The grand challenge cup won in the open bonspiel by J. W. McDermid's rink was presented to the winners by Mr. Giroux, and the Trent Valley power trophy won by J. E. A. Fitzgerald and R. G. Sturgeon was accepted by the club on motion by Mr. Waddell.

The meeting was an unqualified success and provided many little encouragements for the future of the club.

NO ANNOUNCEMENT YET AS TO THE HOME DEFENCE UNIT

Word is Awaited of the Name of the Commanding Officer and Other Details in Connection With the Establishment of Home Battalion

RETURNED MEN'S CHANCES

No definite word has yet been received in Peterborough in regard to the staff of the Canadian Defence Battalion which the 57th Regiment of Peterborough assisted by the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, and the Lindsay, Cobourg and Port Hope regiments is to raise. News is expected at any time of the name of the commanding officer and other details in connection with the establishment. In the orders issued from headquarters a short time ago it was stated that the organization of these units would be commenced in March, but so far nothing has been done here and the authorities are awaiting definite instructions. In No. 2 Military District the services of returned soldiers are to be employed in instructional work and the same system will likely be carried out here. Among Peterborough's veterans of the great war there is some excellent material for instructors for the new defence force.

MILITARY NEWS

same time praying to Him above to watch over those who are nearest to danger.

When I come to settle down in a fest billet I look through a lot of old snapshots, one a photo of that old favourite boat the "Myrtle" which took us on a quick voyage to the big race at Stoney Lake and it brings back to me memories of old times. Yet another photo of a bunch of us chaps out showshoeing two nights before we left Peterborough. Amongst the fellows' faces shines dear old Theobald, Rew, Tate, my two brothers, and old Scotty McKinlay and then Your Humble Servant and out of that mob (I must not forget my cousin Dick Perry) only Scotty and I are left, fortunately we are all still alive for which we should be thankful to God. Old Mac and I never meet, but what we chin chin about the old gym, etc., and what he is going to do to me when he gets me back again. This all helps to bring back old thoughts and happy memories and hopes.

I am ashamed to say that I am just answering your letter of Sept. 22nd, 1916 and I really don't know of any suitable excuse to make except laziness, ha, ha, but I have always thought of you and if I were to write every time I thought of the old "Y" I would need a printing machine, I am afraid.

Dick Perry has just returned to his Battalion from "Blighty" where he has been on a "short" furlough (all furloughs seem short). He is looking very well after being in a civilized bed again and you can bet he made good use of every minute of his leave. He is in the 4th.

I suppose by the time you will answer this, hockey, basketball, bowling, etc., will be drawing near a close (a successful close I hope) and you will be getting ready for the outdoor sports again.

No doubt old Bill Rew will be a constant visitor to the "Y". I hope he has quite recovered. It really seems marvelous that anyone was alive after that big day in June, an experience I shall never forget for a long time.

Now I must let up for this time. Hoping you will forgive me for my quietness in the past, and hoping we may soon be together again getting "baskets", hoping God will crown your good efforts in our behalf is the wish of one of your boys.

Faithfully,
WALTER FLOWERS.

P.S. Please forgive scribbling—a punk pencil. I am borrowing a pen for the address, ha, ha.

The following paragraph from the Ottawa Citizen will be of interest to many Peterborough people. The D. J. O'Connor mentioned was born in Peterborough twenty-six years ago and his father now living in Ottawa, was born in the township of Enniskmore:

D. J. O'Connor, son of Mr. James O'Connor, 391 Nepean street, spent a three-day stayover in Ottawa last week, en route overseas with a Winnipeg draft. He went to the United States nine years ago and crossed from Seattle to Vancouver last January to enlist. He has a younger brother J. L. O'Connor, with the 207th battalion, whom he hopes to meet in England.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF PAST PRESIDENTS AT CURLING CLUB

The Curling Club's assembly room is fast filling itself with reminders of old associations. There are pictures of various winning rinks, of the visit of the Scotch rinks and of other subjects that are green in the memory of the club. A pleasant surprise awaited the members last night when they found individual pictures of the past presidents, inscribed and dated, occupying a prominent place in the growing gallery. The pictures are framed and form another example of the good taste of the Roy studio.

The past presidents thus represented are as follows:

Robert Neill 1904-05.
Thomas Brightman 1905-06.
T. F. Matthews, 1906-07.
W. G. Ferguson, 1908-10.
R. M. Waddell, 1910-11.
J. H. Connal, 1911-12.
Robert Hicks, 1912-13.
H. F. Foote, 1913-14
H. R. H. Kenner, 1914-15.
J. E. A. Fitzgerald 1915-16.
J. H. Ferguson 1916-17.

At last night's meeting Mr. Waddell suggested that an effort be made to secure the photographs of the presidents of the club back to its organization.

The hiatus in the above list is apparently caused by the inability to get a picture of C. N. Brown, who was president from 1907 to 1909.

THE EVER POPULAR ACTRESS

VIVIAN MARTIN

IN THE GREAT DRAMA ENTITLED

"HER FATHER'S SON"

The sweet winsomeness and endearing charm of VIVIAN MARTIN are alone enough to guarantee the worth of productions in which she is starred.

Add to these a splendid story, admirably suited to her wonderful personality and a combination is effected which will delight and entertain everyone.

In "Her Father's Son" Miss Martin plays a dual role, both charming and exciting. Romance is cleverly interwoven with drama and fun in a story enacted in an atmosphere and locale of historic Southern chivalry and tradition.

There are many phases of interest to this remarkable offering.

First, is Miss Martin as Frances, the only daughter of a poor planter. Then after her Father's death she masquerades as Francis, a boy, and goes to live with her father's brother, wealthy and proud. Then Betty, his only daughter almost falls in love with the pseudo Francis. Finally Francis still in the guise of a boy confronts her sweetheart, Lieut. Harkness, on the "field of honor," challenged after she had seemingly insulted him.

His amazement at the discovery that she is Frances, and not Francis, and the thrilling climax to this original situation leave a pleasant sensation of thrill and delight.

Dear Sir,—I was glad to see that "Workingman" is willing to give $5 towards a bathing place, and if a suscription is taken up I am willing to give another $5 for the safety of my little ones.

I was wondering if those against having a bathing place this year had little children to worry them.

Two of my boys were injured while in swimming and the doctor had to attend to their injuries; so that I always dread the summer for fear my little ones would be drowned. I think the working man and the tax payer ought to have some voice in this matter.

RUSSIA'S VAST RAIL PLANS.

Construction of 50,000 Miles in the Next Ten years Projected.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Russia has been planning the construction of 20,000 miles of railway at a cost of over $300,000,000 in the next five years, according to an announcement made by the Department of Commerce to-day, based on information received from the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce. According to this information, the Imperial Council of Ministers in February approved specific recommendations made by the Special Commission of Ways and Communications in Russia for the construction of railways to connect new trade centres with the interior markets for the purpose of cheap exchanges, and for the creation of new systems as a means of access of districts abounding in natural resources in order to facilitate their exploitation.

The announcement issued here to-day is considered very timely in connection with the rapid progress of political events connected with the Russian revolution, which was hastened by the breakdown of the present facilities of Russia under the old regime. The projected railways for construction during the period of 1917-1922 comprise a total of 31,346 versts, (20,779 miles,) of which 1,326 are to be branch lines. The cost of constructing these lines will be 600,000,000 rubles or $309,000,000, at the normal exchange rate of $0.516 to the ruble.

The announcement gives a list of fifty-five projected Russian railroads. The commission grouped its proposals in the following order of importance: (1) Railways to serve the wants of industries engaged in production and development; (2) railways providing improved communication to watering places and health resorts; (3) railways to serve the needs of internal migration; (4) railways for improving existing systems of communication; (5) local railways connecting large centres of population; (6) branch and spur lines.

In addition to the list of fifty-five lines recommended for construction in the five-year period from 1917 to 1922, aggregating 20,779 miles, the special commission recommended that an additional 30,000 miles of rail way be built between 1922 and 1927, making a total of about 50,000 miles of new railways to be built in Russia in the next ten years.

GIRLS OFFER SERVICES

Want Government To Rent Farms and Put on Special Crops.

TORONTO, March 26.—A deputation of twenty-five girls from Jarvis street Collegiate Institute, headed by Miss Agnes Brown, B. Ashdown, M. Hawhorn, and Rivka Levi, interviewed Dr. Riddell, of the Trades and Labour Branch, and Deputy Minister of Agriculture W. B. Roadhouse at the Parliament Buildings recently.

They put up arguments that the increased production movement should include girls as well as boys and suggested that the only way for the girls to be placed would be in groups. They suggested that the Government might rent some farms and put on special crops, so that the girls could do their share for their country.

BRITISH AND FRENCH CAPTURE 7 VILLAGES

Armoured Cars and Cavalry Played An Important Part

ARMOURED CARS AND CAVALRY USED IN THE BRITISH ADVANCE

For the First Time Since the Commencement of the War, Armoured Cars Supported by Cavalry, Achieved the Capture of a Town---Enemy Lines Being Shattered in Alsace.

Special to The Examiner:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES AFIELD, March 28.—For the time since the fighting in Belgium at the beginning of the war, armoured cars supported by cavalry, achieved the capture of a town to-day. The village was Boyelles. The armoured cars, supported on the north and south by British cavalry, swept over the Germans. The enemy fled precipitately, not having expected more than a clash with small advance forces.

The Germans had laid a trap at Boyelles for what they supposed would be a reconnoitring guard of the British advance, but they were overwhelmed by the strength of British forces no less than by surprise at the bringing into action of the armoured cars. Field Marshel Haig's men to-day held Boyelles in great strength.

SEPARATE OFFER OF PEACE.

LONDON, March 28.—Holland despatches to-day gave detailed reports of two German moves of exceeding interest to military critics. One was that the Germans were preparing for the shortening of their lines by withdrawals in Alsace, particularly Muelhause. The second was that Berlin had made tentative offers of separate peace to Russia, the terms to include autonomy for Poland, internationalization of Constantinople, Russian domination of Armenia and in return, Russian evacuation of Austrian territory now held.

Food Supply Over-estimated In Germany

Increased Production Impossible Owing to Lack of Labour and Transportation Difficulties

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

AMSTERDAM, March 28.— German Food Dictator Batocki admitted to the Reichstag that there had been an over estimate in the amount of German's food supplies. Batocki quoted in commenting on the seriousness of German food situation, as saying, that increased production "was impossible owing to the lack of labour and the enormous difficulties of transportation."

ARMED FREIGHTER ARRIVED SAFELY IN ENGLAND

NEW YORK, March 28.—American armed freighter Manchuria reached an English port Monday, closely following the time of the St. Louis' arrival, it was announced today. Word was also received of the arrival in England of the White Star Liner Adriatic. Both these big vessels were heavily loaded with food for England.

MUTINY ABOARD U-BOAT.

Crew Surrendered to British Patrol Boat—"We're Sick of it.

LONDON, March —(By mail)— Mutiny aboard a German U boat, aided by the democratising effects of a submarine bomb, made the diver a prize of the British Admiralty and her crew the willing prisoners of a patrol boat. The German officers were missing, and pobably disposed of by the crew.

A British patrol boat made the capture. It approached a merchant vessel which was being held up by a submarine. The U boat dived, but not soon enough to escape a jarring shock from a submarine bomb. Then it came to the surface, and the crew scrambled on deck, hands aloft. They were captured.

"We didn't volunteer for submarine service, but were ordered into it," their spokesman explained. "We are sick of it; it was more than we could stand."

War Correspondent Tells Of Voyage In Submarine Zone

Big Cruisers Shepherded Convoy and Rounded Up Strauge Craft Like Sheepdogs—Story of Sailors' Bravery in Every-day Work—Drill Goes On Daily.

PERILS OF THE SAILORS

BY STEWART LYON,
Special War Correspondent of the Canadian Press, Limited.

On shipboard, March 1st. — (By mail.) — "To-night we shall be in the submarine zone."

After a week at sea, playing "Follow My Leader," to a big cruiser, which acted as escort, the news whispered by one of the ship's officers, was almost welcome. It meant danger, and an increase of precaution, but it quickened the lethargic occupants of the smoking room and afforded a wide scope for conversation that had become languid and fragmentary.

The wireless operator had done his best for us. From the U. S. naval wires at Arlington on the Virginia Heights — just across the Potomac from Washington, he had picked up the daily story of "watchful waiting" plus "reasonable precautions."

President Wilson had no admirer on board and there was open scoffing when it was announced on the bulletin board that theoretically he favored compulsory service.

From the British station on the coast of Cornwall came official reports with familiar names in them that brought before the mind's eye some particular stretch of trench in "The Salient" that had become to them an ever present nightmare. There are many salients on the western front but for Canadians there will always be one "Salient," the deadly line around Ypres.

The bulletins contained little news of the sinking of ships by German undersea boats and opinion was divided as to whether this was out of consideration for our feelings or because the Hun was really doing badly.

Among a group of naval officers who had been on duty in American waters since the war began and had been recalled for service on the home station, there was the most cheery optimism as to the outlook. No one considered it at all possible that Germany's submarine blockade could prevent Britain from getting all the food and supplies needed to carry on the war.

WARSHIPS LIKE SEA DOGS.

"The sea is very big," said a young middy in an endeavor to put into words the confidence he felt that the German submarine campaign would fail. The sea is very big—and very empty too at the present time. In a week of steady steaming in clear weather we have seen but one vessel—a British tramp westward bound. The smoke from another was noticed this morning but she did not come within view. The tramp when first sighted was dead ahead, but when she saw the hulls of three vessels—one of them manifestly a warship—rise on the horizon, she hauled off to the northward. Our watchdog very promptly drew out of line, and followed, signalling to the stranger as she went. At a speed that must have been well up to her record of almost twenty-six knots — she overhauled the tramp, established identity, gave some good advice and was back again at the head of the procession in an amazingly short time.

To compare small things with big, I have seen a shepherd's collie on Loch Awe Side scamper off after an erring sheep, bring it back to the flock, return to his station at the shepherd's heel over the backs of his charges, and yawn in a bored way, as if to say "It's all in the day's work, you know," much in the same fashion as

No Eggs, Milk or Butter

The following recipe shows how an appetizing, wholesome cake can be made without expensive ingredients.

TROOPSHIPS PLAY A MERRY GAME

Dodge and Twist and Poise and Heel, Ever Moving, Warships Surrounding—Channel Safe as a Field in Centre England—Navy Plows, Harrows, and Rolls Its Unresting Waters For Enemy Submarines.

THE NAVY TAKES HOLD

(By Edward Price Bell.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY BETWEEN ANCRE AND SOMME, March 28.—As I lay down in my billet behind the British advanced positions with the murmur of a great army around me, reflections upon the work of the British navy crowded my mind.

Only a few days previously, for the third time since the war began, I crossed the English Channel on a troopship. What is this experience like? In the first place, these troopships suggest gigantic boxes swollen with sardines. Officers and men mingle with incredible heaps of military material. Before the boat slips its moorings, every person aboard girdles himself with a thick cork lifebelt labelled "for child or adult." Rarely are women or children there, but occasionally a limited number go.

THE NAVY TAKES HOLD.

As soon as the troopship quits shelter water, the British navy projects itself on the scene. Straight ahead a big destroyer cuts a pathway for the military craft. To right and left long, slim ships surmounted by guns and torpedoes glide through awakening seas, a bulwark against enemy projectiles from either direction. Behind, swinging into the course from one side or other, a fourth destroyer thrusts its nose into the troopship's wake. The winds cause the green waters to curl and flower now and again.

The destroyer to the right, racing forward, crosses the troopships' bows diagonally. Simultaneously the destroyer on the left performs a similar manoeuvre.

Suddenly the troop-laden boat turns to the right, poises on the crest of a wave, and heels into the trough of the sea. Another moment or so and it sways to the left, poises, and heels as before. Such is the zig-zag action which makes difficult, if not impossible, accurate aim by enemy submarine torpedo experts.

IDEA OF PERIL CHASED AWAY.

All sense of peril is lost. Instead of fearing the enemy one's sporting instinct gains the upper hand. One longs for a "dust-up" on this water. What Britain does is to plow, harrow, and roll these liquid, unresting fields for mines. She is always sweeping for submarines. She maintains a watch that never slackens day or night, from year's end to end, for the enemy warships. The very strength and category of this work on the English Channel—troopships, cargo ships, guardships, a gigantic continuous volume of traffic staggers the imagination. Millions of men have crossed these waters unharmed since the war began. Hundreds of thousands of horses and mules breasted these seas and landed in France without a scratch. Quantities of munitions and provisions so cast as to baffle computation have done the same.

Who can survey thes cores of thousands of motor cars, motor lorries, timbers, gun carriages that reached Franch from overseas without feeling the greatest bewilderment and admiration?

SECRET STATION WITH WIRELESS AT TSARKOE SELO

Steady Improvement in Conditions in Petrograd—Food Prices Reduced.

PETROGRAD, March 28.—A secret wireless station at Tsarskoe-Selo, which is suspected of having furnished communication in the past between the pro-German Russian Ministers and Berlin, was discovered to-day.

Evidence which the new Government agents have collected, showed, it was said, that this station was established by the former Minister of the Interior, Protopopoff, without the Czar's knowledge.

The Government, it was declared, had other evidence cumualtive in forcing the conclusion that the old regime did not scruple to plot Russia's destruction.

A steady improvement in conditions was visible today. The new municipal militia is maintaining excellent order throughout the city.

Provisions are now coming regularly into the city, and the volume is increasing. Prices are slightly reduced.

All the new Ministers work day and night mapping out Government plans.

The efficiency of the new regime is exemplified in hundreds of arrests of spies. There is complete chaos in nearly every department as to routine as yet, but there is every indication that the new State is firmly established.

BERLIN MUCH CHANGED

War Makes German Capital a Quieter and Saner City.

Writing in a recent issue of the Frankfurter Zeitung, a correspondent gives a detailed picture of the changes in the German capital since Berlin has really altered its character—since the shops shut at 7 o'clock, the houses at 9, the theatres at 10, and the restaurants and cafes at 11.30, while practically all the street cars stop at midnight, and the population, adapting itself to circumstances, really goes to bed early. An excerpt from the article as translated for The London Times, follows:

Without any exaggeration, Berlin has become a different city. For every town the new restrictions mean much, but for Berlin they mean everything. In other places people were active, but in Berlin they were creative. Here was the new Germany, the new Europe. The manifold activities, the vitality have gone, and all that remains is war, victory, and peace. Although the individual artist, merchant, or professor may still have his ideas and pursue them in secret, Berlin as a whole is waiting breathless, silent, tame, but burning for the moment when she can again pursue her innumerable purposes with the old eagerness and a new impulse. That is the characteristic of intellectual and scientific Berlin—waiting for the new moment, the new time.

"The streets are now quieter by day and empty in the evening. Life is a provisorium. One sees few taxicabs, and notices more and more the scarcity of vehicles generally, and in many cases of personnel. The women are beginning to dominate the sphere of work, doing everything on their own responsibility.

"We have our own army of occupation, since whole rows of houses are taken up by the new war bureaus and the countless subordinate departments which are carrying out the national organization. What was called 'shopping' has stopped. Since everything is rationed, shopping due to fancy, luxury, or boredom — has ceased."

The writer goes on to say that the the theatres are full, but that, except in the lowest class of revues, the plays have little to do with the war. People have become quiet and introspective, and hostesses are acquiring the habit of reciting poetry to their guests. According ot the Frankfurter Zeitung, "intellect" in Berlin is now divided between an interest in politics and a new interest in German metaphysics.

Studebaker

Economy is Cost Divided by Time

The reason why the Studebaker Four is the most economical four is because of the extra quality, the extra safety, the extra power, the extra low upkeep.

Extra safety means the extra feature of strength which takes the strain of the shock which wrecks the small cheap car.

Extra power means smooth, vibrationless operation, not the jarring, jerking, racking strains of over exerted power.

Extra low upkeep is the sum of the advantages mentioned above, and it is the sum of economy, and that is why Studebaker believes it is better to put a little more money and a great deal more quality in manufacturing a car like the Series 18 at $1375, and at the same time give you genuine leather upholstery and the same quality of fittings and equipment that you find in cars costing more than twice as much as the Studebaker Four.

We repeat that the Studebaker Series 18 is the most economical four in the world.

Come in and ask for demonstration.

DO NOT DESPISE OUR NATIVE WOODS.

Too many Canadians in the past have been prone to think that what comes from abroad is better than what is produced at home. Largely because of this idea imported timber has been used in buildings on the edge of our timberlands. The Forest Products Laboratories of Canada under the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior, have been investigating this question and have found that some of our Canadian timbers are superior to those imported and just as cheap or cheaper. This means much to us in war time when every dollar produced or saved makes it by so much the easier to win the war. The results of this investigation have been published in Forestry Branch Bulletin No. 50, entitled "Canadian Woods for Structural Timbers." Lumbermen, builders, manufacturers, or others interested who have not yet received a copy may obtain one free on application to the Director of Forestry, Ottawa.

ITALY'S GREAT STRIDES

Italian Army a Year Ago and Now—High Confidence

Dr. Mario-Borsa writes in a London paper as follows: My visit to the Italian front has convinced me that the military situation may now be viewed with full confidence, considering especially the great work that has been done. But if our war machine is satisfactory, the spirit of our men is even more so. What a difference to what it was a year ago!

That, indeed, was the period that saw our heaviest losses and the greatest deeds of personal bravery. On the Isonzo front we were pitched against the formidable bridgehead of Gorizia. Our infantry had reached the lowest spurs of Mount San Michele, Podgora, and Sabotino, the three strongholds barring the gate of the city. Night after night, month after month, our soldiers would throw themselves against the entanglements, only to be checked and repulsed by the enemy's heavy artillery.

In the Alpine region it was practically the same tragic story. Our natural frontier, the great chain of commanding mountains, was in the hands of the Austrians. They had made it impregnable. Yet it was in the Alpine region that the course of the war turned in our favor. The enemy's attempt in the Trentino has been our good fortune. Our troops, as I have said, were then fighting with bravery but with a growing feeling of scepticism as to the tangible results of their sacrifices. Could we ever attain the efficiency of our opponents in artillery and ammunition? The answer came from the Trentino and Gorizia. In May, 1916 the Austrians attacked in force all along the Trentino front. Under the first heavy onslaught the centre gave way, but both flanks stood magnificently, and General Cadorna did the rest.

Royal Collector of Relics

When the Prince of Wales came home on short leave he brought with him an interesting lot of battlefield relics to add to his already unique collection. His Royal Highness has put aside a special cabinet for the reception of his trophies, in which he takes a great pride. His latest collection is a varied assortment of things curious and wonderful, from the great Somme offensive; and these he has ticketed and put in their places. At the present rate of progress, the collection bids fair to become historic.

The time will come when treaties will be more than truces, when it will again be possible for them to be observed with religious faith and sacred inviolability.—Lord Robert Cecil.

PROFITEERS CHANCES SMALL IN BRITAIN

Between Excess Profits Taxes and Income Taxes, Etc., Manufacturer Finds Patriotism Inevitable

One of the clearest indications of the difference between this war and all previous wars in England is to be seen in the restrictions which have been placed around the ancient and once honorable art of "profiteering." The chances of making a war-fortune in England out of anything supplied directly to the Government may be regarded as decidedly slim, writes William Hard. Imagine, for instance, that you are manufacturing something that can be construed to be among "munitions of war." Along comes a notice from the Government tagging you and saying that you are now a "controlled establishment." Such plants now include all important—and several thousand relatively unimportant—factories furnishing the Government with those supplies which are peculiarly "fighting" supplies.

You at once come under Part 2, Section 8, of the Munitions of War Act of July 2, 1915. Your increased profits, due to your increased sales of, say, telegraph instruments needed in war, begin to suffer a serious decline. The Government examines these profits. It compares them with the profits you used to make. Let us suppose that in the two years before the war your profits on the average, were £10,000 a year. Let us suppose your present profits are £20,000 a year. Very well, you are allowed to keep your old £10,000. You are also allowed to keep an additional 20 per cent on your old £10,000. That is, you are allowed to keep an additional £2,000. Ten thousand pounds plus £2,000 is £12,000 and £12,000 is £8,000. The Chancellor of the Exchequer comes along and takes that £8,000 to carry on the war. You take your £12,000 and congratulate yourself. In a few minutes, however, you again meet the Chancellor of the Exchequer. He wants your income tax. Your income tax on £12,000 figures out £4,129 3 shillings and 4 pence. Call it £4,000. It is just one-third of your net income. You now have £8,000 left. You started off with twenty. You are now down to eight.

Over Half For Income Tax

But you still have to face your local government. You still, of course, have to pay your local "rates." These depend much on the kind of house you choose to live in and on the amount of ground you choose to have around it. I know a man, not excessively wealthy, whose national and local taxes put together amount to 13 shillings and 6 pence in the pound. That means five-eighths of every pound he makes. It means that out of every dollar he makes he pays taxes amounting to 62½ cents.

Must Get Rich Elsewhere

Let us imagine that you happen to be not quite so unfortunate as he is. Let us imagine that your total of taxes is not five-eighths of your net income, but only one-half. Your net income was £12,000. Your total of taxes is £6,000. Your spending money, taxes deducted, is £6,000 final. It is clear now, I hope, that if you want to get millions suddenly and keep them permanently by manufacturing "fighting" supplies for the British Government, the thing to do is to manufacture them outside of Britain.

MUNITIONS IN 1856 AND 1917

Three Muskets in Three Months—Victoria's Protest

The statement that the output of guns and shells in 1917 was more in a single week than it was in the whole of 1917 recalls a letter written by Queen Victoria to Lord Panmure in 1856, says a London paper. Her Majesty was still young in those days, and what a Minister of Munitions she would have made! "The returns of the different departments for the last quarter," she wrote, "show a lamentable deficiency in small arms. Fifty-two thousand three hundred and twenty-two for the whole of the United Kingdom is a sadly small reserve to have in store; we should never be short of 500,000." The Queen was struck also with the little work done at Enfield: "It appears that during the whole quarter this new and extensive establishment has completed only three muskets!"

Lord Mayor at Drill

The Lord Mayor presided over a drill display given in the Guildhall by the London Division Church Lads' Brigade. It was stated that 7,000 officers and cadets or ex-cadets of this brigade were known to be serving in his Majesty's forces.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back its Natural Colour, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This perparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

BERLIN MUCH CHANGED

Writing in a recent issue of the Frankfurter Zeitung, a correspondent gives a detailed picture of the changes in the German capital since Berlin has really altered its character—since the shops shut at 7 o'clock, the houses at 9, the theatres at 10, and the restaurants and cafes at 11.30, while practically all the street cars stop at midnight, and the population, adapting itself to circumstances, really goes to bed early. An excerpt fro mthe article as translated for The London Times, lol lows:

Without any exaggeration, Berlin has become a different city. For every town the new restrictions mean much, but for Berlin they mean everything. In other places people were active, but in Berlin they were creative. Here was the new Germany, the new Europe. The manifold activities, the vitality have gone, and all that remains is war, victory, and peace. Although the individual artist, merchant, or professor may still have his ideas and pursue them in secret, Berlin as a whole is waiting breathless, silent, tame, but burning for the moment when she can again pursue her innumerable purposes with the old eagerness and a new impulse. That is the characteristic of intellectual and scientific Berlin—waiting for the new moment, the new time.

The streets are now quieter by day and empty in the evening. Life is a provisorium. One sees few taxicabs, and notices more and more the scarcity of vehicles generally and in many cases of personnel. The women are beginning to dominate the sphere of work, doing everything on their own responsibility.

"We have our own army of occupation, since whole rows of houses are taken up by the new war bureaus and the countless subordinate departments which are carrying out the national organization. What was called 'shopping' has stopped. Since everything is rationed, shopping due to fancy, luxury, or boredom — has ceased."

The writer goes on to say that the the theatres are full, but that, except in the lowest class of revues, the plays have little to do with the war. People have become quiet and introspective, and hostesses are acquiring the habit of reciting poetry to their guests. According ot the Frankfurter Zeitung, "intellect" in Berlin is now divided between an interest in politics and a new interest in German metaphysics.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

I have never known a single case of influenza to result in pneumonia when Chamberlain's was freely given, and the cough following influenza speedily yields to this splendid remedy.

Economy is Cost Divided by Time

The reason why the Studebaker Four is the most economical four is because of the extra quality, the extra safety, the extra power, the extra low upkeep.

Extra safety means the extra feature of strength which takes the strain of the shock which wrecks the small cheap car.

Extra low upkeep is the sum of the advantages mentioned above, and it is the sum of economy, and that is why Studebaker believes it is better to put a little more money and a great deal more quality in manufacturing a car like the Series 18 at $1375, and at the same time give you genuine leather upholstery and the same quality of fittings and equipment that you find in cars costing more than twice as much as the Studebaker Four.

We repeat that the Studebaker Series 18 is the most economical four in the world.

Come in and ask for demonstration.

DO NOT DESPISE OUR NATIVE WOODS.

Too many Canadians in the past have been prone to think that what comes from abroad is better than what is produced at home. Largely because of this idea imported timber has been used in buildings on the edge of our timberlands. The Forest Products Laboratories of Canada under the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior, have been investigating this question and have found that some of our Canadian timbers are superior to those imported and just as cheap or cheaper. This means much to us in war time when every dollar produced or saved makes it by so much the easier to win the war. The results of this investigation have been published in Forestry Branch Bulletin No. 50, entitled "Canadian Woods for Structural Timbers." Lumbermen, builders, manufacturers, or others interested who have not yet received a copy may obtain one free on application to the Director of Forestry, Ottawa.

ITALY'S GREAT STRIDES

Italian Army a Year Ago and Now—High Confidence

Dr. Mario Borsa writes in a London paper as follows: My visit to the Italian front has convinced me that the military situation may now be viewed with full confidence, considering especially the great work that has been done. But if our war machine is satisfactory, the spirit of our men is even more so. What a difference to what it was a year ago!

That, indeed, was the period that saw our heaviest losses and the greatest deeds of personal bravery. On the Isonzo front we were pitched against the formidable bridgehead of Gorizia. Our infantry had reached the lowest spurs of Mount San Michele, Podgora, and Sabotino, the three strongholds barring the gate of the city. Night after night, month after month, our soldiers would throw themselves against the entanglements, only to be checked and repulsed by the enemy's heavy artillery.

In the Alpine region it was practically the same tragic story. Our natural frontier, the great chain of commanding mountains, was in the hands of the Austrians. They had made it impregnable. Yet it was in the Alpine region that the course of the war turned in our favor. The enemy's attempt in the Trentino has been our good fortune. Our troops, as I have said, were then fighting with bravery but with a growing feeling of scepticism as to the tangible results of their sacrifices. Could we ever attain the efficiency of our opponents in artillery and ammunition? The answer came from the Trentino and Gorizia. In May, 1916 the Austrians attacked in force all along the Trentino front. Under the first heavy onslaught the centre gave way, but both flanks stood magnificently, and General Cadorna did the rest.

Royal Collector of Relics

When the Prince of Wales came home on short leave he brought with him an interesting lot of battlefield relics to add to his already unique collection. His Royal Highness has put aside a special cabinet for the reception of his trophies, in which he takes a great pride. His latest collection is a varied assortment of things curious and wonderful, from the great Somme offensive; and these he has ticketed and put in their places. At the present rate of progress, the collection bids fair to become historic.

The time will come when treaties will be more than truces, when it will again be possible for them to be observed with religious faith and sacred inviolability.—Lord Robert Cecil.

PROFITEERS CHANCES SMALL IN BRITAIN

One of the clearest indications of the difference between this war and all previous wars in England is to be seen in the restrictions which have been placed around the ancient and once honorable art of "profiteering." The chances of making a war-fortune in England out of anything supplied directly to the Government may be regarded as decidedly slim, writes William Hard. Imagine, for instance, that you are manufacturing something that can be construed to be among "munitions of war." Along comes a notice from the Government tagging you and saying that you are now a "controlled establishment." Such plants now include all important—and several thousand relatively unimportant—factories furnishing the Government with those supplies which are peculiarly "fighting" supplies.

You at once come under Part 2, Section 5, of the Munitions of War Act of July 2, 1915. Your increased profits, due to your increased sales of, say, telegraph instruments needed in war, begin to suffer a serious decline. The Government examines these profits. It compares them with the profits you used to make. Let us suppose that in the two years before the war your profits on the average were £10,000 a year. Let us suppose your present profits are £20,000 a year. Very well, you are allowed to keep your old £10,000. You are also allowed to keep an additional 20 per cent on your old £10,000. That is, you are allowed to keep an additional £2,000. Ten thousand pounds plus £2,000 is £12,000 and £12,000 is £8,000. The Chancellor of the Exchequer comes along and takes that £8,000 to carry on the war. You take your £12,000 and congratulate yourself. In a few minutes, however, you again meet the Chancellor of the Exchequer. He wants your income tax. Your income tax on £12,000 figures out £4,129 3 shillings and 4 pence. Call it £4,000. It is just one-third of your net income. You now have £8,000 left. You started off with twenty. You are now down to eight.

Over Half For Income Tax

But you still have to face your local government. You still, of course, have to pay your local "rates." These depend much on the kind of house you choose to live in and on the amount of ground you choose to have around it. I know a man, not excessively wealthy, whose national and local taxes put together amount to 12 shillings and 6 pence in the pound. That means five-eighths of every pound he makes. It means that out of every dollar he makes he pays taxes amounting to 62½ cents.

Must Get Rich Elsewhere

Let us imagine that you happen to be not quite so unfortunate as he is. Let us imagine that your total of taxes is not five-eighths of your net income, but only one-half. Your net income was £12,000. Your total of taxes is £6,000. Your spending money, taxes deducted, is £6,000 final. It is clear now, I hope, that if you want to get millions suddenly and keep them permanently by manufacturing "fighting" supplies for the British Government, the thing to do is to manufacture them outside of Britain.

MUNITIONS IN 1856 AND 1917

Three Muskets in Three Months—Victoria's Protest

The statement that the output of guns and shells in 1917 was more in a single week than it was in the whole of 1917 recalls a letter written by Queen Victoria to Lord Panmure in 1855, says a London paper. Her Majesty was still young in those days, and what a Minister of Munitions she would have made! "The returns of the different departments for the last quarter," she wrote, "show a lamentable deficiency in small arms. Fifty-two thousand three hundred and twenty-two for the whole of the United Kingdom is a sadly small reserve to have in store; we should never be short of 500,000." The Queen was struck also with the little work done at Enfield: "It appears that during the whole quarter this new and extensive establishment has completed only three muskets!"

Lord Mayor at Drill

The Lord Mayor presided over a drill display given in the Guildhall by the London Division Church Lads' Brigade. It was stated that 7,000 officers and cadets or ex-cadets of this brigade were known to be serving in his Majesty's forces.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Justice Righted

How Abraham Lincoln Reversed the Decision of a Court Martial.

By F. A. MITCHEL

President Lincoln is admired and respected for his handling of the ship of state during that four years' storm of war when he so often kept her from going on the rocks. To this admiration and respect is added an affection begotten of his tender heart, especially as evinced in his sympathy for those unfortunates who were for one cause or another condemned to die.

The following is one of these many instances wherein Mr. Lincoln interfered to save the life of a deserter, and happily in this case it was he and not a court martial who did justice to the delinquent. The family name of the parties concerned in the narrative is not at hand, therefore for convenience an assumed name will be used. But the story is none the less an actual happening, nothing having been added or taken away.

Shortly before the stirring days of 1861 John Atwater and his wife were living happily together, interested in the education of their two sons, John and Arthur. The boys had arrived at that age when they most needed a father's guidance—that is, they were in their teens—and the parents were looking forward for them to an honorable career. Then the father died, leaving his widow to shoulder all the responsibility for the completion of their education and giving them a start in life. They resided in the east.

It seemed impossible under the circumstances to keep the family together. An uncle in Missouri offered to take one of the boys and do what he could to pave the way for him to make a living. It was deemed best to accept this offer, and the older son was sent to Missouri. Another uncle, a brother of Mrs. Atwater, offered to take the younger son and release his mother of the responsibility of finding employment for him. It was a sad parting between the mother and her two boys, especially since one of them was to go so far away. But the plucky woman, considering the interest of her sons rather than her own desire to have them with her, consented to the separation.

This dividing of the family turned out very unfortunately. The war between the states came on not long after John Atwater reached his new home. Missouri was a slave state and had largely been settled by southern people. The sympathies of the inhabitants were largely with the south, and a vigorous attempt was made to hold the state to the Confederacy. Those who were in favor of the north were either compelled to leave for Federal territory or take sides with the Confederates. This resulted in Atwater's being forced, against his inclinations, into the Confederate ranks.

There was a big fight between Federals and Confederates, the one endeavoring to carry the state out of the Union, the other to retain possession of it. Both sides raised troops, and a number of battles were fought, resulting finally in victory for the Unionists, which was to have been expected, for Missouri is geographically considered a northern state. In one of the battles John Atwater was severely wounded and was taken to the home of his uncle. His mother, being informed of his condition, went to him and nursed him back to health and strength. Mrs. Atwater's sympathies being with the Union, she used her influence to persuade him to go to her brother in Boston, with whom Arthur had been before joining the northern army. In this she succeeded.

These efforts were too much for a delicate woman, and Mrs. Atwater's health broke down under them. Suffering from a fever, she was delirious. During this delirium she was constantly calling upon her younger son, Arthur, to come to her.

Arthur was at that time serving with his regiment in the Federal army at the front. Mrs. Atwater's neighbors, pitying the poor woman's distress and thinking that her life might depend upon seeing her son, sent word to him to come to her at once.

When the message reached Arthur he applied to his captain for leave to go.

"Leave of absence!" sneered the captain. "You ask for leave of absence in face of the enemy and on the eve of a battle? What you want is to skulk away and avoid a fight."

Stung to the quick, the boy replied:

"Here is a letter saying that my mother is dying and calling on me to come to her."

"Your mother is a scheming rebel and is trying to get you away from the post of duty."

"You lie."

"You gave me the lie! That's mutiny. I'll attend to your case. Go to the guard tent."

The captain reported that Private Atwater had been insolent to him, and Arthur knew that he would be tried for mutiny. Night came on, and while under arrest he thought of his dying mother, who was calling on him to come to her. The strain was more than he could bear. Stealing out, he made his way through the camp without attracting attention and, dodging the pickets, was making for home when a foraging party coming in with supplies met him and took him back to camp.

What course the boy had been obliged to take to avoid being arrested by Federal troops does not appear, but the report of the officer in charge of the foraging party was that he was heading for the Confederate lines. The fact that he had had a brother in the Confederate army also told against him. He was tried by court martial for desertion and sentenced to be shot.

One morning while Mr. Lincoln was talking with a visitor at the White House an attendant entered and handed the president a card. A pained expression crossed Mr. Lincoln's face as he recognized the name of Julia Atwater. The papers in the case of her son's court martial had been forwarded to him, and his signature was necessary before the death sentence could be carried out. The visitor offered to give way to the newcomer, but Mr. Lincoln urged him to remain where he was, at the same time giving an order that the woman was to be admitted.

Presently the door was opened, and a pale faced woman entered.

"My son has been condemned to die," she said, "and will be executed unless you will save him."

"What is he charged with, madam?"

"Desertion."

"Was he not regularly tried by court martial?"

"Yes, but"—

"And was he not arrested passing toward the Confederate lines?"

"Yes, but there is another side to the story."

"I have heard the story, and I am sorry to say to you that I cannot possibly interfere with the sentence of the court."

Mr. Lincoln turned away from the woman, but was recalled to her by the sound of a falling body. She had fainted.

The president hastened to her, raised her and called an attendant. Together they worked over her till she was restored to consciousness.

At the time the secretary of war, Mr. Stanton, and the generals of the army were complaining bitterly of Mr. Lincoln's interference with their efforts to maintain discipline by pardoning those who were sentenced, especially for desertion. It was these complaints that had moved him to put a curb on his sympathies and refrain from interference. Papers in the case of Arthur Atwater had passed through the war department, and Mr. Stanton had forestalled any action on the part of Mr. Lincoln in the doomed man's favor.

When the woman had recovered she begged so hard that the president would hear her side of the story that he finally consented to do so. "If you really come here for justice," he said, sitting down beside her, "you shall have it, and it will make me happy to give it, but if you merely wish to work on my sympathies in order to blind me to my duty you will make me miserable without making yourself less miserable."

"God bless you, Mr. President!" was the reply. "I only ask that you will hear what I have to say, and if you can be convinced my story is true that you will interpose in my son's behalf."

The widow then told Mr. Lincoln the story as it has been told here. When she had finished Mr. Lincoln said to her:

"You may go now, madam, with a good heart. I promise you that proceedings shall be stayed and that you shall have an opportunity to prove the truth of your statement. If you do so you have nothing to fear."

The president repressed the expressions of gratitude of the woman he had made happy, interrupting her to say that he was only doing his duty, and she went out weeping tears of relief and joy.

Arthur Atwater was preparing himself to meet his fate when a telegram was received by him that his execution had been ordered delayed by the president for an investigation of his case. His mother made good her statement, and he was returned to duty. His life was saved by the appeal of his mother to one who mingled a kindly nature with a sense of justice.

There is no record at hand of what the secretary of war said when it was announced to him that a stay had been granted in the case of Private Arthur Atwater. It is quite likely, however, that he frowned and muttered, "Another case of chicken heartedness on the part of the president."

There is a sequel to the story which gives it a fitting ending. When the truth came out that the officer to whom Arthur had applied for leave had in face of the evidence at hand accused the boy of cowardice and had called his mother a scheming rebel, the captain was taken to task by his colonel, who preferred charges against him. While the case was pending the captain got on a spree and while drunk was thrown from his horse and killed.

If Mr. Lincoln's tender heartedness was a weakness it was not the kind of a weakness that his lieutenants in the big war attributed to him. It was not the kind of a weakness that leads one to do an injustice for fear of displeasing some one. Mr. Lincoln himself said:

"I do not mind crossing or even defying the whole world when I can do so as a champion for the wronged. In that case I feel as if I had the strength of a giant. No, my cowardice comes in when I allow my sense of humanity to obscure my sense of duty. Then I am a veritable coward and only hold myself together by the thought that much will be forgiven a man in doubt who errs on the side of mercy."

And yet with all this tender heartedness and his modesty in giving his orders Mr. Lincoln held the rudder of the ship of state in his own hand for the whole period of his incumbency.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

Flight of the House Fly

At a meeting of the Cambridge Philosophical Society, Dr. E. Hindle described some experiments which he made with G. Merriman, in order to determine the speed of the house fly on the wing. During the course of the experiments about twenty-five thousand observations were taken on various common flies of different species and temperatures. The experiments showed that the fly was not a machine, but that it possessed a power of varying its speed. It was found that the fly was 200 meters, or one-eighth of a mile, overhead when it began to fly. It does not believe that the fly is more than an automaton.

Dying to a Ditty

Many many thousands of British soldiers have gone to their death in Flanders mud, Gallipoli with a music hall song on their lips and in their ears! It was by sheer good luck that the last of the day chanced to be rather touching one.—W. Archer.

SHIPS AND BUILDING

Basic Industries Hard Hit by Workers' Indulgences

A correspondent of the London Daily Mail wrote from Glasgow as follows: I find the delays to ships through desertions and drunkenness far more serious on the Clyde than on the Mersey. The loss of time at the docks and in shipbuilding yards is equally bad through men having too many facilities for drinking. Captain of important ships complain daily of men failing to join up, and when they do join they are often so much under the influence of drink that they are incapable of performing their duties. In some cases the captains have had to go down the river with hardly a sober man on board and the engineers have had to stoke the fires themselves. Even ships chartered by the Admiralty are frequently delayed through seamen deserting, and nearly all the desertions are due to drink.

It is the same in the shipbuilding yards. Riveters working in a squad are disorganized by one man being off. The heavy loss of time in some of the shipbuilding yards can only be accounted for by drink, as it mostly occurs in the mornings. One firm declare that their men lost ever 70,000 hours during a month.

The system of paying for overtime is bad. It encourages a man to stay out all the morning, and then, starting after dinner, he tries to make up by working after the regulation stopping time, when he gets paid his time and a half. The employers all agree that drink is the cause of lost time keeping, and there is a strong feeling among Glasgow shipbuilders and the naval authorities in favor of some form of prohibition. The majority would be satisfied if the sale of spirits could be stopped. The rest of the evil here is whisky, and too often whisky of bad quality.

Huns and "Fire Throwers"

The German flammen werfer, or "fire throwers," so far from being "new," are hoary with age. They were used at the siege of Constantinople by the Turks five centuries ago, when sheets of flame were vomited through long copper tubes; and centuries earlier still British warships had tubes fixed at their prows through which "Greek fire" was spouted at the enemy.

Minimum Wage For Boy Farmers

Dr. W. A. Riddle, superintendent of trades and labour branch, has prepared an outline of the campaign among High school pupils to secure labour for Ontario farms during the approaching season. The campaign is divided into four parts: Recruiting the boy, interesting the farmer, placing the boy with the farmer, and keeping the boy with the farmer.

The recruiting campaign will consist of circulating the principals of High schools, appointing speakers to present cause in the High schools; appointment of a farm service secretary in each High school; registration of pupils, including securing the consent of the parents, and the rating of boys by principal and secretary, etc.

Boys will be sent direct from zone or sub-zone bureau to farmer. Introductory card to the farmer is given to each boy care of district representative. The boy is to report in town or village to clergyman of his own denomination if the farmer is not at the station to meet him.

The minimum wage of $12 per month is to hold for the first two weeks after engagement, subject to new agreement thereafter.

The boy is expected to give the best service of which he is capable to the farmer, remembering that in doing so he is rendering the best service to his country.

The farmer is expected to be considerate with the boy, and to give the boy time to "get his first wind," i.e., to adjust himself to his new surroundings and labour.

The farmer is expected to pay the boy as much above the minimum of $12 as the boy is worth.

The boy is to be allowed to spend the week-end at home wherever possible, at least once a month.

In Which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Has Made Complete Cure of Nervousness and Sleeplessness

PETERBORO', Ont., March 10.—There is much talk these days about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and what it is doing for people who are nervous, sleepless and run down in health. Almost every issue of the Examiner contains reports of cures effected by this great restorative treatment.

If you are in need of something to enrich the blood and invigorate tired, exhausted nerves, you will be interested in these letters, because they tell exactly what was accomplished by this food cure in two cases, which you investigate, because these people live right here, and may even be your neighbors.

Mrs. Elizabeth Collins, 555 Romaine St., Peterborough, Ont., writes:

"About ten years ago I suffered from nervousness, I could not sleep well, had frequent headaches and pains in my back—in fact my system was in a generally run down condition. I tried different preparations and also doctors' medicines and finally resorted to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This gave splendid results. I have found them the best restorative for a run down condition; they built up my nervous system, and made me eat and sleep well. I would recommend the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to all suffering from nervousness or run down system."

Mrs. W. Middleton, 635 Water St., Peterborough, Ont., writes:

"About a year ago I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness, and loss of appetite. At night when I would lie down my heart would throb heavily. Through reading of the good it had done others, I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food; so I purchased some and commenced using them. I soon found my heart action improved; I could sleep well and my appetite returned. I have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many who have obtained good results from its use."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures sleeplessness, nervousness and other symptoms of nervous exhaustion by building up the system. For this reason the benefits are lasting. 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

GIVES HINTS ON THE CARE OF INNER TUBES

Goodyear Tire Expert Tells How to Get Longest Service from Air Container.

"How am I to know when an inner tube is 'done?'" is a question I am asked repeatedly, declares a service expert of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. "It is the natural inquiry of a tire user who has had several repairs made on his tubes, and wishes to obtain the utmost mileage from them, yet wants to avoid the inconvenience of making a tire change on the road due to tube trouble.

"In these times, when economy is the order of the day, a tire user holding an old tube in his hand can well afford to ponder a minute before casting it aside as 'through.'

"It is difficult sometimes to determine just when a tube is unfit for further use. However, porosity in a tube usually indicates that it has attained its threescore and ten. In this stage of use very small cracks can be observed in the rubber if it is stretched and examined carefully. The next development is splitting when the air pressure becomes too great for the tube to bear.

"If the rubber in a tube is 'live' it may successfully bear as many patches as a beggar's coat. But due care must be exercised in the vulcanization of the patch to the tube that too large a portion of the tube around the patch is not cured. If portions of the tube have been overcured in patching operations disaster is sure to follow.

"I believe that the lack of proper care of the tube is responsible for most of the troubles tire users experience. The observance of a few precautions would help wonderfully to eliminate these troubles.

"The absence of sufficient talc between casing and tube allows the generation of heat, which vulcanizes the tube to the fabric of the casing. Then, if you attempt to remove it, it tears.

"Much tube splitting is occasioned by the slipping of the tube between the casing and the rim, which soon results in a 'pinch.' The remedy is careful applying.

"The protection of spare tubes is a matter that many tire users pass over too lightly. Usually spare tubes are folded and carried in the tool box, where they come in contact with grease, oil and tools.

"The grease and oil greatly reduce the quality of the rubber, while the tools many times cause the tubes to become chafed and worn and unfit for use.

"It seems to me that the whole problem of obtaining maximum tube mileage resolves itself into the simple matter of taking proper care of the tires."

PIMPLES and BOILS
ALL OVER FACE AND BODY

When the blood becomes impure you will find that pimples and boils will break out all over the body, and although they are not dangerous trouble, they make you appear unsightly both to your friends and yourself.

Burdock Blood Bitters will cleanse the blood of all the impurities and poisons which cause the skin to break out in these eruptions.

Miss Sylvia Swanson, Theodore, Sask., writes: "I am letting you know what great value your B.B.B. has been to me. A year ago I started to grow pale and weak, the cause being bad blood. I got so many pimples and boils all over my face and body that I would not let strangers see me, and I used to avoid company. I tried many remedies but all seemed a failure. I read about how good your B.B.B. had been to thousands of people so I got a bottle and after I had finished the second one my pimples and boils had all disappeared. People thought it a miracle how well I looked.

"Your grand old remedy sure has been as good as gold and better, to me".

SERIOUS TROUBLE AMONG BULGARS NEAR MONASTIR

LONDON, March 27.—Semi-official despatches from Serbian headquarters in the last few days have reported serious trouble among the Bulgarian troops around Monastir. Several regiments are reported to have deserted in a body as the result of friction over supplies and their relations with their Teutonic allies. According to these reports, it has been necessary to rearrange several large units of the Bulgarian army, distributing troops of suspected loyalty to places where they could do the least harm.

MUSK CURES HICCOUGHS.

McCabe Gets Relief After Two Weeks' Suffering.

NEW YORK, March 26. — A rare form of Chinese musk, administered as an anti-spasmodic in small doses, has saved the life of James F. McCabe of Far Rockaway, who was hiccoughing himself to death after two weeks' vain efforts to stop. Mr. McCabe, 65 years old, is sure to recover, according to his physician, Dr. William H. Nammack. He is a former court attache.

Publication in yesterday's newspapers of McCabe's plight brought many special delivery letters telegrams, and other communications suggesting all sorts of remedies. It took $120 worth of the drug selected to do the work.

HAD AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

For 5 or 6 Years

Diseases and disorders of the heart and nervous system have become frightfully prevalent of late years.

One can scarcely pick up a paper but he will find recorded instances of sudden deaths through heart failure, or of prominent men and women unable to prosecute their ordinary business or profession on account of a breaking down of the nervous system.

We do not desire to unnecessarily alarm anyone, but to sound a word of warning.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, has shooting pains through it, it is time to stop and think.

To all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N. B., writes: "I had awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At the present time my sister is using them for nervousness and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A signal officer watching the incident said he favored boarding evertime. The tramp was no doubt all right and her identity seemed to be satisfactorily established, but somewhere in these waters there was probably a ship that was mothering a German submarine—especially in oil—and for his part he would take nothing for granted. On the New York station where he had been for a time, there was too much consideration for the feelings of the neutrals. The Admiralty had not been disposed to make more trouble than was absolutely necessary because of American aversion to the exercise of the right of search. Now that there was a possibility of the United States coming in Britain should do everything possible to tighten the blockade.

DRILL GOES ON DAILY.

For another day after the tramp passed the ship's routine remained much the same. Exercise and drill on crowded decks is not very fascinating as a spectacle for the home civilian whose point of vantage is a stateroom window, and whose ears are filled with shouts of "Hans Downs, Abaht Turn, Double," and other words of command mingled with the noise made by hundreds of men manoeuvring along a narrow strip on the deck. The troops get a lot of fun out of the proceedings when the vessel rolls and are undoubtedly kept in much better condition than would be possible were drill and exercise suspended.

Now that we are in the submarine zone ther are new elements of interest. The weather is no longer a topic of idle conjecture. For the first time in my sea going I find sailors who are longing for fog. Fog is no friend of the submarine. The other afternoon mist came down that appeared to shut out everything beyond half a mile. "Better than three escorts," declared a sailor with a sweep of his arm out toward the bank of mist which relatively dense near the water was noticeably thinner fifty feet up. The submarine is practically blind in weather of that sort. The periscope is useless in piercing the heavy mist near the surface while if the undersea boat ventures up, its chance of being seen and hit by a watchful gunner is much greater than its chance of seeing the passing ship.

PERILS OF THE SAILORS.

The sailors and ships officers are greatly interested in the submarine problem. Britain's merchant seamen are not financially protected as her soldiers and naval seamen are against this added peril of the deep. If they are killed by the explosion of a torpedo or drowned as the result of the torpedoing of their ship, there is no pension for their families from the national treasury, and in rare instances only from any other source. The owners of merchant ships do not assume responsibility for the "acts of God" or the doings of the "King's enemies." The seaman must insure himself. Even his clothes constitute an insurance risk. If he pays two shillings on his outfit the insurance company will pay him five pounds when the Hun sends his ship under and leaves him on the ocean plus a lifebelt and minus his togs. It is a grievance of the merchant seamen and officers that they are forced to run extra risks in the submarine zone without any hope of compensation for their families from the state, but they face the situation without flinching and do their best to escape the snares of the enemy.

To-day the game of Follow my Leader is no longer a monotonous procession in a straight line. The vessels zig-zag in all sorts of unexpected ways. At one moment the ship ahead will be some distance off on the port bow. A little later she will be far away on the starboard. Speed has been materially increased. The reason for coal economy in the early part of the voyage is now apparent—every ounce of steam is to be used in making a fast finish through the danger zone. The boats are all ready for instant use, and one has been lowered to the level of the promenade deck and lashed into position there for instructional purposes.

Once more the matter-of-factness of the proceeding strikes the observer as the outstanding feature. These men—whose names appear on no muster-roll and who will never have any war record, go about their business of preparing for possible disaster with as little concern as the cook in his galley shows in the preparation of dinner. The perils of the deep are manifold, and ever present. The submarine zone is but another. Between washing decks and painting ship and getting out the boats in case that Hans shows up—the poor sailor's work is never done. But it is always being done, and that is what counts to-day as it has counted down through the centuries in the history of the Islanders.

The coast of Ireland is off our bow, destroyers are frisking around us, the escort has bid us good-bye. Once more a substantial contingent of Canadian troops has come through the danger zone unscathed.

CATTLE MARKET.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts 36 cars with 550 cattle, 165 calves, 406 hogs, and 75 sheep and lambs.

Trade was slow. A few lots of fancy Easted cattle sold at high prices, but the average for all classes of cattle is ten to fifteen cents lower than last week. The run was light yesterday, but a few loads were still left over unsold. It is likely that prices paid in the country in some cases were higher than the present conditions of the market warrant. Packers are pretty well supplied with cattle for the Easter trade, and the demand for anything else is not at the moment particularly brisk. While prices are still high, conditions are such as to warrant considerable caution in buying in the country.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs steady.

AUSTRALIA'S NEW LOAN

Fourth Offering Since War Began is Largely Oversubscribed.

MELBOURNE, Australia, March 26. —The fourth and latest Commonwealth war loans of $90,000,000, with interest at 4 1-2 per cent., and repayment in 1925, was oversubscribed to the extent of at least $1,200,000. It is the opinion of financiers and Government officials that the final figures will be about $100,000,000. This would bring the total of Australia's war loans up to $394,000,000.

The fourth war loan was liberally supported by banks, insurance companies and individuals. It was aided by a well-organized scheme of newspaper publicity.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S ONE-PIECE DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

As if to compensate for any hardships inflicted years ago, Fashion to-day is really generous in her treatment of styles for young girls. So, if you would have your girl happy, you will make her dress on the same loose lines and with the straight line effect that Madame Mode has advised for yourself.

The model illustrated shows the exact style requirements in a frock for a miss of from 6 to 14 years of age. It is cut in one piece with the bodice and skirt section plaited and joined to deep yokes. The point collar of contrasting goods is just right style for a bow tie at front; the full length sleeve is cuffed to match. A belt with its ends tacked under the first plait in each front is ornamental as well as necessary to hold the side fulness and its arrangement marks the straight line front. Touches of embroidery always do wonders when one selects a woollen or silk weave for such dress, but braid may be employed to advantage.

Linen, poncee, poplin, gabardine, gingham and such materials are also to be considered—choice being according to whether the frock will be for school or for better wear. For good looks and comfort a better design could not be found.

The dress pattern No. 8,171 cuts in sizes 6 to 14 years. To make in size 8 requires 2½ yards 36 inch material. ½ yard 36 inch contrasting goods.

To obtain the pattern send ... to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

716 ORDERS FOR LIQUOR.

One London Doctor's Record Since Sept. 16, 1916.

LONDON, Ont., March 28.— Four physicians of London and district were summoned to the Police Court yesterday to answer a charge of unlawfully giving prescriptions or orders for liquor in evasion of the Ontario Temperance Act. The names of the physicians are Dr. C. C. Ross Dr. D. G. MacNeill, Dr. F. F. Clegg, and Dr. A. MacLaren.

The charge against Dr. Ross was tried to-day, and judgment reserved. Evidence was given that the doctor had written 716 orders for bottles of liquor, which were supplied by the licensed vendor under the Act since Sept. 16, when the Act went into force.

The Crown Attorney contended that in twenty-five percent. of the doctors of the district had handed out as many there would have been no advantage of the Temperance Act. Dr. Ross declared on oath that in every case liquor was necessary for the health of his patients.

This is the first case of its kind every tried in the Province.

THE OLD GARDENER SAYS.

A common cause of poor results from vegetable gardening is too deep planting of the seeds. Germination will be much better in the spring when the plan of shallow planting is adopted. Later in the season, when the soil becomes warm, the seeds should be in deeper. With large seeds like peas and corn it is often advantageous to sow them in a little trench, filling it in as the plants grow until the ground is level.

Two British Torpedo Boats Have Been Sunk

One By Striking a Mine and Another By Collision With a Steamer

NUMBER OF VESSELS DESTROYED THIS MONTH GIVEN BY HIM AS 255.

LONDON, March 28.—Two British torpedo boat destroyers have been sunk, one by striking a mine and another after a collision with a steamer, it was officially announced last night.

The Admiralty statement reads:

"A British destroyer recently struck a mine in the Channel and sank. Four officers and 17 men were saved.

"Another of these vessels sank today after a collision with a steamer. One man was lost. There were no other casualties."

LORD BERESFORD'S CRITICISM

London, March 27.—In a debate in the House of Lords on the British blockade, Lord Beresford said that with longer days and calmer weather the losses would increase, and that the public ought to have the facts brought home to it. The number of vessels destroyed thus far this month was given by him as 255.

Lord Beresford expressed the opinion that captures of submarines by the British were not at all equivalent to the new submarines the Germans were launching. He believed the Germans had more men and more food than had been imagined in England. The Foreign Office, he said, had too much power over the navy to the detriment of the navy. The loss es of British, allied, and neutral vessels for February, he said, amounted to 281 vessels with an aggregate tonnage of more than 500,000

Figures given out in London on March 3 placed the amount of tonnage destroyed by German submarines in February at about 490,000. No mention was made at this time of ships destroyed by mines. The German Admiralty announced on March 16 that the aggregate gross tonnage of merchant ships destroyed through war measures of the central powers was 781,500. On the basis of the figures given by Lord Beresford in the House of Lords, and taking into account the lesser number of days in February, the indicated average daily loss of tonnage for this month is about 10 per cent. less than in February.

TRAINMAN HERO DECORATED

Humane Society Medal to D. H. Bulbit For Daring Rescue of Child.

BELLEVILLE, March 27. — To Trainman D. H. Bulbit, of the C.P.R., has come a very signal and well-merited honour. At Belleville Hospital, where he has been confined for the past three months, he was presented with the Humane Society medal by officials of the railway. The act for which he received this token was performed last June. While his train, a heavy C.P.R. freight, was speeding along near Lonsdale Station, a young child was perceived playing between the rails, all unconscious of its peril. It was too late to half the train, and young Bulbit, who was in the cab of the engine, seeing the danger climbed along the rail of the engine and descended to the pilot platform, and reaching down was just in time to grasp the child by its clothing and lift it to safety. Bulbit's home is in Trenton.

HOT WATER THE BEST LIVER AND BOWEL MEDICINE

Says Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast Washes Poisons From System.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a healthful means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

Insurance and Financial Review of March 1917 Has the Following to Say Of—

SCOTT & WALMSLEY, LIMITED

The underwriting firm of Scott and Walmsley, which is so well and favourably known throughout Canada for its sound business principles, and which has under its management The Queen City Fire Insurance Company; The Hand-in-Hand Fire Insurance Company; The Millers' & Manufacturers' Insurance Company, and the Fire Insurance Exchange Corporation, has had one of the best years in its experience.

During a particularly trying year, when many fire companies were well satisfied if they succeeded in breaking even, it had the happy experience of making a profit in the four companies under their management of over $84,000.00, and this after paying liberal dividends to shareholders and to policyholders in the mutual and stock companies.

Fire underwriting is always something of a gamble, but when one sees, year after year, a substantial profit made by the same underwriters, there is something more than an element of luck entering into it, and credit must be given to the men in charge, not only for sound business methods, but also for careful underwriting. Had the same care and attention been given to detail, in many of our Canadian fire insurance companies which have gone out of business, there would have been a different story to tell.

The shareholders of the companies under the management of Joseph Walmsley, Col. John D. Chipman and F. E. Dingle of Scott & Walmsley, Ltd., general agents of the four companies, are to be congratulated on having three such able men to look after their affairs.

MORE GAINS FOR THE FRENCH TROOPS

MAKE PROGRESS TO THE SOUTH OF COUC

Another Big French Encircling Movement Develops in West

French Troops Have Captured Important Positions in the Region of Leilly and Neuville and Made Progress North of the Ailette---America's Decision on Monday Depends Greatly on Tone of President's Message.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official Communique), March 28.—French troops captured important positions in the region of Leuilly and Neuville, and made further progress north of the Ailiette. The War Office reported heavy artillery duel in progress in the region east of the lower forest of Coucy.

"All day yesterday and during the night," the statement said, "heavy guns on both sides raged in the region of Butte De Mesnil and Maisons De Champagne. The night was quiet between the Oise and the Somme, and south of the Oise."

Leuilly and Neuville Sous Margival both lie to the south of the Forest of St. Gobain. The progress reported here indicates the possibility of another French encircling movement. Heretofore fighting has been reported from the north of the forest. Both towns mentioned to-day are southeast of Coucy Le Chateau, and on the main road from Coucy to Soissons.

(By Robert J. Bender, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, March 28.—President Wilson will have to be positive, definite and specific in detail if he gets what he wants from Congress. This is the impression to-day "on the Hill." A vast majority of the new Congress are here ready for the Monday opening. They say that if President Wilson shows any inclination in his coming message "to be general or timidly suggestive" of what he wants, a wide difference of opinion will result and perhaps disastrous delay in real progress. There is evidence that some western members brought a light cooling of the war spirit with them. Certain representatives and some senators still maintain that "a majority of the people don't want war." They are ready, however, to do the President's bidding if he makes a strong statement.

LONDON, England, March 28.—Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in discussing financial aspects of the war with a United Press correspondent, said: "If it becomes solely a question of staying power, financial and industrial staying power, the Allies' victory is certain, we have the resources. "America's resources are greater than those of any of the allies, but it is outside the province of a member of the English Government to discuss America's possible action. We have steadily refrained from doing so, but if it becomes a question of staying power, it is obvious American resources could make all the difference in the world."

LONDON, March 28.—"Queries concerning" a Cunard liner reported recently sunk, "the number of casualties, and whether the ship was mined or torpedoed," were asked of the Government by the Irish Nationalist Ginnelt in the House of Commons to-day. Secretary to the Admiralty McNamara replied that such information "was not in the public interest," and refused to disclose whether any inquiry was to be instituted.

NEW YORK, March 28.—According to reports received here Britain has taken over between forty and fifty Dutch ships in British ports, under agreement with the Dutch Government, and is now negotiating with Sweden for two hundred thousand tons of Swedish shipping now detained in British ports.

NEW YORK, March 28.—An army of 150,000 men, the National Guard of the United States, is on its toes awaiting the summons. They are fit and ready. As a unit the National Guard is better fitted for actual war service than at any time since the volunteers were mustered out after the Civil War.

MADRID, March 28.—At the request of Chairman Herbert Hoover, the Commission for Relief in Belgium, the Spanish Government is transmitting to Germany a formal protest against the sinking of Belgian relief ships in Germany's submarine warfare. An announcement to this effect was authorized here to-day.

BERLIN, March 28.—Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg may decide to grant electoral reforms in Germany looking toward increased democracy in the Empire before the end of the war, according to a significant hint contained in the Cologne Gazette to-day.

PETROGRAD, March 28.—The menace of a German drive in Russia is serving to accelerate tremendously the reorganization of Democratic Russia. The greatest energy was apparent to-day at the War Office. Extraordinary efforts have been made to apprise troops at the front with exaction under which Russia slipped from the bond of autocracy into democracy, as well as with the Provisional Government's plan for the future. The Ministry of the Interior is bending every effort to speed up to a maximum the output of munitions and supply factories, and other Government agencies are centred on the rapid transportation of these supplies to the front.

BIG PROGRAMME AT ARMOURIES ON FRIDAY

The smoker in the Armouries on Friday night under the auspices of the 247th Battalion promises to provide a very interesting programme. The 247th have been fortunate in securing the services of Gallagher and Bull, crack featherweighs of the Riverside Club, Toronto, who will provide the feature of the evening in a six-round bout which will be refereed by Sergt.-Major Turley of the Great War Veterans, Toronto. Sergt. Giorns and Bandsman Dallin will box for the 126th-pound championship of the 247th, and the right to compete in the Canadian Military Chimpionships. There will be blind-fold boxing, a bout between two young hopefuls "Kid" Coat and "Kid" Pants, and other entertaining features. The Band of the 247th Battalion will provide music.

St. James' Church Choir Concert

Last evening a concert was given by the choir of St. James' Methodist church, assisted by Miss Telgmann, violinist, Mr. E. Jones of George street Methodist choir, and Miss Hill, elocutionist. The major portion of the programme was provided by the choir.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Mrs. Sarah A. Page, who passed away at Bellville, March 30th, 1916:

There is a spot not far away,
Where our dear loved one sleeps,
Who seems alive but yesterday,
So fresh her memory keeps.
The flowers we lay upon her grave
May wither and decay,
But our love for her who sleeps in death
Will never fade away.

712 PRESCRIPTIONS FOR QTS. OF LIQUOR BY LONDON DOCTOR

One Medical Man Who Has Been Busy Since the Temperance Act Came into Force—London the Only Bad Centre in This Line

SO STATES CHAIRMAN

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 28.— London is the only centre of which we have knowledge that there has been flagrant violations of the Temperance Act by medical practitioners, said Chairman Flavelle of the Ontario License Board this morning. Chairman Flavelle told of the prosecution of a London doctor, who since September last, had given 712 prescriptions of one quart of liquor each.

Struck On the Mouth With Milk Bottle Lost Three Teeth

Joseph Rongo was remanded in police court this morning on a charge of assaulting Silvio Belladonno. Silvio is or was a boarder at the Rongo house, and from his story everything was harmonious until last night when coming home from the theatre with strains of "O Promise Me" and "Brown October Ale" still possessing him he was suddenly struck across the mouth with a milk bottle by Rongo. The blow broke three teeth and opened a wound that required six stitches to close it. The complainant stated that he gave no cause for the assault. He had entered the house and was passing into his room when he heard Rongo apparently wrangling with his wife. When the door opened Silvio asked what the difficulty was and as a response received the blow with the milk bottle. He intimated a belief that more than milk excited Rongo.

MOTOR CYCLISTS NEED EIGHT MEN AND ARE RECRUITING HERE

The motor cyclists' corps now organizing at Kingston has reached a strength of 22 men and require only eight more to bring it up to strength. Sergeants Barber and Lloyd are in the city for a week on a recruiting trip and have taken rooms at the Y.M.C.A. where they will be glad to explain the work of the corps to prospective recruits. The Motor Cyclists rank next to the aviation corps and are a decidedly attractive branch of the service. It is a compact group of good fellows and should appeal to a number from Peterborough.

The War Veterans received a cheque from Lt.-Col. Ackerman of $25 towards the funds of the Association, and his generosity will be officially acknowledged. Lt.-Col. Ackerman has taken a keen interest in the affairs of the Club and paid the rent of the former club rooms in the Old Opera House Block.

London, March 27.—One or two exaggerated assertions as to the number of Americans serving in the Canadian Expeditionary Force have appeared in newspapers or otherwise here lately. One writer stated they number at 50,000. In answer to enquiries, the Canadian militry authorities have issued an official statement, which is published in the Sunday Times, declaring the total of Americans to 31st December, 1916, was 7,373, including all American born, whether direct from the States or citizens of Canada for years.

Colonel Bruce, formerly special inspector of the Canadians, is shortly going to France as a consulting surgeon of the British Army.

OTTAWA, March 28.— Interviewed this morning with regard to the Cabinet statement of J. L. MacPherson, British under secretary for war, to the effect that wet canteens had been introduced into Canadian camps in England at the instigation of the Canadian authorities, F. B. McCurdy, parliamentary under secretary of militia, stated that light beer had been permitted in Canadian camps to the best of his knowledge, since the days of Alderson's command of the Canadian troops.

TORONTO, March 28.—A decision by railway officials, yesterday, evidently foreshadows the announcement of a Dominion head tax on Canadians crossing the United States border. The tax would appear to be aimed at slackers. The railways propose to collect $8.00 a head with a ticket for a trip to the United States. What arrangement with the Government has been made is not known.

NEW YORK, March 27.—A news despatch was published here yesterday afternoon as follows:

A British port, March 26. — Last night, according to a rumour credited by passengers ahead of the American liner St. Louis fired a number of shots, and when the liner neared the spot a film of oil was visible on the water, and a film of oil generally means a sunken submarine.

Officers of the St. Louis declared the rumour was "only ocean talk" but they admitted receiving a wireless despatch indicating they had a lucky escape in view of recent submarine attacks made on the same route.

TORONTO, Ont., March 28.—The Municipal Committee of the Legislature to-day passed an amendment to the Municipal Act giving all municipalities the power to assess up to 25 mills on the dollar irrespective of school and war taxes. The previous maximum was 20 mills.

The Municipal Committee of the Legislature to-day finally adopted the clause in the Motor Vehicle Act providing that no persons shall drive motor vehicles without a drivers' permit in addition to the present auto license. This will enable a record of every person driving a motor in Ontario to be kept, and his permit cancelled when he deserves it. Under the previous conditions there was no way of keeping reckless drivers out of cars unless they were kept imprisoned.

...ny of the processes now in use for refining nickel could be successfully worked in Ontario, and conditions and facilities are at least as good in this province as in any other part of Canada.

"In view of the fact that practically no chemicals are required, that there is a much more complete saving of the precious metals, especially platinum and palladium, and that electric power is cheap and abundant, the most satisfactory method of refining in Ontario will be the electrolytic.

"The refining of nickel in Ontario will not only benefit the nickel industry, but will promote the welfare of existing branches of the chemical and metallurgical industries, and lead to the introduction of others."

This is eminently satisfactory information, even if somewhat superfluous, in that it has been anticipated by action based on the fact of the feasibility of home refinement, a fact that interested parties disputed. There is certainty of the establishment of two nickel refining plants in Ontario. One is now being constructed by the International Nickel Company of Canada, Limited, (a branch of the New Jersey concern), at Port Colborne. The company has obtained a site of 400 acres on which 2,000 men are now at work, and is erecting a plant whose initial output will be on the basis of 15,000,000 lbs. of nickel per annum, provision being made for doubling or quadrupling this capacity. The matte to be refined here will come from the smelters of the Canadian Copper Company at Copper Cliff, for the treatment of which there will be required bituminous coal, coke, fuel, oil, nitre-cake, and other chemicals and materials, estimated at 100,000 tons annually. The plant is expected to be in operation and turning out refined nickel in the autumn of the present year. The second refinery is that of the British-America Nickel Corporation, Limited, a company controlled and largely financed by the British Government, which has purchased the large Murray Mine, the Whistle, and other deposits, in the Sudbury district. This refinery will probably be erected at the Murray Mine, which is about three miles from Sudbury. The refining process employed will be the electrolytic, otherwise known as the Hybinette process, from the name of the inventor, who uses it in the Norwegian works. This plant will have a capacity at the beginning of 5,000 tons of nickel per annum.

The feasibility of refining our ores in Canada successfully, and the fact that this will be done to a limited extent is satisfactory, but it opens up another more vital point of national policy. That is the policy of requiring the refinement of all our nickel ores, if not in Ontario, at any rate in the country somewhere. The commission is informed that the Provincial Legislature has not power to prohibit exports or to impose an export tax That is a matter easily got over. The Dominion Government has power in the premises; and should not hesitate to exercise it. The matter of nickel control is not only a matter of provincial and dominion, but imperial interest. Beyond that consideration, compulsory home refinement, or its equivalent in effect—prohibition of export of raw material, matte—involves a question of important home policy—and should be a feature of a national policy legislatively adopted, or universally assented to in practice —that of providing for the home manufacture or refinement of all our national resources and products, so that this country should have the fullest benefit of the possession and exploitation and manufacture at home of all our products and resources. The fullest home development of our resources—keeping at home all the profit from the employment of labour and capital, is both a good national policy in itself but the only adequate means of adequately realising upon the potential value of our unbounded resources, of forest and mine especially.

Ontario seems to have been especially favoured in the matter of exclusive possession of immense deposits of nickel. The possibilities of home refinement, as to output and profit of home refinement, are virtually unlimited, in view of the fact that the estimated content of the Sudbury nickel mines is 150 million tons.

CANADA FIRST.

Far-away fields look green—but on closer scrutiny the deception of distance stands revealed. We are influenced by this proverbial truth in our attitude towards many things. Some of us seem to think that if we get an article in Toronto or Montreal there is some sort of magic in the name of the city, when as a matter of fact an article of the same kind can be got in Peterborough, at as reasonable a figure and of as good quality, not to speak of the merit of being loyal to our own home town. A lady from a neighbouring village went to Toronto from Peterborough to procure a certain article. She paid railway fare two ways and was disappointed. She returned to Peterborough, and procured in a local shop the same kind of article—it was an article of dress, we may safely wager—at a lesser price and with a greater deal of satisfaction.

To many Canadians have come to think the same about other things. They mistakenly think that what comes from abroad must necessarily be better than that procured, or produced, at home. In deference to this idea, timber imported at large figures, has been used for building purposes on the border of our own timberland. That home-grown, home-cut and home-manufactured timber and lumber could have been and can be used with equally good, if not better, results, has been demonstrated. The Forest Products Department of the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior, have been thoroughly investigating the question of the suitability of Canadian woods for structural purposes; and the result is that many of these are found superior to those imported, and just as cheap, or cheaper.

This is an important matter of principle and practice for Canadians to consider. The future of Canada, in the material sense, depends upon the development of all our resources, and patriotic preference in home use is a direct stimulus to development. Not only is this consideration something to be taken into account in the practice of every-day patriotism, but it is a question of national increase of wealth of all kinds.

The Examiner has always taken strong grounds as to the desirability and duty of Canada taking steps to get the full benefit of the development of her own resources—at home. That means the manufacture at home, of everything, that can be so treated, to its ultimate, or approximately ultimate commercial form. It is obvious that our national resources, so treated will gain immensely in actual commercial value, and by the added value of the involved processes in the form of the employment of labour and capital — the home distribution of wealth, and all the advantages that must come to a country with intensive industrial operations of a wide range of character.

We shall never be upon the high road to making the most of ourselves and our resources till we act upon a policy of home development and manufacture at home of our resources. We shall only then be practicing the patriotism that counts. We can make a beginning by acting upon the results of the investigation referred to by preferring the use of our own timber and lumber for domestic construction, when, as has been proved, it is superior to imported timber or lumber. In using our own woods for building and construction purposes we shall not only be rearing the structure concerned but we shall be building up the prosperity of the community upon a sound foundation of self help and self development.

THE TIDAL WAVE OF EUROPEAN DEMOCRACY

The Vorwaerts, of Berlin, says apropos of the Russian revolution: "It will be a great and dangerous mistake if equal suffrage is not introduced into Prussia while the war is actually going on." It will be a great mistake if equal suffrage and real political power is not conferred upon the people not only of Prussia but of all sovereign States of Germany and when this is done, if not before, the war will stop. The constitution of the German Empire is the greatest fake among all the governmental systems in existence. While pretending to protect the autonomy of all component States of the Empire, the constitution really subordinates them all to Prussia—in imperial affairs, absolutely. The King of Prussia, who is incidentally German Emperor (not Emperor of Germany), can declare Germany at defensive war whenever he pleases and it is for him to decide when a war will be defensive. That is why His Imperial Majesty is so anxious to show that Serbia, or England, or Russia, or France was the aggressive in the present war.

Theoretically the State rights are guaranteed by the Bundesrath, the members of which are nominated each session by the State Governments. But of the fifty-eight members of the Upper House, Prussia has seventeen and the kingdoms of Bavaria, Saxony and Wurtemberg four; thus giving the four kingdoms a clean majority of twenty-seven in a House of fifty-eight. Baden has three members, Hesse three, Mecklenberg, Schwerin and Brunswick, two each; and the other seventeen only one each; the Reichland of Alsace Lorraine has no representation at all.

To guard against the possibility of either of the four kindoms resisting the sovereign will of Prussia, the Prime Minister of Prussia is always the Imperial German Chancellor who is also the presiding officer of the Bundesrath and as the representative of the Kaiser, to whom alone he is responsible, has an absolute veto upon all legislation. The Bundesrath sits in camera and when the Chancellor wants to speak to the public he does it in the Lower House, the Reichstag.

The Reichstag nominally represents the people, but practically its only power is to throw out a money bill and if it throws out any Government bill it is liable and likely to be itself thrown out by the Chancellor. Of the 397 members of the Reichstag no less than 236 are Prussians. One of the minor jokes of the German Federal Constitution is that Alsace Lorraine is allowed to have four "representatives" in the Reichstag, who are appointed by the Imperial Lieutenant and are not allowed to vote.

The democratisation of Germany would leave very little of the Imperils German Constitution.

HERE ARE SOME CURIOUS MISNOMERS

Paraphrasing Shakespeare's often quoted question, "What's in a name?" the question of "What's not in a name?" has been answered in the brief of a recent appeal from a decision of the United States Examiner of Trade Marks. This particular case hinged upon whether or not a word with a well defined meaning of its own can be divorced from that meaning and used as a more or less suggestive part of a phrase in some other connection. It was claimed that this could be done, and in support of this contention attention was called to the following well known cases of apparent misnomers:

"There is no cream in cream of tartar, in cold cream or in chocolate creams, no milk in magnesia, in milkweed or in the cocoanut. These are all as remote from the cow as the cowslip.

"There is no grape in grapefruit or bread in breadfruit. A pineapple is neither pine nor apple; a prickly pear is not a pear; an alligator pear is neither a pear nor an alligator, and a sugar plum is not a plum.

"Apple butter is not butter. All the butter is taken out of buttermilk, and there is none in butter-nuts or in butter cups, and the flies in the creamery are not butterflies.

"Peanuts are not peas, and it is doubtful if they are nuts. Sailors wear pea jackets—peas do not, they have peacods, which by the way, are not fish.

"Monkey wrenches are neither made by nor of monkeys, and otter of roses is not extracted from the otter. Poles are not made from polecats nor badges from the badger.

"A lathe chuck is a contrivance fixed to the mandrel to hold the wood —it is not a woodchuck. A woodchuck is not a groundhog which is not a hog and is not ground—groundhog is sausage. And a lathe mandrel is not a monkey, though a mandril is.

"Angel food is eaten by everybody. There are no sponges in sponge cake, and the eating of ladyfingers does not indicate cannibalism.

"Chickenpox has nothing to do with chickens, neither has an eggplant—nor a cocktail.

"A horse chestnut is as far removed from horses as a sawhorse, clothes-horse or a horseradish. A horse chestnut is a nut, so is the thing that goes with a bolt and so is a doughnut.

"Sweetbreads are not sweet and are not bread.

"Catgut is no more feline than pussywillows or cattails and the firedogs and andirons are made frequently of brass.

"Whiffletrees, boot-trees, halltrees, and family trees are as out of place in the woods as a railway frog, a fish-plate, a fish story, a mackerel sky or a crabapple in the water."

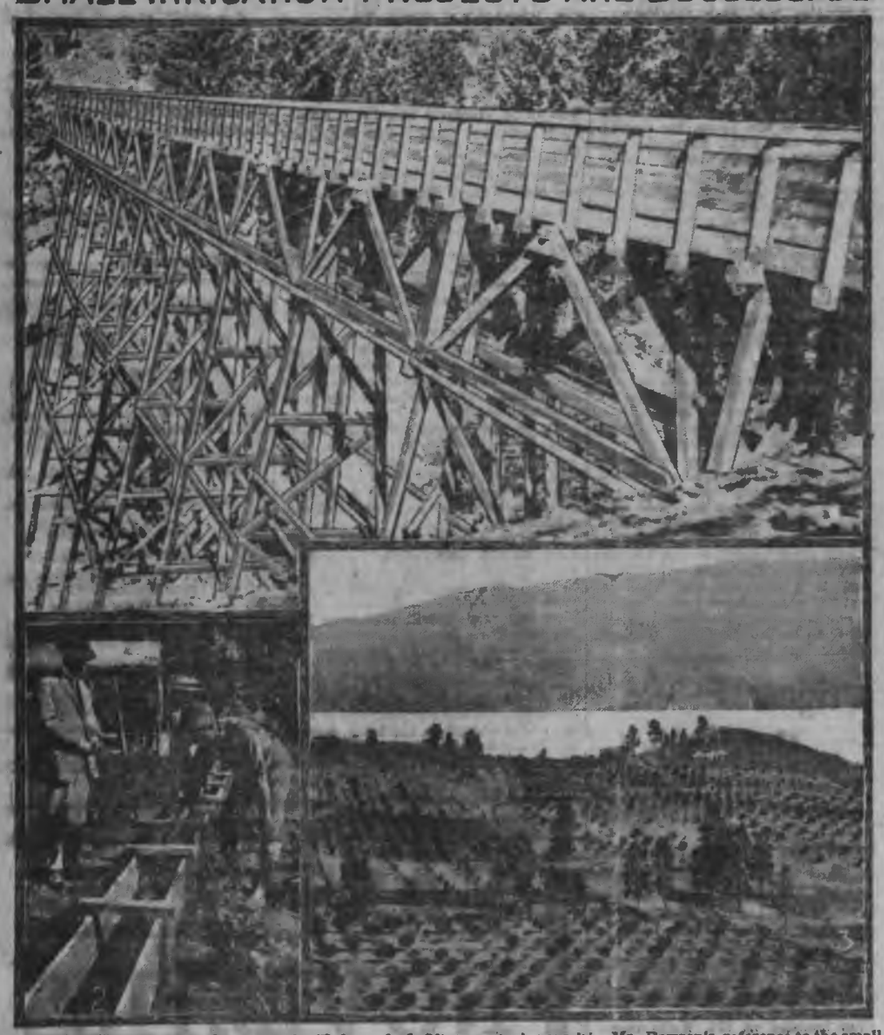
SMALL IRRIGATION PROJECTS ARE SUCCESSFUL



(1) Irrigation flume near Kamloops, B.C.
(2) Irrigating Small Farms.
(3) Small Irrigated Farm.

SPEAKING before the annual convention of the Western Canada Irrigation Association at Kamloops, B.C., A. S. Dawson, chief engineer of the Department of Natural Resources of the Canadian Pacific Railway, expressed the faith that is in him in the irrigation projects for which Western Canada is becoming famous. Although Mr. Dawson has been connected mainly with the big irrigation enterprise of the C. P. R. in Southern Alberta, he does not overlook the advantages of small projects operated by a community of farmers, or even by an individual.

"I have had fifteen years' experience on what are the largest irrigation projects in Canada," said Mr. Dawson, "but I am willing to admit that the small projects such as you have in the immediate vicinity of Kamloops are quite often more interesting and worthy of fuller consideration than are the larger projects. These schemes, though small, should be considered as one of your greatest assets.

"The benefits of irrigation show their results in better farms; improved living conditions; improved social conditions and better citizenship. If conducted along proper lines it improves agriculture, saves the soil, inculcates industry, produces prosperity and should provide for posterity."

Mr. Dawson's reference to the small irrigation schemes is of particular interest to the farmers of Western Canada, where there are hundreds—literally thousands—of creeks and streams which could be used in a small way for irrigation purposes. According to the opinion of an officer of the Western Canada Irrigation Association the day is coming when irrigation in Western Canada will be limited only by the amount of water available. The increasing interest in irrigation is indicated by the fact that the annual meeting of the association in 1917 will be held in Saskatchewan for the first time. In the past it has always been held in Alberta or British Columbia, but this year the association will meet at Maple Creek, Saskatchewan.

HORROR IN POLAND UNDER HINDENBURG

Drunken Egotist's Reign of Terror Described by an Unhappy Eyewitness —Poland's Martyrdom Revealed

Mme. Turczynowics, who was Laura Blackwell of New York, is the wife of a Pole who is serving in the Russian army as Inspector-in-Chief of the Sanitary Engineers, and through nearly the whole of the first fourteen months of the war she lived with her three little children in their home in Poland, near the borders of East Prussia. Through her town the tide of war swayed back and forth, finally leaving the German army in full control. In her house almost constantly German officers were quartered, Hindenburg himself living under her roof for a time, and she was compelled to wait upon them while her children lay almost dying of typhus, and to give them the food needed by the little ones as they began to recover.

Slavery in Poland

Later she escaped and told her experiences in a book. The author had to interpose her own body to prevent the flogging of her six-year-old son, just recovered from typhus, by a German officer because the child would not say that the Russians were beaten. From her windows she saw the endless procession on the road to East Prussia, which passed her house, of wagons carrying away to that country the goods, the utensils, the household treasures, the crops, the seed grain of the Poles, and the weeping companies of men and women who were being sent to East Prussia as laborers. For Germany's deportation and enslavement of the civilian population did not begin with Belgium. It had first been tried upon Poland.

Cruelty and Deceit

Heartrending is her account of the treatment of the Russian prisoners of war, whose unbelievable miseries she was constantly trying to alleviate, thereby winning the suspicion and ill-feeling of the German authorities. When it was known that some attaches from neutral countries were to inspect the prisoners' hospitals there was a sudden scrubbing and overhauling of that in the author's town.

Of Hindenburg, who used her house as headquarters for a little while and whom she had to serve at table, she says: "He drank copiously, in fact, I have never seen such a capacity for schnapps, ate tremendously, and the only topic of conversation was what he had done or was about to do."

LETTER FROM A GERMAN

Bitter Renunciation of Their Superior Officers

The following is an extract from a German soldier's letter: "The officers we have up to the rank of captain are mostly boys who have no idea of anything. They draw high pay and have food and drink in abundance. We, on the other hand, live miserably. We do not receive by a long way what we should. One can hardly help being ashamed of being a German. Dear Grete, if I should happen not to return, then think how I have written to you about it all, that the gang has caused us to be killed for fun and for sport. It is very different from the English.

"The officers here live in great luxury. In the line the officers live in bomb-proof dug-outs. We, on the other hand, have filthy, wet, tumbledown holes. The officers and others have it in their hands to take away our food, which we ought to have, but do not get. I have heard it only too often from non-commissioned officers and old soldiers that if we had better leadership we should often have been able to do something without heavy losses, but we are generally too late or do it in the wrong way and with heavy loss. If the young officers did not swank so much and treated the men like human beings we should be more content and more would be accomplished; but we hate our officers. We are bound to, for what miserable grub we get, while those swine live on the fat of the land! Here in Tenbrielen, where the airmen throw bombs and where we shall get artillery fire very shortly, there is a dug-out for the officers, but none for the men. In this wholesale murder we get to know completely how much we are under the knout."

DANCER AS AVIATOR

Vernon Castle Won French Cross With British Army

Lieutenant Vernon C. Blythe, of the Royal Flying Corps, received the Croix de Guerre for valorous action on the Western front. Lest a world satiated with daring deeds and military crosses should yawn and refuse to read past the first paragraph, let it be added at once that Mrs. Vernon Castle made this announcement. Lieutenant Blythe is known in a land that paid more attention to dancing than to aeroplanes as Vernon Castle. According to his wife, the little cross on his breast means that he has brought to earth two German air fighters.

"Vernon had three weeks' leave in London," Mrs. Castle said. "We were together all the time, but we didn't dance. Officers are not allowed to dance in England any more. He looked well and happy."

German Tank "Inventor"

One time German papers were claiming the original idea of the tanks, an Amsterdam paper writes, for a certain Herr Gobel and suggesting that the British tanks were merely a poor plagiarism of his invention. It is interesting in this connection to learn from the Cologne People's Gazette (Volkszeitung) that Herr Gobel had to fight hard to get his invention used, and it appeals for speedy help for him so that his invention may help to hasten the end of the war.

Pool Shipbuilding Labor

Newcastle engineers and shipbuilders agreed to pool labor on the Tyne in order to assist the production of merchant shipping.

COME-OUT IN 1538

Old Time Methods Left no Hopes For Slackers

An extract from a London paper says: "Cuthbert," in the comparative safety of his fireside dug-out, would have had little opportunity of evading service had he lived a few hundred years ago. Major W. W. Grantham, barrister and Military Representative at the East Sussex Appeal Tribunal, has come across the following ancient document, and suggests that the adoption of paragraph 3 might, in some places, bring "to the front" some who say they are "lacking ability, strength and health":

"A Letter Patent. King Henry VIII. to the Earl of Hertford and Viscount Lysle, Deputy of our Town and Castle of Calais and others: Requiring the Town and Castle of Calais 'with the fortresses adjoining' to be furnished with able men, well harnessed, and armed for the defence of the same.

"All men to be able of strength, well arrayed, and furnished with sufficient horses, harness, and weapons.

"All lacking ability, strength, or health are to be marked, and their names set down in a book.

"Given under our Privy Seal at our Palace of Westminster II., March, 30th year of our reign (1538). Thomas Cromwell."

British Strong Man

A two hundred pound German shell carried by a British officer, the strong man of his regiment.

Back to the Land

Sir Douglas Haig once asked the army commanders in France to make inquiries in certain regiments as to whether any of their men contemplate settling on the land when their soldiering is over; and out of 97,000 men to whom the question was put, 17,000 answered in the affirmative. There will be land in plenty for them all. Australia alone is prepared to spend $100,000,000 on this object, and Canada and South Africa are equally ready to welcome the boys; while in England 8,000 acres of Crown lands have already been set apart for this purpose.

Few College Men Are Joining Majors

BIG LEAGUES NOT ENTICING AS MANY RAH-RAH-RAH STARS AS IN PAST YEARS.

SISLER IN THE LIMELIGHT. FORMER MICHIGAN ALL ROUND ATHLETE DAZZLED FANDOM FROM START.

Is professional baseball losing its attraction for college men or are the colleges and universities no longer turning out the talent they did about ten years ago? While there still remain an abundance of star players in the big league ranks who first won their baseball spurs on varsity nines, it is also true that in recent years a large number of prominent big league collegians have passed in their uniforms, and but few college men are being obtained to fill their places. The general impression is that professional baseball is losing its attraction for collegians.

During the last two seasons only one new college phenom made good from the jump and dazzled big league fandom. However, he already has proved to be worth half a dozen ordinary players. The young man is George Sisler, the great all-round star of the St. Louis Browns, and formerly of Michigan. Sisler already has caused Barney Dreyfuss more suffering than all the baseball wars put together.

During these two years three other college players came into their own, Dovey Robertson of the Giants, Ernie Shore of the Red Sox and Walter Pipp of the Yankees, but all three men have been in the big leagues off and on since 1912. Both Robertson and Shore are Dixie College boys, Davey being a product of A. and M., and Shore of Guildford College. They both came to the Giants as pitchers in 1912 and each Sunday were detailed with the Long Branch squad. They later were succeeded in 1913 by Ferdie Schupp and Rube Schauer, neither of whom has any alma mater.

EXODUS OF COLLEGIANS.

Shore pitched only one National League inning in 1912 and in that round the Braves thumped him for ten runs. McGraw saw Robertson's hitting possibilities in 1912. Davey at first under-studied for Merkle at first base. Later he shifted to the outfield. Pipp first won fame with Catholic University; Detroit farmed him to Scranton in 1913 and Rochester in 1914. He was assigned to the Yankees in 1915.

Since 1914 there has been quite an exodus of college men from the big league ranks. Christy Mathewson, unquestionably the greatest college player the game ever produced, retired from active pitching duty last season. For years Matty made Bucknell famous in the big leagues. Weldon Wyckoff, formerly of the Athletics, and now with the Boston Red Sox, also a pitcher, is making a rather poor job of filling the shoes Matty wore as Bucknell's ambassador to the big leagues.

Next to Mathewson the greatest college righthander, was the Indian, Chief Albert Bender, whom Connie Mack called the "greatest world's series pitcher in baseball history." Bender, who attended Dickinson, after leaving the Carlisle Indian School, was unconditionally released by the Phillies a few weeks ago. Bender's former famous collegian pitching teammates, Eddie Plank of Gettysburg and Jack Coombs of Colby, still are in active service as big leaguers, but another season or two will finish the pitching careers of these two stars, and what college pitchers are in sight to take their places? Ray Collins, formerly of Vermont, who retired last winter, is another college pitching star lost to baseball.

MEYERS ALMOST THROUGH.

Chief Meyers, a Dartmouth man, also is nearing the end of his big league rope. John Henry of Washington, an Amherst man, is in very bad with the powers that be in the American League and it will not take very much of a slump on John's part to bring about his retirement.

Two famous college third basemen and three college outfield stars passed out of big league review within the last two seasons. The third basemen are Eddie Grant of Harvard and Harry Lord of Bates, and the outfielders, Bird'e Cree, Penn State; Joe Birmingham, Cornell and Dan Moeller, De Pauw University.

Grant was one of the Crimson's leading baseball stars. After leading the International League in batting a great career was predicted for him. Eddie never rose to stardom but was a good reliable player until he retired after completing the 1915 season with the Giants. Lord while at the height of his career with the Red Sox in 1909 was the best third baseman in baseball, challenged only by Arthur Devlin, of the Giants, also a college man. However, when Devlin, a Georgetown product, started to slip, he went fast. Lord later went with Comiskey, and managed the Buffalo Federal League team in 1915. When the Feds left the field, Lord bought the Portland, Me., club.

CREE A GREAT PLAYER.

The fact that during the most of Cree's career the Yankees were hugging the bottom, prevented this player from getting the recognition due him. Around 1911 and 1912, Cree ranked with Cobb, Speaker and Jackson, hitting .348 in 1911 and .392 in 1912. During his last few years in the big league Birdie took on weight fast and the club bought up his long term contract a year ago. Birmingham, a crack outfielder for several years, was let out by Cleveland in 1915, after his failure as manager of that club, and Moeller, a big league veteran, was released by the same club early in the winter, after obtaining him in a deal last season.

Despite the losses the college boys have sustained in the last two years, they still can put a team in the field which could give any non-college team a tough rub. An all-star big league team of college men could line up as follows:

Sistel, Michigan (Browns), first base.
Collins, Columbia (White Sox), second base.
Barry, Holy Cross (Red Sox), shortstop.
Gardner, Vermont (Red Sox), third base.
Hooper, St. Mary's (Red Sox), left field.
Williams, Notre Dame (Cubs), centre field.
Robertson, N. C. A. & M., (Giants) right field.
Chase, Santa Clara (Reds), utility infield.
Pratt University of Alabama (Browns), utility infield.
Walker, University of Tennessee, (Red Sox), utility outfield.
O'Neil, Villanova (Indians), catcher.
Henry, Amherst (Senators), catcher.
Rudolph, Fordham (Braves), pitcher.
Plank, Gettysburg (Browns) pitcher.
Fisher, Middleburv (Yankees), pitcher.
Rixey, University of Virginia (Phillies), pitcher.
Faber, St. Joseph's (White Sox), pitcher.
Mayer, Georgia Tech (Phillies), pitcher.
Ruelbach, Notre Dame (Braves), pitcher.

GARDENING AND HEALTH.

Dr. John Dill Robertson indorses the gardening movement sweeping the cities and towns as not only a means of increasing the food supply but as an aid to health. Those who work in the gardens this summer will improve in health and store up energy for the vicissitudes of next winter's weather, lessening sickness and consequent interruption to employment.

GOOD ROADS CONGRESS AT OTTAWA WILL COVER WIDE RANGE

Comprehensive Consideration of Road Methods and Materials From the Important Standpoints of Climatic, Geologic, Traffic and Other Local Factors—Many Delegates Going.

The programme for the fourth annual Canadian and International Good Roads Congress, to be held at the Horticultural Building, Lansdowne Park, Ottawa, from April 10th to 14th, inclusive, will cover a wider and more practical range than at any of the three preceding successful congresses held under the auspices of the Dominion Good Roads Association.

The speaker and lecturers will represent more provinces and states than was the case in any of the previous programmes, and this will ensure a comprehensive consideration of road methods and materials from the important standpoints of climatic, geologic, traffic and other local factors. The policy has been adopted of making the paper and discussions as practical and non-technical as possible. The morning sessions will be devoted almost entirely to the consideration of rural road problems, with an avoidance of technical terms, while the afternoon sessions, though dealing largely with urban street methods, and involving technical descriptions to a certain extent, will be understandable by all the lay delegates.

The exhibition of road-making machinery will be the most complete yet assembled in Canada, ranging from the humble pick and shovel to the largest and most modern machines. Emphasis will be placed upon the labour saving possibilities of man-power at the present time and because of labour and war conditions.

The official representative of the Dominion Government has not yet been designated, but it is expected that the importance of the Good Roads movement will be recognized by the participation of one or more high personages. The Government of Quebec and Ontario will both be represented in force by cabinet ministers and officials. Hon. J. A. Tessier, Minister of Roads for Quebec, and Hon. Walter Mitchell, Provincial Treasurer, have both accepted invitations, and Mr. B. Michaud, Deputy Minister of Roads, and Road Engineers Henri, Fafard and Fraser will also take part in the proceedings. From Ontario are expected Hon. F. G. Macdiarmid, Minister of Public Works, and Hon. George S. Henry, the new Minister of Agriculture. Mr. W. A. McLean, Deputy Minister of Highways, ex-president of the American Road Builders' Association, and past president of the Dominion Good Roads Association, will supplement his address with an exhibition of slides, showing French road scenes. These will be doubly interesting, not only as illustrating France's road system, but also as showing localities over which fighting has occurred. Illnesses have prevented Mr. McLean's attendance at the last two congresses, and he will receive a warm welcome at the coming gathering.

The provincial road bodies will also have official delegates in attendance. These will include Mr. S. L. Squire, Honorary President of the Ontario Good Roads' Association; Mr. C. R. Wheelock, the new president of the same organization; Mr. Fred G. Pearson, president of the Nova Scotia Good Roads' Association.

Mr. Paul D. Sargent, chief engineer of the Maine Highways Commission, will treat of modern methods of constructing and maintaining gravel and macadam road, on which subject he is an authority. Col. W. D. Sohier, chairman of the Massachusetts Highways Commission, will deal with road surfaces from the viewpoint of traffic requirements, to which he has given much study. Mr. W. G. Yorston, road commissioner for Nova Scotia, will deliver an address; Mr. D. T. Black, city engineer of Welland, Ont., will give a paper on brick pavements; Geo. Howarth, chief engineer, Ontario Highways Dept., will read a paper on "Drainage and Foundations"; W. S. Huber, engineer Ontario Highways Dept., on "Modern Road Machinery"; W. H. Connell of Philadelphia on "Granite Pavements." W. Mel. Hunter of the city engineering Dept., Ottawa, will also lecture.

Prof. Blanchard of Columbia University, New York will describe the best and most economical methods of surface maintenance, with road oils; Mr. T. Harry Jones, city engineer of Brantford, Ont., will read a paper on concrete pavements for city and country roads; Mr. Thos. Adams, adviser to the Dominion Conservation Commission, will speak on roads in their relation to town planning; and Mr. R. B. Morley, Secretary of the Ontario Safety League, will tell of the work accomplished by that body. An important paper will be that by Mr. L. H. Reineck of the Geologic Survey, Dominion Department of Mines, who will take up the location of deposits of road materials throughout the country.

In all some eighteen papers will be found on the programme, while about sixty engineers and road builders of standing have been invited to lead in the ensuing discussions. Archbishop Gauthier and Bishop Roper of Ottawa have both been invited to attend the opening session.
